General Tribal Council meets for Annual Meeting

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The General Tribal Council (GTC) convened for the first time of 2011 on Monday, January 3 for the Annual Meeting at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center.

The meeting's agenda was quickly adopted with no changes and minutes from the July 5, 2010 and November 20, 2010 GTC meetings were approved.

The fiscal year 2010 Treasurer's Report was dictated by discussion about the lease agreement with Oakridge Plaza. The lease land is home to Wal-Mart and Festival Foods along with other businesses located just north of Mason Street in Green Bay.

The lease terms were revealed along with how the revenue generated from the agreement is utilized. The report also highlighted an improving balance sheet for the tribe but cautioned that fiscal responsibility on the tribe's part is vital. The report was accepted.

A second motion was presented by Oneida Business Committee (OBC) member Melinda Danforth directing the OBC to provide a detailed report to the GTC on the history and current negotiations of the lease. The motion was passed.

The GTC then heard the 2010 comprehensive annual financial audit by the accounting firm McGlandrey and Pullen. The report was accepted as no significant findings were unveiled during the audit.

The GTC set the dates for the 2011 tri-annual primary and election. This election will feature the newly implemented primary elections. The caucus will be held March 12, May 7 will be home to the primary election and the general election will take place on July 16.

An amendment to the vacation and personal days accumulation policy in the Personnel Policies and Procedures was tabled until all Oneida Tribal members who are employees receive a 10-day notice regarding the proposed changes.

The GTC then moved on to an amendment intended to strengthen Indian preference in hiring throughout the tribe. The amendment featured a tabled motion that accepted the amendments and a withdrawn motion adding tribal member descendents to the list of preferred candidates.

A lengthy discussion followed with what level of preference should be extended to a descendent and what qualified an individual to receive descendent status. The amendment was tabled for 60 days.

A motion by Madelyn Genskow directing the OBC to initiate the procedures set out in the Administrative Procedures Act to develop a comprehensive law addressing the leasing of the tribe's land to be adopted by the GTC and that the OBC must present this law to the GTC in one year or sooner so the GTC can then vote to approve or make changes failed by a simple hand vote.

The Oneida Annual Report and presentation was accepted with little discussion. The GTC will meet again on February 5 regarding the proposed Judiciary Law and Legislative Procedures Act.

Countdown to Hoyan rings in New Year

Services available for veterans with PTSD

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Nation has a long, proud military history that pre-dates the American Revolutionary War, but that history comes with a cost to some of the warriors who survived the battles. That cost is Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD).

Viet Nam War Veteran Ted Christjohn likened PTSD to an enemy waiting in ambush.

"That PTSD, it's a sneaky guy; you got to know how to combat him, but it's harder to combat this guy," he said.

According to the National Center for PTSD, the disorder can occur after experiencing a traumatic event, such as being shot at or seeing someone else get shot. Between 6 percent and 11 percent of the Afghanistan war veterans and between 12 percent and 20 percent of the Iraq war veterans will experience PTSD.

Symptoms can include re-experiencing the event, or flashbacks, difficulty sleeping, and attempting to avoid reminders of the trauma or numb emotions.

"PTSD, that's always going to be there and pops up at certain times, like you get around holidays, and you get certain smells sometimes, and noises," Christjohn explained of his own symptoms.

Oneida Nation Veterans Department Director Kerry Metoxen works with veterans to get them benefits and counseling.

"Our main focus is benefits and entitlements for veterans and their families," said Metoxen. "We have our own behavioral health staff that we can utilize, also, for natives or family members of our tribal members."

While PTSD is more actively treated now than in past wars, younger veterans have their own struggles to work through.

"Our Iraqi vets, we're getting them in right away, getting them counseling. Some of them guys, too, they're busy, they've got their lives; working, kids, married. Sometimes it is hard to get them guys in," said Metoxen.

Metoxen noted that the multiple deployments experienced by military members added its own level of stress.

"You figure you get out (of the service), get a job, get situated, he's got a family and all this, and all of a sudden you get that letter or that phone call, we're calling you back into the military," he said.

Christjohn urges other veterans to not ignore symptoms.

"Get out and get some help. Go and talk, don't be afraid to get some help for yourself," he said.

After getting out of the service, Christjohn attempted to deal with his PTSD on his own.

"You numb yourself a lot, you medicate yourself through alcohol," he said.

Christjohn found himself avoiding crowds, sitting with his back to the wall in public, or avoiding social situations all together. His behavior put a strain his relationships.

"You get discouraged sometimes, people just don't understand," he said. "Especially in a marriage or having a companion, they don't know what's going on ... it's making the relationship bad because they don't understand how to deal with (PTSD)."

After undergoing counseling, Christjohn turned to Native American spirituality, such as participating in sweats.

"I like to burn sage in the morning," he said.

He also does woodworking using tools purchased through the Department of Veterans Affairs Vocational Rehabilitation program. The tools came in handy when anticipation of the interview for this story had caused Christjohn a sleepless night.

"I drew some sketches on how to make my woodworking pattern to keep my mind … off what I was going to go through today, and that helped out a lot," he said.

Vietnam War veteran Ted Christjohn does woodworking to keep focused and stave off symptoms of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder caused by his experiences in combat.

Christjohn reaches out to other veterans who may be suffering as he has.

"If I see a young man that's going through a lot, I usually try to say something. Usually, I try to give a young man a tobacco pouch, and just say hold this, take this with you," he said.

Christjohn finds speaking to other veterans helps.

"Then you find out you're not the only one," he said.

Metoxen noted that area veterans can be very supportive.

"We've got a lot of veterans who help other veterans. We had a young guy come back from Iraq, and he couldn't handle it. He actually had PTSD, and some of our PTSD veterans sat with him for about two hours, and the laughed and cried with him," said Metoxen. "When he left, you could tell he was feeling good."

Retiring senator spurs action on Indian issues

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ By any measure, 2010 was a banner year on Capitol Hill for American Indians.

And a huge factor was the pending retirement of a lone senator - North Dakota's Byron Dorgan.

After years of trying, Congress passed several landmark bills for Indians, including laws overhauling tribal health care and law enforcement and settling a 15-year legal battle over lost royalties for mismanaged Indian lands.

Congress continued parceling out $2.5 billion in economic stimulus money to tribes and resolved four long-standing water disputes totaling more than $1 billion.

Tribal leaders and advocates call the two-year session that ended last week the most productive for American Indians in four decades. They offer several reasons, including strong support from the Obama administration, which has made tribal issues a priority.

And there was the Dorgan factor.

Dorgan, a Democrat, announced last January he wouldn't seek re-election after almost 30 years in Congress. Dorgan, chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, said he then "focused like a laser" on unfinished business, including the long-stalled bills on health care and crime.

"I was flat tired of working on these issues that were never resolved," he said in a recent interview in his Capitol office, which is adorned with Indian headdresses and tribal artwork. "I said, 'We will get this done.' We can fix these issues by keeping a few promises."

Dorgan, 68, denies any attempt to craft a legacy, saying he merely wanted to complete legislation he had worked on for years.

"When children are dying and elders are dying, the time for talk is past," he said, noting that many Native Americans still "live in third world conditions in much of this country."

Jacqueline Johnson Pata, executive director of the National Congress of American Indians, the oldest and largest Indian organization in the nation, said Dorgan's pending retirement spurred action.

"To be honest, we all knew Senator Dorgan wasn't going to run again. There were things he felt very passionate about and really wanted to get done," she said.

Dorgan, she added, was "a consistent, energetic and persistent advocate" willing to listen to other viewpoints and gain bipartisan support. "I think that's why you see so many things passed," she said.

Interior Secretary Ken Salazar called Dorgan "a true champion" for Indian nations and rural communities.

The health care law, formally known as the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, was included in the larger health care overhaul

High court dismisses Oneida foreclosure case

WASHINGTON (AP) – The U.S. Supreme Court has dismissed a case involving two New York counties that are trying to foreclose on land owned by the Oneida Indian Nation to settle a property tax dispute.

The court agreed in October to hear the case. It centers on the issue of whether tribal immunity from lawsuits prevents Madison and Oneida counties from foreclosing on tribal land.

The justices said in an unsigned opinion Monday that the Oneidas have agreed since to waive their immunity. They said that eliminates the high court's role in the case.

The court instructed the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to consider other issues raised in the dispute.

The case involves about 17,000 acres. The federal government has agreed to put most of the land into trust.

Ho-Chunk Nation fights state over poker tables

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ State regulators and the Ho-Chunk Nation are fighting over the use of electronic poker tables at the tribe's Dejope bingo hall in Madison.

The state says the poker games are prohibited under law because they are much like blackjack or slots. But, the Ho-Chunk say the games are legal because players bet against each other, rather than the house or the machine as in traditional poker.

At issue is whether the electronic poker tables are "class three'" games, which are banned at bingo halls, but not casinos. The State Journal says the tribe and state have agreed to settle the dispute through binding arbitration.

Wis. gives tribes $692,000 in police grants

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ The state has awarded another round of grants to American Indian tribes to help cover law enforcement expenses.

State Justice Department officials say 10 tribes will receive a total of $692,000.

Agency officials say the grants come out of tribal gaming money the state collects. No tax dollars are used.

The grants typically have been used to cover personnel costs as well as purchase equipment such as uniforms and body armor.

The Bad River Chippewa got $128,150, the most of any recipient. The St. Croix Chippewa was next with $113,700.

Oneida received $49,022 and will use the money to combat drugs, gangs and violence.

June 14, 1923 – December 30, 2010

Deacon Edmund C. Powless, beloved husband of Blanche A. Powless and patriarch of the Powless family entered into Eternal Life with his Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ on Thursday, December 30, 2010.

Edmund was born June 14, 1923 in Oneida, the second oldest son in a family of four boys born to Ben and Philomene (Antone) Powless, on what was his mother and father's original homestead. In December 1941, directly after Pearl Harbor, Edmund, who was 18 at the time, enlisted in the United States Army, participating in quartermaster training and eventually volunteering for parachute training. He was sent to Europe and earned a Purple Heart during the Battle of the Bulge, where he participated in the liberation of Bastogne. Edmund served as a member of the 101st Airborne Division and earned the rank of Staff Sergeant, earning numerous medals for his Combat duty that included not only the Purple Heart but also two Bronze Star Medals of Honor, along with various other medals during his course of duty. He was honorably discharged October 1945. Additionally, he was recently awarded the French Legion of Honor Medal by the French Consulate, France's highest military service award, for his assistance with the liberation of France during World War II. Currently, Edmund was a member of the Robert W. Cornelius VFW Post, Oneida.

When he returned from his military service he married his childhood sweetheart, Blanche Hill, on September 22, 1945 at All Saints Cathedral in Milwaukee. They eventually moved to Green Bay and he soon found work at the Portland-Huron Cement Co., where he began as a laborer but soon developed into a general repairman, learning skills as a carpenter, welder, electrician, and plumber. After 40 years of dedicated service, Edmund retired from Huron Cement Co. in 1985. It was at this time that an idea, that had always laid at the back of his mind, became a full-blown calling. Edmund, a lifelong member of the Church of the Holy Apostles, Oneida, and who became a lay leader at Holy Apostles after the war, always wanted to be of more help to his people. This, along with the pride of his heritage instilled in him by his parents, helped guide him to the life of Ministry. The Episcopal Church started the "deacon school" and it was here that his calling was recognized. With tremendous love and encouragement from Blanche and "his girls" he applied for and became accepted and enrolled in the first class of the Episcopal deaconate and began a three-year training program that included extensive reading, writing, and discussion in theology. He was ordained by the Rt. Reverend William Louis Stevens, then Bishop of the Diocese of Fond du Lac, as Deacon of the Episcopal Church August 25, 1990, the Feast of King St. Louis of France, at the age of 67, and became the first Deacon at his lifelong church, The Church of the Holy Apostles, Oneida. He obtained this with less than three months of high school education. Since that time, his ministry has included home and hospital visits to those unable to attend church, as well as assisting with the weekly services at church.

Despite all his achievements, Deacon Edmund will be best remembered as a modest, humble man whose heart was filled with love and tender caring for all people, everywhere and whose service to his Lord and Savior was clearly evident in the actions of his daily life and by his warm and ever present smile. He will be greatly missed, not only by his family, but by those he also lovingly ministered to.

Deacon Edmund is survived by his loving, devoted wife, Blanche, Green Bay; their five daughters, Pat (Cory) Hill, Oneida, Sister Theresa Rose Powless-T.C.G., Arizona, Kathy Hughes, Oneida, Dottie (Doug) Krull, De Pere, and Barb (Rick) Dickson, Green Bay. He is further survived by six grandchildren and ten great grandchildren along with extended family members; Lucille Powless, Green Bay, Leatrice Powless, Oneida, Vivian Williams, Green Bay, Mary Hill, Green Bay, Irene Hill, Green Bay, Kathleen (Kate) Stevens, Green Bay, Canon and Mrs. Nelson B. Skinner and family, Syracuse, NY, Brad and Rhonda Carsten, St. Louis, MO. as well as numerous nieces, nephews, and cousins.

He was preceded in death by his parents Benjamin, Sr and Philomene, as well as by three brothers, Leland, Ben Jr, and Delmar along with brothers-in-law, Sylvester Hill, Irving Hill, Chuck Hill, Jerry Hill, Chester, Jr (Buck) Williams, Commodore Metoxen; sisters-in-law Lorraine Metoxen and Sylvia Hill.

A Celebration of the Mass of Christian Burial for Deacon Edmund was held at 12:00 Wednesday, January 5 at church with Rt. Rev. Russell E. Jacobus, Bishop of Diocese of Fond du Lac Reverend officiating with Reverend Mother Kristina L. Henning and Deacon Deborah Heckel assisting. Burial 1 followed at the Church of Holy Apostles Churchyard. Please visit www.ryanfh.com to send online condolences to the family.

Thomas, Shirlann
September 28, 1964 – December 31, 2010

Thomas, Shirlann

Passed away on December 31, 2010 at the age of 46. Shirlann was born on September 28, 1964 in Sturgeon Bay.

Loving mother of Joshua Thomas, Maynard Webster, Richard Haydin, and Samuel Haydin. Loving daughter of the late Donald and Shirley Ann (Nee Huff). Dear sister of Drake Thomas, Julie (Gus) Haggerty, Florence Thomas, Dowe Thomas, Joann Thomas, Gloria (Donald) Wintrone, and Violet (Tom) Blake. Further survived by nieces, nephews, other relatives, and friends. Shirlann is preceded in death by her father Donald and her grandparents Ben and Julie Huff.

Visitation was Wednesday January 5, 2011 from 10 AM-1PM and funeral service were at 1 PM. Shirlann was recently baptized into the Christian faith at St. Lucas Ev. Lutheran Church. Memorials to the family are appreciated.

From 2A/Dorgan

passed by Congress last spring. It clears the way for more preventive care, boosts mental health resources and addresses recruiting and retaining physicians throughout Indian Country. It also focuses on teen suicide - an epidemic on many reservations - and improves treatment for diabetes, another chronic problem.

Dorgan said he told Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid he would not vote for the larger health bill unless it included Indian health care. "That's not a threat, just a statement of fact," he said.

Dorgan also championed the Tribal Law and Order Act, which aims to give tribes more authority to combat crime on their reservations.

The measure authorizes more federal law enforcement officers and makes federal agencies collect data on crimes committed in Indian Country. It also requires the Justice Department to maintain criminal data on cases that U.S. attorneys decline to prosecute for various reasons, including a lack of evidence. A recent report found that federal officials decline to prosecute more than 50 percent of violent crimes on reservations.

On some reservations, fewer than a dozen officers patrol areas the size of Connecticut.

"If you report a rape, a cop might show up the next day," Dorgan said. "It's a full-blown scandal."

Congress approved $3.4 billion to settle the lost royalties case, which covers claims that Native Americans were swindled out of payments for oil, gas, timber and grazing rights for more than a century. As many as 500,000 American Indians will receive at least $1,500 apiece; some will get significantly more.

A total of $2 billion will be used to buy broken-up Indian lands from individual owners willing to sell, with the lands turned over to tribes. Another $60 million will go to a scholarship fund for young Indians.

The settlement was reached in late 2009, but was not approved by Congress until the lame-duck session that ended just before Christmas.

A separate settlement with the Agriculture Department will pay Indian farmers $680 million for improper denial of farm loans. The settlements and new laws, Dorgan said, are a matter of honor.

"We signed these treaties and made promises - in writing - and then broke them all," he said. "This is about keeping the country's promises."

Protesters demonstrate outside Seattle inquest

SEATTLE (AP) ~ Scores of protesters pounded drums and sang outside the King County Courthouse as a police inquest began into an officer's fatal shooting of a Native American wood carver.

Protesters were visible before Monday's session began, during the noon hour and at the conclusion of the day's testimony.

The inquest jury was shown newly disclosed video of Officer Ian Birk pointing his semiautomatic pistol at John T. Williams just moments after Birk fired four shots that left Williams sprawled on the ground.

The Seattle Times reports some demonstrators wore headbands saying "4 seconds to death." That's a reference to the time between when Birk ordered Williams to drop a knife and when Birk fired.

Birk saw Williams carrying the knife Aug. 30 and said he fired because Williams didn't respond to three commands to drop the knife.

The King County prosecutor will use the inquest findings to determine whether to charge the officer.

Keeping the Dream Alive 365

(Green Bay) Area residents from diverse cultural backgrounds are uniting next week to celebrate the life and legacy of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Featuring multicultural dance performances, music, and the inspiring words of Dr. King, the 16th Annual Community Celebration of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday will be held Saturday, January 15, 2011, 10:30 a.m.-12:00 noon, in the Student Center, on the Northeast Wisconsin Technical College Green Bay campus. This vibrant celebration is free and open to people of all ages and cultures.

The program will include African, Hmong and Indian dance performances, Native American music, and a reading of Dr. King's "I Have a Dream" speech. Allison Jones and Raquel Harris, two 12 year olds, will perform "Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing," widely regarded as the black national anthem. A light lunch will be served at a reception immediately following the program.

Brown County and Oneida Nation school children are once again participating in a poster/essay/poetry contest that illustrates this year's theme, "Keeping the Dream Alive 365." Contest winners will be announced at the celebration.

The celebration is being organized by representatives from Family and Childcare Resources of N.E.W., Green Bay Public Schools, Northeast Wisconsin Technical College, St. Norbert College, United Hmong and Asian American Community Center, University of Wisconsin Green Bay, and community volunteers.

Major contributors of this event include Northeast Wisconsin Technical College, Procter & Gamble, University of Wisconsin Green Bay, and U.S. Bank. Additional support for the celebration has been provided by a variety of organizations that will be recognized during the celebration.

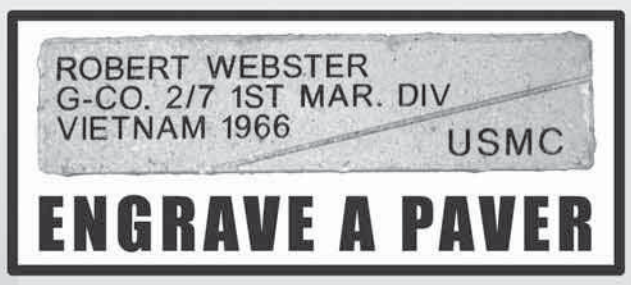
Walker plans Thurs. trip to Green Bay

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Gov. Scott Walker plans to make his first public trips outside of Madison since he took over as governor last week.

Walker has scheduled stops in Wausau, Rhinelander, and Green Bay on Thursday. His office hasn't released any further details.

Walker had planned to visit Eau Claire last week but abruptly canceled when his mother fell ill.

It was a busy first week in office for Walker. He was inaugurated last Monday, held his first cabinet meeting and unveiled bills the Legislature is expected to pass later this month.



Walker also called for creation of a special commission to find government waste, which met Tuesday.

Legal Notice

If You Are a Native American Who Tried to Get a Farm Loan or Loan Servicing from the USDA,

You Could Receive Benefits from a $760 Million Class Action Settlement.

A class action Settlement with the United States Department of Agriculture ("USDA") has been reached. The lawsuit claimed the USDA discriminated against Native Americans who applied for or tried to apply for farm loans or loan servicing. The USDA denies it did anything wrong.

Am I included?

The Class includes all Native American farmers and ranchers who:

- Farmed or ranched or attempted to farm or ranch between January 1, 1981 and November 24, 1999;
- Tried to get a farm loan or loan servicing from the USDA during that period; and
- Complained about discrimination to the USDA either on their own or through a representative during the time period.

You are not eligible for this Settlement if you filed a claim, or intend to file a claim, in another USDA discrimination case like Pigford I or Pigford II (Black farmers), Garcia (Hispanic farmers) or Love (Women farmers).

Because of a law passed by Congress, you are also not eligible for this Settlement if you either:

- Experienced discrimination only between January 1 and November 23, 1997; or
- Complained of discrimination only between July 1 and November 23, 1997.

What does the Settlement provide?

The $760 million Settlement will pay cash to Class Members for valid claims as well as attorneys' fees (between 4% and 8%, subject to Court approval) and awards. The Settlement includes up to $80 million in USDA loan forgiveness for Class Members who qualify. The USDA will pay an additional $20 million to implement the Settlement and will make some changes to their farm loan programs. Any money left after all payments and expenses have been made will be donated to one or more organizations that help Native American farmers and ranchers.

What can I get from the Settlement?

The amount of money you will receive will depend on whether you file a claim under Track A or Track B. It will also depend on the total number of claims that are filed and approved.

Track A – You can get a payment up to $50,000 for your discrimination claim plus an additional 25% paid to the IRS to reduce any income tax you may owe.

Track B – You can get the amount of your actual damages up to $250,000. Track B requires more proof than Track A.

USDA Loan Forgiveness – Under both Track A and Track B you can get forgiveness on part or all of your eligible USDA farm loans plus an additional 25% paid to the IRS to reduce any income tax you may owe.

How do I get benefits?

You will need to file a claim by December 24, 2011 to get benefits. After the Court approves the Settlement, meetings will be held across the country to help Class Members file claims. You can register for a Claims Package at the website or by calling the toll-free number.

What are my other rights?

- If you want to keep your right to sue the USDA about the claims in this Settlement, you must exclude yourself by February 28, 2011. Unless you exclude yourself, you will be bound by the terms of this Settlement.
- If you stay in the Settlement, you can object to or comment on it by February 28, 2011.

The Court will hold a hearing on April 28, 2011 to consider whether to approve the Settlement and the attorneys' fees. The Court has appointed attorneys to represent the Class. You or your own lawyer may ask to appear and speak at the hearing at your own expense.

ND bills seek to keep Fighting Sioux nickname

By Dale Wetzel
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) ~ Two North Dakota House bills would delay or halt the University of North Dakota from discarding its Fighting Sioux nickname and American Indian head logo, a job the school wants to finish this summer to avoid NCAA penalties.

Rep. Al Carlson, R-Fargo, said Monday he would introduce legislation to require UND to keep its nickname and logo. The bill, which was obtained by The Associated Press, orders Attorney General Wayne Stenehjem to consider filing an antitrust lawsuit against the NCAA if the association tries to sanction UND for keeping the nickname.

A separate bill, sponsored by Rep. David Monson, R-Osnabrock, says the university may not drop the nickname or logo unless the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe holds a referendum and tribal voters deny UND permission to continue using them.

Supporters of the nickname and logo have held out hope that they could be retained if the Standing Rock and Spirit Lake Sioux tribes endorsed them.

The Spirit Lake tribe held a referendum in April 2009, with 67 percent of voters declaring they wanted to keep the nickname and logo, which is a profile of a Sioux warrior with feathers and paint. The Standing Rock Sioux's tribal council has declined to hold a referendum, with the tribe's chairman, Charles Murphy, saying it had more pressing issues.

UND plans to eliminate most instances of the nickname by August. Sellers of Fighting Sioux memorabilia have until June 30 to clear out their stocks.

In April 2010, William Goetz, the chancellor of the state university system, ordered UND to begin a transition away from the nickname and logo, and "at this point, the University of North Dakota is continuing to comply" with the directive, UND President Robert Kelley said in a statement Monday.

Goetz's order came shortly after the North Dakota Supreme Court, ruling in a lawsuit filed by a group of Spirit Lake nickname supporters, concluded the state constitution gave the Board of Higher Education authority to drop the nickname and logo.

Stenehjem said the Supreme Court's decision would pose problems for the Carlson and Monson bills.

"The obstacle that they're going to face is the provision of the North Dakota Constitution that says that the Board of Higher Education has full authority over the institutions of higher education in North Dakota," Stenehjem said.

Jon Backes, president of the Board of Higher Education, called the bills "entirely a legislative issue."

"I think until the Legislature gets through their debate on the issue, I really don't have anything more to say about it," Backes said. "If they try to force the state board to do something, I guess we'd have to talk to our lawyer about the constitutionality of that, but to the extent that they think the process is worthy of significant debate. I encourage a robust debate in that regard."

The Fighting Sioux nickname, which for decades has withstood criticism that it demeans American Indians, ran into its strongest challenge in 2005, when the NCAA declared that it and other colleges' American Indian nicknames were hostile and abusive. The NCAA said

Shekoli!

On Saturday, February 5, 2011 there will be a momentous day for the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin. On that day, the Judiciary law and Legislative Procedures Act (LPA) will be brought before the People at a special GTC meeting, and the People will be asked again to decide: Are we ready for these proposed changes to our government and judicial system?

It is now in the hands of the People to decide, and as with everything we do, our actions will affect the seventh generation. I urge all GTC members to take the initiative if you have not already, to learn about these laws and what they mean to the Oneida Tribe.

Rather than repeat information about these proposals or the recent changes made, I would like to stop for a moment and thank everyone that has worked so hard to get the word out about these laws; to make sure that everyone has either received or had an opportunity to access as much information as possible. The process of updating the Administrative Procedures Act by creating the Judiciary Law and the Legislative Procedures Act was a huge undertaking, requiring as much information as possible to be shared with the membership in order for them to make an informed decision. The Legislative Procedures Act was nearing finalization about a year ago, however it took almost three years before that to develop and prepare it for GTC consideration. The work on the Judiciary began about five years ago and finally got to the stage for introduction to the GTC in July of 2010. At that point, we began concerted efforts to educate directly to the membership. Through a collective effort the LOC, several other departments, employees, and community members worked very hard to make sure the voters were fully informed on these matters.

I am also very proud that we managed to do so much while under cost-containment. Our total costs for this media effort came to $5,862.68, and that includes the expense of internally copying and distributing fliers, surveys and materials for the community meetings – this is far below market value for the kind of coverage we were able to achieve.

Here is a breakdown of all of the outreach and information-sharing we have accomplished:

Kalihwisaks – in 2010, at least 29 different items regarding the Judiciary law and Legislative Procedures Act were published in 16 issues of the Tribal newspaper. This includes: one front-page news story, six OBC forum columns written by myself and other members of the OBC, at least ten public hearing notices and other announcements, four full articles devoted to these laws, and three articles that discussed the Judiciary or Legislative Procedures Act along with other topics. The community also played a role – the Kalihwisaks published four letters to the editor from community members and one full-page guest editorial from the Chief Judicial Officer of the Oneida Appeals Commission.

The Green Bay Press-Gazette also ran at least one article about the Judiciary proposal within the past few months.

Community Meetings, Work Meetings, and Public Hearings: In 2010, the LOC spent roughly 60 hours in community meetings, public hearings, and work meetings, and another 200 hours preparing presentations for those meetings and/or reviewing and addressing the comments and concerns brought forth at those meetings.

Six community meetings were held in 2010.

In addition to the Public Hearing held for the Judiciary on May 12, 2009, another one was held on July 29, 2010. A Public Hearing for the Legislative Procedures Act was held March 11, 2010.

The LOC held over a dozen work and informational meetings on these issues – aside from the several regular LOC meetings (open to the public) at which we discussed and worked on the proposals. The Oneida Appeals Commission was invited to several of the work meetings, and at other meetings we brought the information to other groups, such as ONCOA. The advice, recommendations and questions we received in these meetings helped with the understanding of the purpose of the law, and the policy and criteria for each section that should be included.

In order to promote all of these meetings, eight different fliers were created and over 600 copies were posted in Tribal workplaces and other public areas.

Information by mail: Not counting GTC packets, the LOC sent out over 20,260 pieces of mail (five different publications) to inform Tribal members about the Judiciary proposal. In July and August of 2010, informational booklets and brochures were mailed to all Oneida households in the region – Wisconsin and several neighboring states. Then, a second brochure was mailed out in the Milwaukee area and Brown/Outagamie Counties. In January 2011, we created and sent a fourth mailer to Oneida households in Wisconsin, explaining the changes that have been made based on feedback from the November GTC meeting and announcing upcoming community meetings. This was followed by a fifth mailer, announcing an upcoming community meeting at SEOTS.

Informational Booth: On September 16, 2010, a booth was booked at the Oneida Farmer's Market, where informational materials were passed out, questions were asked and answered, and Tribal members were invited to fill out a survey.

Surveys: Along with the survey passed out at the informational booth, a survey was enclosed in the booklets mailed out to heads of households. Between those efforts, we received and reviewed 69 responses, which also helped shape the final draft of the proposal.

Website: In August of 2010, a webpage explaining the Judiciary proposal went live on the Oneidanation.org website. This webpage has since been expanded to provide information about the Legislative Procedures Act, as well. Originally, we posted the most current drafts of the Judiciary law and all of the content that was mailed out to Oneida households. Later, we created and added three additional publications, answering even more frequently asked questions about the proposals. More recently, we added information about the Legislative Procedures Act, and links to newspaper articles relating to the proposals. We will continue to keep this website updated regularly.

Current and Future Efforts: Of course, we are not done with our efforts to share information with the community. We scheduled three additional community meetings in 2011; two were held on January 12th and 13th, and one will be held at 10 a.m. on January 15th in the Business Committee Conference Room in the Norbert Hill Center.

For more information about these proposals, please refer to the LOC Update article in this issue of the Kalihwisaks, and/or visit the www.oneidanation.org website and click on the link for the Judiciary/Legislative Procedures Act proposals. We also invite the membership to attend this remaining community meeting.

I am very interested to learn what the People think about the media efforts we have undertaken – was this outreach effective? How could it be better? What other ways can we get information out to the public? Please take a moment to let myself or one of the other LOC members know what you think. This information can help us improve as we go along. As I hope the information above shows, there has been a concentrated, collective effort to make sure the membership has heard from us. Now, we want to hear more from the membership.

'Redskins,' Confederate Flags and the Mukwonago 'Indian' Nickname and Logo

If you show respect for a symbol that promotes stereotyping, harassment and discrimination does that take away the harm? If you replicate that symbol is more or less harm done? If you claim that you mean no harm when you use it, does the harm go away?

My friend Mark says this is sort of like the Confederate flag in the South. Some people, mostly whites, claim that it is a symbol of resilience, bravery and pride. Others say that it symbolizes white power, slavery and segregation. Does the fact that it is raised respectfully with a dignified flag ceremony every day change its symbolic meaning? If a plaque is hung next to every Confederate flag that says, "This flag is a symbol of resilience, bravery and pride and is in no way intended to promote white power, slavery or segregation. In fact, we honor and welcome black people here." would the symbolic meaning of the flag match the slogan?

I hope Mark's metaphor helps move understanding about the use of the race-based 'Indian' name and logo in Mukwonago. It helped me understand the issue better.

Symbols like the Indian head in profile are called "severed head" logos. They have been used at various times in the colonial period and in later U.S. history to designate a place where whole bodies, heads and later scalps of Indian people (men, women and children) could be brought in for bounty payment. Blood stained scalps gave rise to the term 'redskins.' The bounty practice is one reason why many American Indian people are so opposed to the use of these logos. Bounty payments are about death and genocide not about athletic games and academic and music competitions. When I see one of these symbols I see a bounty marker, what do you see?

Research by Dr. Stephanie Fryberg and many others proves that Indian nickname and logo stereotypes are a form of discrimination. Dr. Jesse Steinfeldt and others show that these stereotypes lead to harassment. Dr. Chu Kim-Prieto demonstrates that these stereotypes lead to a tendency to stereotype other minority groups. Four State Superintendents have urged Wisconsin school districts to review their use of American Indian logos, nicknames and mascots. Why would anyone want to continue to use symbols that are proven to cause harm to children in public school settings?

Letters & Opinions...

A Few Good Judges

Sekoli,

Sure there are a few good judges on the Oneida Appeals Commission----like Lee Ninham, or Linda Dallas, maybe a few others.

But Linda Dallas has yet to be seated on a case over two years after being duly elected. Any other good judges are outvoted or marginalized by the voting block of 'colleagues' sisters-in-law, aunties, girlfriends, etc.

I and my clients have been more than respectful. We have had trust that our cases would be given a fair interpretation and analysis under the law by the Oneida Appeals Commission. Our cases have been fully briefed and argued. We have followed the Rules of Civil and Appellate Procedure to a T. It all just gets thrown back in your face in the 'Oneida Judicial System'.

Practicing tribal law for the last ten years in the "Oneida Judicial System" has been a lot like in the cartoon Peanuts: the snob Lucy just pulls away the football from Charlie Brown.

An 18-year Oneida Tribal member employee--- terminated from his position as third shift Cage/Vault Supervisor under the "Blue Book Accumulation Rule". All because of the heinous crime of forgetting to hand-write his employee number on a standard accounting form. Didn't matter in the slightest that his employee number was also computer-printed in two different areas on the same form.

The Personnel Commission invents their own reason for upholding the termination, complete with spelling and other factual errors.

Appeal to the "Oneida Judicial System"? They just throw it out based on 'untimeliness' or 'insufficient clarity' or some other simple reason they can understand. So how does this eighteen-year tribal member employee get treated for his years of service to the tribe? Termination Upheld. Just think how many tribal members have suffered like this, while others enjoy unlimited tenure in their positions.

To say we have a Mickey Mouse, Winnie- the-Pooh, kangaroo "Oneida Judicial System", would be an insult to Mickey Mouse and Winnie-The-Pooh.

Doctor shortage on the reservation? No problem! We'll just elect our doctors---they won an election---they must be great! Win the tribal election for doctors on our reservation you get $60,000/year plus benefits, a lab coat and a stethoscope. Plus you get the title of 'Chief Doctor', and the instant knowledge to write prescriptions and make diagnoses! Not bad for not having to take the GMAT, go to medical school, or college for that matter. But hey, who cares-as long as our doctors are Oneida!

Budget Crisis? It is truly unbelievable that we spend a million dollars every budget cycle for a "Judicial System" to spend on themselves, and where not a single 'judge' has a single hour of law school credits. Yet how many hundreds of other qualified tribal members are automatically screened out of a job by HRD due to not having the requisite educational qualifications?

Thank goodness the Business Committee has some sense of honor and hasn't also changed their name to "Oneida Executive System".

Oneida waste-to-energy gasification plant location concerns
Sponsor: Rick Hill
Motion by Patty Hoeft to ask that a resolution be presented to the Business Committee to support the decision by Seven Generations to build and construct the waste-to-energy gasification facility on the Packerland site and that the Chairman coordinate a meeting with the Village of Ashwaubenon leader prior to the adoption to that resolution so that we can report our decision, seconded by Ed Delgado. Motion carried with two opposed and one abstention:
Ayes: Ed Delgado, Patty Hoeft, Trish King,
Opposed: Tina Danforth, Brandon Stevens
Abstained: Ron "Tehassi" Hill Jr.
For the record: Tina Danforth said I oppose the motion because I do not believe that we need to have a government-to-government meeting before we conduct our own business within our own jurisdiction for our own projects for our own corporations. This is an assertion of our ability to do economic development within our own means within our own territory and to hold this off until a government-to-government meeting circumvents that whole principle. That's for the record.
For the record: Ed Delgado said I support the motion because we need to make every effort to maintain our relationships with the Village of Ashwaubenon and communication. An attempt to communicate is always a good idea, I believe.

O.B.C. Legislative Operating Committee

LOC Update

The proposed Judiciary law and Legislative Procedures Act were brought forward together at a special GTC meeting held on November 20, 2010. During this four-hour meeting, there was much discussion, and several issues were raised and recommended changes were offered for both laws. Ultimately, the GTC directed that these laws be brought back individually - after the January annual GTC meeting, after a community meeting has been held, and after feedback from the GTC meeting and community meeting have been incorporated into these documents.

Three community meetings have been scheduled - one will take place at the SEOTS Office, 6811 West Morgan Ave., in Milwaukee on Wednesday, January 12th at 5:30 p.m. The other two meetings will take place in the Business Committee Conference Room at the Norbert Hill Center, Oneida, WI, and are scheduled for Thursday, January 13th at 5:30 p.m. and Saturday, January 15th, at 10:00 a.m. The GTC meeting to bring these proposals back has been scheduled for February 5th, and information should be mailed soon to all households regarding that meeting.

Here is a brief rundown on the laws and the changes that have been made based on the feedback from the Nov. 20 GTC meeting:

Judiciary law - the proposed Judiciary law would replace the current Oneida Appeals Commission, expand the jurisdiction of the Oneida Tribal Judicial System, and allow the Oneida Tribe to exercise more of our inherent sovereign powers.

Among the changes that have been made to the Judiciary law are:

- Options for education requirements for judges
- Options for either the remaining judges of the judiciary, or judges not currently seated, to form disciplinary committees to handle matters involving misconduct of a judge.
- Compensation for judges based on a tiered scale commensurate with education levels.
- Continuing to authorize the OBC to appoint judges where there is a vacancy with less than 18 months remaining in the term, but placing more strict conditions on who would qualify for appointment.

Legislative Procedures Act (LPA) - the proposed LPA would streamline, update and improve the lawmaking process by requiring fiscal estimates and a legislative analysis for each legislative proposal.

Among the changes that have been made to the LPA are:

- Language added specifying that only the GTC can make amendments to the LPA.
- Language which emphasizes that the LPA does not limit the ability of a Tribal member to petition for a special meeting of the GTC upon obtaining the required signatures.
- Language which emphasizes that amendments or repeal of a law adopted by the GTC shall require GTC action unless authority to amend or repeal the law is specifically granted to the Oneida Business Committee.

More changes are anticipated based on the feedback from the requested community meetings, and any changes will be reflected in the final draft which will be presented to the GTC for consideration on February 5, 2010. In the meantime, updated information about the Judiciary law and LPA will be posted on the www.Oneidanation.org website as it becomes available.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30AM • Norbert Hill Center (BCCR)

February 24, 2011

Purpose:
Pardon and Forgiveness Law. This law will replace the current Pardon Ordinance with a new law which reforms the process for obtaining a pardon and includes a new process for forgiveness. The law will allow for the forgiveness of individuals who have committed acts which have caused them to be ineligible for tribal employment, tribally issued occupational licenses, certifications or permits, housing through the Tribe, or tribal member benefits. This law will still allow Tribal members to be able to obtain pardons for crimes but will also be able to obtain forgiveness for acts in which there was not an actual criminal conviction.

Public Hearing Process
Testimony:
Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.

Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or Tonya Boucher, Legislative Reference Office at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.

*If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via GroupWise tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 1-920-869-4376. From 5A/Fighting Sioux

UND would not be allowed to host postseason tournaments if the Grand Forks school kept the nickname.

The state sued. In October 2007, the two sides settled, with UND agreeing to retire the nickname after three years if the Spirit Lake and Standing Rock Sioux tribes did not endorse the nickname and logo.

Carlson said Monday he expected his bill would be popular with lawmakers and North Dakotans generally. He called the Fighting Sioux nickname "a proud tradition" and compared its prospective loss to forcing North Dakota State University to drop its Bison nickname and logo.

"It would be like somebody coming in and telling us that no longer could we have a bison, because those bison were somehow mistreated by the early settlers because they shot too many of them," Carlson said.

Frequently Asked Questions
Oneida Tribal General Election Primary

How will the election process be different for the 2011 General Election?

In 2011, a Primary Election will be held in April or May and the regular General Election will be held in the month of July. (General Tribal Council will decide the date at the Annual Meeting in January 2011 per the Oneida Election Law).

What is a primary?

Excerpts from Oneida Tribal Election Law:

2.12-2. There shall be a primary election for Business Committee positions whenever there are three (3) or more candidates for any officer positions or sixteen (16) or more candidates for the at-large council member positions.

(a) The two (2) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for each officer position shall be placed on the ballot.

(b) The fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for the at-large council member positions shall be placed on the ballot.

(c) Any position where a tie exists to determine the candidates to be placed on the ballot shall include all candidates where the tie exists.

2.12-3. The Election Board shall cancel the primary election if the Business Committee positions did not draw the requisite number of candidates for a primary by the petitioning deadline set for the primary.

2.12-4. In the event a candidate withdraws or is unable to run for office after being declared a winner in the primary, the Election Board shall declare the next highest primary vote recipient the primary winner. This procedure shall be repeated as necessary until the ballot is full or until there are no available candidates. If the ballot has already been printed, the procedures for notifying the Oneida public in section 2.5-11 and 2.5-12 shall be followed, including the requirement to print a notice in the Tribal newspaper if time lines allow.

Why have a primary?

To give members a chance to select from fewer candidates or the Business Committee positions in the General Election.

Will there be a primary for all vacancies?

No. The primary election is for Business Committee vacancies only.

When will the primary be held?

In late April or early May, depending on which timetable the GTC chooses at the Annual GTC Meeting in January, 2011 (per the Oneida Election Law)

If there are only two candidates running for an officer position, will a primary still be held for that position?

No. The primary is designed to get the top two candidates for each officer position. If only two applicants run for that position, each applicant will automatically be placed on the General Election ballot as a candidate.

If a candidate didn't advance in the primary, can I write their name on my ballot at the General Election?

No. Write-in candidates are not allowed.

When will the Caucus be held?

In February or March of 2011 depending on which timetable the GTC chooses at the Annual GTC Meeting in January, 2011 (per the Oneida Election Law).

Is the Caucus just for vacancies within the Business Committee?

No, the Caucus will be for ALL vacancies of all boards, committees, and commissions with elected positions to be filled at the 2011 General Election.

When can I submit application for candidacy?

Officially this is done at the Caucus by being nominated and submitting the required application by the deadline date.

If I can't attend the Caucus, can I still submit my application to be a candidate?

Yes. You will need to complete a petition and submit the required application by the deadline date.

How long do I have to submit an application to become a candidate?

All applications are due by 4:30 p.m. five (5) business days after the Caucus. This deadline date will be noticed in the Caucus mail-out.

When is the General Election?

Excerpt from Oneida Election Law:

2.9. Election Process

Section A. Polling Places and Times

2.9-1. In accordance with Article III, Section 4 of the Tribal Constitution, elections shall be held in the month of July on a date set by the General Tribal Council. The General Tribal Council shall set the election date at the January annual meeting, or at the first GTC meeting held during a given year.

When can I begin campaigning?

Whenever you wish.

Excerpt from Oneida Election Law: 2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:

(a) Placement of campaign signs:

(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's permission.

(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.

(3) No campaign sign shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.

(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.

(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.

(d) Enforcement. The Zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.

(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Can I vote by absentee ballot?

No. Article III Section 2 of the Constitution states "All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin who are 21 years of age or over shall be qualified voters provided they present themselves in person at the polls on the day of election."

Will the Milwaukee voting site be open for both the primary and general election?

Yes. Business Committee Resolution 03-13-2002-O states: "NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that an approved facility; compliance with the Oneida Election Law, 2.8-0, Section B, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is hereby designated as a second polling site for Oneida triennial elections, beginning with the July, 2002, election."

Senecas to feds: Reject casino deal for Wis. tribe

SALAMANCA, N.Y. (AP) ~ Seneca Nation Indians are asking federal officials to reject a deal that would allow a Wisconsin tribe run a casino in the Catskills.

Seneca President Robert Odawi Porter recently wrote a letter to U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar saying the deal sought by the Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohicans would be bad public policy and likely unlawful.

The casino proposal and a complementary settlement of a Mohican land claim in central New York are championed by Sen. Charles Schumer and other officials who believe a casino near the lucrative New York City market will boost the economy of the old Borscht Belt.

But the Senecas and the Oneidas, which each run casinos in New York, have denounced the deal.

It's unclear when Interior officials will make a decision.

Move to undo Minn. nuclear ban sails through panel

By Martiga Lohn
Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) ~ A move to undo Minnesota's 17-year-old ban on new nuclear power plants easily cleared its first committee Tuesday as Republicans who run the Legislature make the proposal a priority.

Rep. Joyce Peppin's bill passed the House Environment, Energy and Natural Resources Committee on a 10-6 vote, with backing from groups including the Minnesota Chamber of Commerce and the Minnesota Building and Construction Trades Council. The 14-line bill would erase a single sentence of state law prohibiting the Public Utilities Commission from allowing construction of new nuclear plants.

"It's just striking one line," said Peppin, R-Rogers. "We're not starting the construction of a plant tomorrow."

Minnesota has two existing nuclear power plants near Red Wing and Monticello.

Peppin and other supporters of the bill said the change would allow utilities to consider nuclear power as they make long-term plans. Peppin said renewable energy sources such as wind and solar power aren't reliable enough to fulfill all the state's long-term needs.

"Renewables alone cannot get us to where we need to be," she said.

Even if the proposal sails through the Legislature, the 1994 moratorium on new nuclear power has support from Democratic Gov. Mark Dayton, who pledged to back the current law as a candidate.

Spokeswoman Katie Tinucci said Dayton hasn't said whether he would veto the bill.

During the hearing, opposition came from environmental groups and Democrats on the panel who said they're concerned ratepayers will end up covering the cost of developing a new nuclear power facility.

A firsthand perspective came from Prairie Island Indian Community Tribal Council president Victoria Winfrey, whose community lives about 600 yards from Xcel Energy's nuclear plant near Red Wing. Winfrey said her community opposes any moves to undo the current moratorium and still is waiting for the federal government to find a place to store spent nuclear fuel, including thousands of tons near their homes.

"The amount of hazardous waste that must be stored in our local community will only grow," Winfrey said.

Peppin's bill now heads to the House Commerce and Regulatory Reform Committee.

A Senate version sponsored by Majority Leader Amy Koch awaits its first hearing before an energy, utilities and telecommunications panel.

2011-2012 4K Enrolment Information for the Pulaski Community School District

The enrollment window for the Pulaski Community School District's 4K-PEEP (Pulaski Early Education Partnership) program will be from February 1 through February 28, 2011.

Enrollment for 4K/PEEP will be done on-line through the PEEP website at http://connect.pulaskilk12.wi.us/dist_stserv_4K_.cfm. The 4K/PEEP enrollment document can also be accessed by going to the Pulaski Community School District website at www.pulaski.k12.wi.us and accessing the Quick Links.

If parents do not have access to the on-line forms, need assistance filing out the on-line form, or have questions there will be a PEEP Enrollment evening on Tuesday, February 1, 2011 at Glenbrook Elementary PACE Conference Room, (enter PACE doors on Front Street) from 4:00 – 7:00 p.m.

A mailing will be sent to parents in the district that anticipate their child will attend 4K/PEEP in 2011-2012. The mailing will be sent to a list of families generated from district census data and other sources. If a parent has not received the mailing by January 24th please contact the Pulaski Student Services Office at 920-822-6021.

A child is eligible for the Pulaski 4K/PEEP program if they are 4 years old on or by September 1, 2011 and is planning to attend kindergarten in September 2012. This program is designed for the one year preceding 5 year old kindergarten entrance.

There are seven 4K/PEEP sites in the Pulaski Community School District. They are: Polka Tots Child Care Center, Assumption BVM Parochial School and Glenbrook Elementary in Pulaski; Peaceful Beginnings Christian Child Care Center on Hwy U in Pittsfield; Building Blocks Child Care Center in Sobieski; Hillcrest Elementary in Hobart, and Fairview Elementary in Krakow.

If a parent has questions they can also contact Pam Engel, 4K/PEEP Coordinator at pmengel@pulaski.k12.wi.us or call 920-865-6400.

Urban Indian issues topic of BC meet and greet

By Mark W. Powless
Special to the Kalihwisaks

On Thursday, December 2, 2010, the Oneida Business Committee visited Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services for a 'meet and greet' with the Tribal membership of southeastern Wisconsin. Chairman Richard Hill, Treasurer Cristina Danforth, Secretary Patricia Hoeft, and Council Members Melinda Danforth, Trish King, Edward Delgado and Ron 'Tehassi' Hill Jr. all made the trek to the city for the big event.

As a prelude to the evening's affair, Oneida Enrollment Department Director Cheryl Skolaski, traveled to SEOTS to offer the service of providing Tribal identification cards to interested Tribal members. This was the first time the Enrollment Department offered this service through the SEOTS office and the response was overwhelming. The steady flow of requests resulted in new Tribal I.D.'s for 80 people. Cheryl was originally scheduled to provide the service from noon until 6pm but due to the high demand, remained at the SEOTS office until 9pm to complete all the requests.

The anticipation of the Business Committee was high as more than 40 Tribal members casually talked and munched on hors d'oeuvres. The evening was kicked off and facilitated by the SEOTS Board, including general comments about Oneida residents of southeast Wisconsin by SEOTS Director, Mark W. Powless.

Representatives from Spotted Eagle Inc., Gerald L. Ignace Indian Health Center, and Indian Community School were on hand to share information about the urban Indian population and their specific challenges. Those challenges included poor academic performance and low graduation rates for Native high school students, inadequate Indian Health Service funding for the growing demand of health services, and the struggles of low income families.

The evening concluded with questions from the Tribal membership and comments by the Business Committee. Of particular note, former SEOTS Director, Mark Denning, ended the evening on a positive note by asking the Committee what Tribal membership could do to help them achieve the goals of the Nation. The response included the recognition of the strength of the Oneida community of southeast Wisconsin and encouragement of further community and political involvement.

Overall the events of the day were a huge success and helped reinforce the connection of Tribal members in the Milwaukee area to the Oneida Nation. The SEOTS Board and staff are diligently working to set dates for similar events in the future and will continue to build a positive relationship with the Oneida Business Committee to help strengthen and protect the people of the Oneida Nation.

A fight to preserve the Oneida community

"A Nation within a Nation: Voices of the Oneidas in Wisconsin" gathers first-person accounts, biographical essays, and scholars' investigations focusing on the period of 1900-1969.

In the wake of removal from their native New York, the Oneida people settled near what is now Green Bay, on 65,000 acres of commonly held land. But in 1887, the Dawes Act paved the way for a devastating break-up of the reservation, and within a lifetime the Oneidas saw their land holdings plummet to less than 200 acres. Throughout struggles with poverty, oppression, and government interference and assimilationism, Wisconsin Oneidas remained connected as a community and true to their Iroquois roots. They also refused to relinquish their dream of reclaiming their land, and in recent years have not only stopped the land-loss, but have begun to reverse it.

Editors L. Gordon McLester III and Laurence M. Hauptman show how Wisconsin Oneida leadership has helped to shape history, for Native Americans, Wisconsin and the United States. A story of survival and of the Native American quest for recognition of sovereignty, "A Nation within a Nation" is community history at its best.

About the Authors:

L. Gordon McLester III is an Oneida tribal historian. He is coeditor of "The Oneida Indian Journey" and "The Oneida Indians in the Age of Allotment" and coauthor of "Chief Daniel Bread and the Oneida Nation of Indians," all with Laurence M. Hauptman. McLester lives in Oneida, Wisconsin.

Laurence M. Hauptman is SUNY Distinguished Professor of History at SUNY New Paltz, where he has taught Native American history since 1971. The author, coauthor, or coeditor of fifteen books on the Iroquois and other Native Americans, Hauptman has testified as an expert witness before Congress, federal courts, and has served as a historical consultant for the Wisconsin Oneidas, the Cayugas, the Mashantucket Pequots, and the Senecas. "The Oneida Indian Journey," which Professor Hauptman coedited with L. Gordon McLester III, won the Wisconsin Historical Society prize for best community history in the year 2000.

All DMV offices closed Friday, January 14 for employee furlough

All Wisconsin Division of Motor Vehicles (DMV) offices will be closed for business on Friday, January 14 as DMV staff members take another of the required 16 unpaid days that must be taken over the two-year budget period. Employee furloughs for all university and state employees are part of the 2009 -2011 state budget. All state offices will also be closed on Monday, January 17 in observation of Martin Luther King Day.

DMV's automated phone system will remain available so that motorists can still make road test appointments and have access to recorded information.

Titling and registration services are offered by many third-party partners such as some police stations, grocery stores and financial institutions around the state and can be found at the WisDOT web site www.dot.wisconsin.gov/drivers/vehicles/plates/walkin.htm>.

DMV would like to remind customers that many services like vehicle registration renewal do not require a visit to a service center and are available online www.dot.wisconsin.gov/drivers/index.htm> 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

All DMV offices will resume regular business hours on Tuesday, January 18.

FSA Committee seeks nominations

(Appleton, WISCONSIN), January 5, 2011 – The Outagamie County Farm Service Agency (FSA) office is searching for minority and female producers interested in serving as an advisor to the FSA County Committee. Advisor nominations are due to the County Executive Director by February 1, 2011.

"The person selected to serve as an advisor will be instrumental in increasing the awareness and participation in FSA activities, including elections," said Vicki Wiese, FSA county executive director. "The advisor will help insure that problems and viewpoints of the underrepresented groups are understood and considered in local FSA actions."

Other duties of the County Committee advisors include:

- Attending each committee meeting, including executive sessions.
- Participating in all deliberations, although advisors will not have voting rights.
- Helping to develop interest and incentives in female and minority group members for considering FSA work as a career.
- Actively soliciting candidates from underrepresented groups for nomination during the committee election process.
- Performing special duties at the County Committee's request.

Appointments are for a 12-month period not to exceed nine consecutive years, effective on March 1 of each year.

County Committee members and advisors make decisions important to other producers throughout the county. As a representative of the U.S. government entrusted with this responsibility, each committee member and advisor must make sure all producers are treated fairly.

If interested in serving as an advisor to the FSA County Committee for 2011, contact Vicki Wiese at the Outagamie County FSA office at 920-733-1575.

USDA program to help farmers

(Appleton, WISCONSIN), January 10, 2011 – The USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA) recently created TIP Net, an online tool that can link retiring farmers who have expiring Conservation Reserve Program contracts with beginning farmers interested in bringing the land into production. Through the Transition Incentives Program (TIP), producers with land for sale or lease are introduced to qualified beginning or socially disadvantaged farmers and ranchers who want to buy or rent land for their operations.

TIP provides up to two additional Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) annual rental payments to a retired or retiring owner or operator with an expiring CRP contract. To qualify, the landowner must sell or lease the CRP land to a beginning or socially disadvantaged farmer or rancher so the new operator can convert some or all of the land to production using sustainable grazing or crop production methods.

For beginning and socially disadvantaged farmers or ranchers who cannot qualify for conventional credit, FSA offers financing as well. FSA makes direct loans and guaranteed loans made by conventional farm lenders to finance the purchase and operation of a farm. Each fiscal year, the agency targets a significant portion of its direct and guaranteed farm ownership and operating loan funds to beginning and socially disadvantaged farmers or ranchers. In addition to the funding reserves, FSA operates a special "down payment" loan program to assist socially disadvantaged and beginning farmers in purchasing a farm. Like TIP, this program can help retiring farmers transfer their land to future generations.

Additional information on FSA farm loan programs is available online at www.fsa.usda.gov or at the local county FSA office. TIP Net can be found online at http://www.fsa.usda.gov/tipnet.

DNR, locals set to submerge trees in northern Wisconsin

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ The state Department of Natural Resources, property owners and conservationists are getting ready to add more underwater trees to four northern Wisconsin lakes.

Fish, frogs and other aquatic wildlife use submerged trees for food and cover, but DNR officials say fewer trees are falling in the lakes. The agency says more shoreline lawns have meant fewer trees and shoreline property owners tend to clean up fallen trees.

The so-called "Fish Sticks" project calls for the DNR, property owners and conservation groups to anchor fallen trees to shore in Upper St. Croix Lake in Douglas County and in Upper Eau Claire, Shunenberg and Devils lakes in Bayfield County. When ice on the lakes melts, the trees will sink.

Work is expected to begin this month.

Wis. DNR seeks comment on tribal land deal

Madison, Wis. (AP) ~ The state Department of Natural Resources wants public input on a complex land deal in Jackson County that would give the Ho-Chunk Nation more space for housing.

County officials want to sell 244 acres of county forest to the Ho-Chunk for $646,000. The tribe plans to build 10 to 20 homes on the land.

The county then plans to take the $646,000, pool it with $380,000 in state stewardship dollars and buy 647 acres from Plum Creek Timberlands. That land will go into the county forest program.

The DNR will take written or verbal comments on the deal through Jan. 20.

Wisconsin Youth Leadership Forum

Hey Students! Would you like to learn leadership skills, experience what college is like AND have fun this summer? Read on…

WHAT: The 10th Annual Wisconsin Youth Leadership Forum (WI YLF) is a week-long leadership training and career awareness program for high school sophomores, juniors and seniors with disabilities. It provides training in leadership, self-advocacy skills, and career awareness to 25 students with disabilities from throughout the state of Wisconsin.

The Wisconsin Youth Leadership Forum is for:

- ➢ Students who show leadership potential by being active in their school and/or community
- ➢ Students who have a disability (physical, learning, cognitive, emotional, sensory, etc.)
- ➢ Wisconsin Residents
- ➢ Students who are currently sophomores, juniors or seniors

Why Attend the Youth Leadership Forum?

To give you a place to meet other students your age who are experiencing similar issues and concerns, help you increase your leadership skills so you can further your future goals and reach them, and to assist you in becoming a leader in your school and community.

WHERE:
The Edgewood Campus, Madison, WI
WHEN: Summer, 2011
COST: FREE*

There is NO CHARGE* to attend the YLF. General program expenses are paid for by YLF sponsors.

*If you need personal care services, please contact Joe Mielczarek, YLF Coordinator, to discuss payment for these services. You can bring your own attendant or take the opportunity to try using an agency in the area.

AT YLF YOU WILL…

- Work in small groups with other delegates and staff to talk about your interests and concerns and practice your leadership skills.
- Meet in large group sessions to hear from inspiring guest speakers on a variety of topics.
- Meet with your legislator, take a tour of the State Capitol and hang out on State Street.
- Get to know a mentor who can give you advice on school, college, work – whatever you are interested in.
- Develop a personal leadership plan

I'm interested what do I do next:

- ➢ Complete an application
- ➢ Get 3 letters of recommendation that highlight your leadership skills
- ➢ Complete two essay questions

(If you need assistance, ask a friend, sibling, parent/guardian or teacher.)

Application Deadline: April 1, 2011

Start A New Career Within Six Months

In anticipation of major road construction work on U.S. 41, Swan College in Green Bay is offering a 24-week course in Highway/Heavy construction beginning January 27 & February 25, 2011.

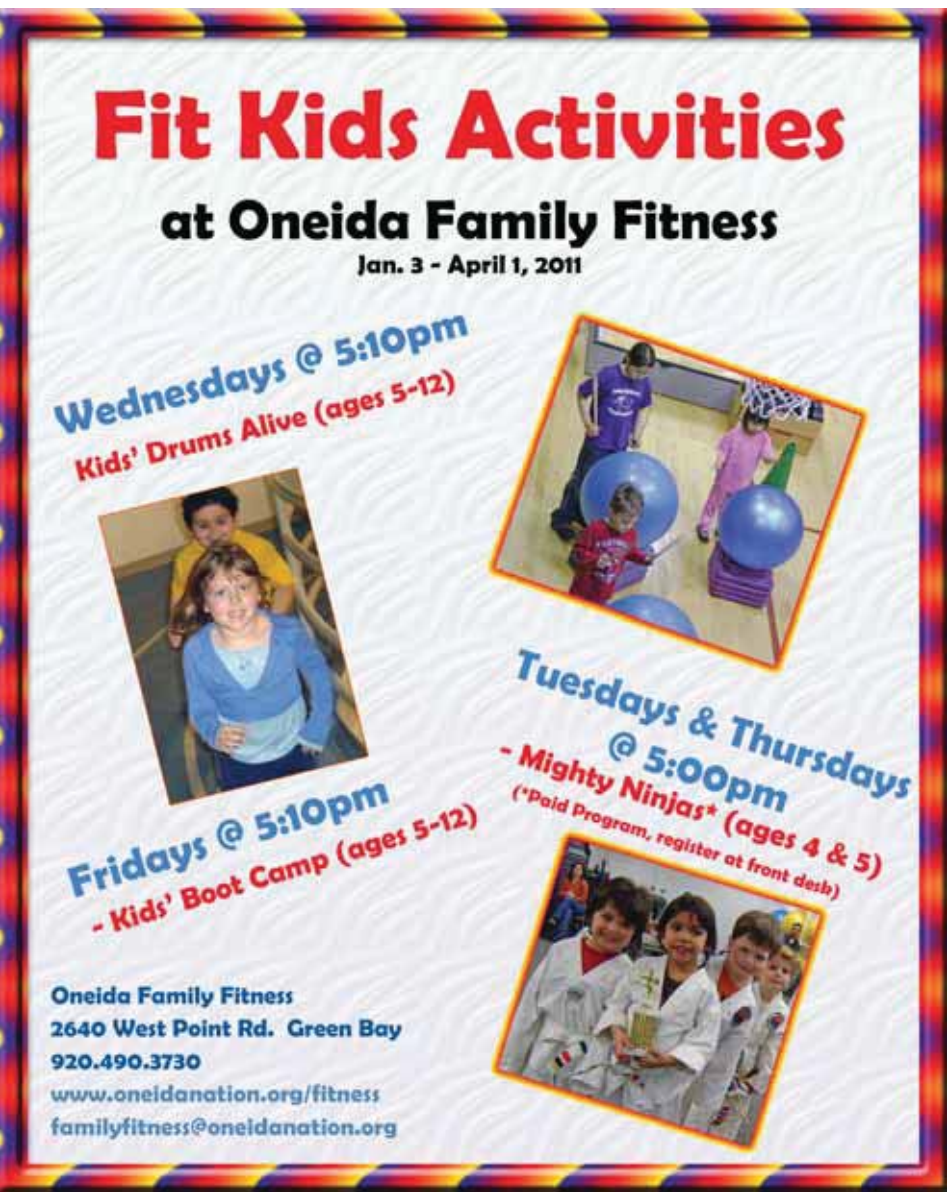
The course will include segments on surveying, grades and slopes (elevations), trucks, heavy equipment and crane operation, earth moving, paving and structural work.

The 24-week course, scheduled to start January 27 & February 25, 2011, will provide individuals with training needed to find employment in the highway construction field.

The training is designed to give job seekers skills they need to work on road construction projects and is timed to coincide with the Wisconsin Department of Transportation's approximately $1.5 Billion, 8-year project to widen and reconstruct U.S. 41.

Courses offered by Swan College, 1221 Bellevue St., are accredited by the National Center for Construction Education and Research, and Approved by the Wisconsin Education Approval Board.

Individuals who successfully complete the 170hour Highway/Heavy course will receive a certificate from Swan College and a National Certification from NCCER.



Cost for the course is $1,250, plus $150 book costs and $100 registration fee. Funding available to qualified students.

To register or for more information, go to www.swancollege.org or call (920) 217-6738.

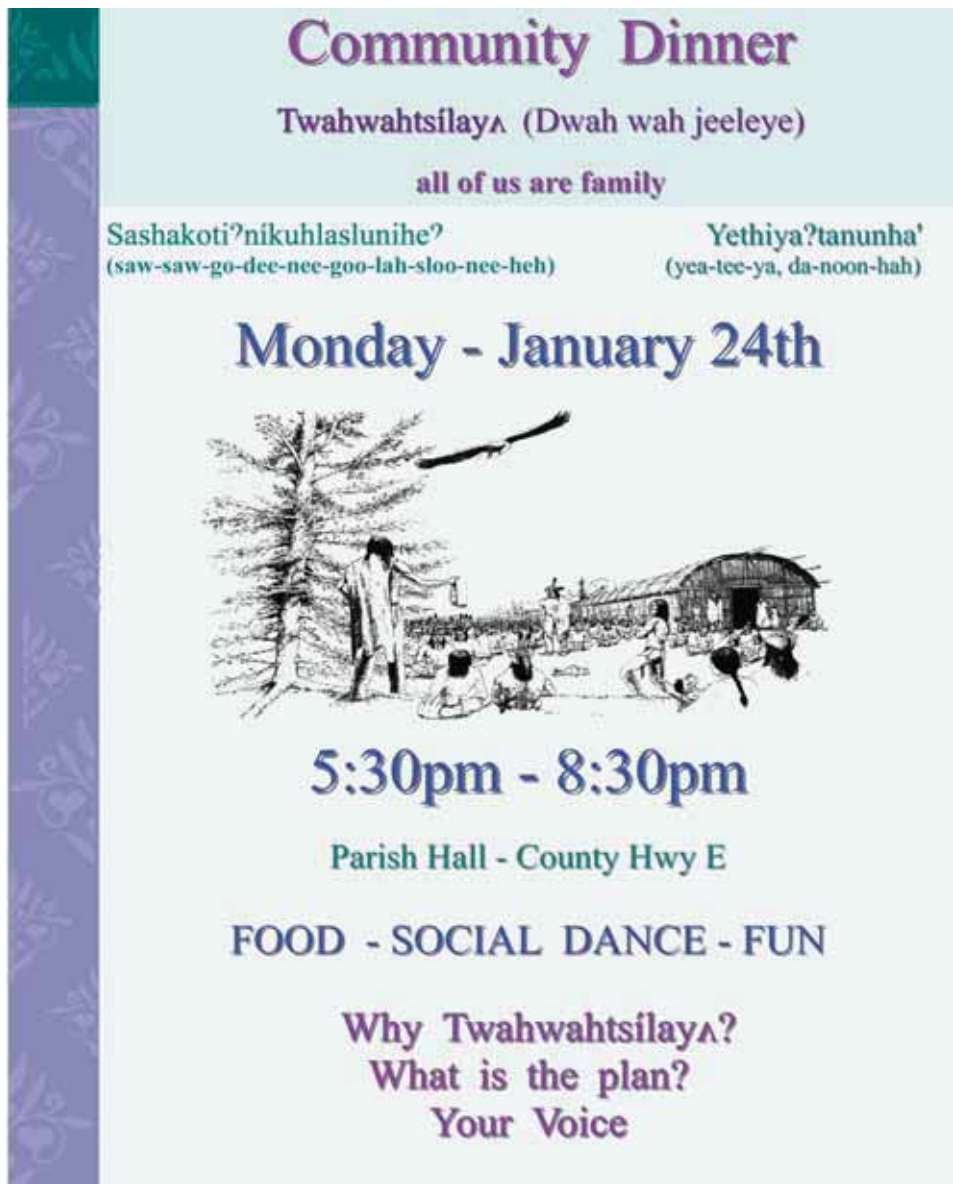
Reaching area youth through Oneida culture



Twahwahtsílayʌ
(Dwah wah jeeleye)
We all are family

Good Day All. As you will remember we received a grant at the end of last year. This grant was written to help us start programming for youth. Over the years we have seen tribal youth become more entrenched in the justice system. In 2001 as group of individuals from different departments got together to try to find a way to help our youth and their families stay out of county court systems and learn to move ahead in a good way. We found answers within the Oneida History and Culture. To be specific we looked at the time of the Peacekeeper and the Great Law. We also looked at current situation where youth were getting involved with law enforcement and courts. Here we found that often youth who were getting in trouble in the community were not successful in school and youth getting in trouble in school weren't successful in the community. We therefore looked to develop early intervention strategies in schools and in the community. First we began with Shasakotinikuhlaslunihe, (saw-saw-go-dee-nee-goo-lah-sloo-nee-heh), those who gather around to readdress their minds early intervention community teams. The we looked at Yethyatanunha, (yea-tee-ya, da-noon-hah), we are watching over them a program for youth who are not succeeding in traditional schools. We are now looking at building a stronger community of support through you.

In order to give you more information and to have an opportunity to share (good ideas), while having fun (a social dance) and enjoying a meal (good food), we are having a community dinner on January 24 at Parish Hall at 5:30 pm. Please, come with your hungry bellies, good ideas, and dancing shoes.

If you are interested or have any questions feel free to call either Ron Hill at 920-496-5385 or myself Alex Lei-Nako 920-490-3774.

New ONHS Diversity Club a bit hit

By Chanel Garcia

ONHS teachers Amy Amschler and Laura Studee are the founders of Diversity Club at ONHS.

As to why they started this club, Laura stated, "There are many who feel different, and want to be accepted."

So, far the group has had two meetings. Interviews with the students who have gone to the meetings were not available due to protection and their assurance of them being anonymous.

As far as what has occurred at the meetings, Laura said, "All the students were asked about their day and how things were going as a way to start. We wanted them to feel safe."

Starting a "Diversity Club" at a Native American school might strike some as ironic, but Laura said, "Even though we are a Native American school, there are still differences besides our ethnicity."

Only four students showed up for the first meeting in November, but Laura said they were "expecting more."

The turnout for the December meeting was much, much better. Set just before Winter Break, that meeting was a big hit, with over twenty people showing up to bake and decorate cookies.

At the January meeting, the group plans to set up an election for group leaders.

As for long-range goals, Laura intends for the club to "have more activities and try to help as many kids as possible that feel left out." She said she hopes that the club can be a place to have fun and, hopefully, help kids with their problems.

"You don't have to have problems to join," she remarked.

If students are interested, they should come to the next meeting which will be sometime in mid-January. It is not too late to join.

They also provide snacks and rides afterwards, if you can not get one home. With all the activities, such as cookie-decorating and open, honest discussion, why not join?

College of Menominee Nation and you

By Chanel Garcia

I have been attending Oneida Nation High School since the second semester of my junior year. Some people think lowly of our school due to a small student population. But they have not experienced this school for what it truly is.

This school has culture and many more opportunities for students than a regular school.

One of the best opportunities is that you can earn college and high school credits at the College of the Menominee Nation (CMN).

The program that sponsors this is the Learn and Earn Program, which pays for your course and books, so you just have to show up ready to work. They offer you a list of courses that range from 2-3 credits. If you take four or more credits, there is a fee involved.

The program requires that you maintain at least a C average or you may not be eligible to sign up for another class. The credits you take at CMN can count as college credits for when you either decide to stay at CMN or go to another college in Wisconsin. Some schools outside of Wisconsin may not take the courses and credits, but the majority will. The courses also help you by helping you graduate early by taking credits you need that can be offered at CMN.

This is a really great opportunity. I myself will have twelve college credits by the time I graduate.

Even if you don't want to go to college, you should still consider CMN, because it can help you graduate high school early. In the end, your plans may change and you may end up pursuing college because of CMN. Either way you can't go wrong.

Music notes - YouTube guitarist

By Bradley Sievers

One guitarist/musician that I want to give credit to is this one dude on YouTube.

He goes by the name "musicman1066." The dude wears a white mask and his style of playing is basically the same as mine, except he is way better.

Last I checked, he was the same age as me and… he just kicks butt!

The solo he made in the song "The Unseen" blew my mind. The sweep picking he demonstrated in that song I hope to accomplish sometime in my lifetime.

I believe he plays an LTD H-1001—I could be wrong—but it's one of the main reasons I got my guitar which is and LTD M series. It cost me my Christmas, but I don't regret it at all, it is the coolest and most awesome guitar I will ever hope to own.

Back to musicman1066, I recommend you check him out on YouTube. You'll be amazed.

My Scoop

The Sky is Falling

By Mary Yetsitsyalakwas Powless
Thunderhawk Times

Ok, so the word on street is that the world is coming to an end! This is said because of the incident that happened in the following areas: Arkansas, Louisiana, and Sweden.

I am sure you have heard of all the black birds falling from the sky and dying right before midnight on New Years Eve. If not, I'll be happy to inform you right now. There were an estimated 5,000 dead birds that covered a one-mile area in Arkansas, and 500 covered a quarter-mile in Louisiana.

The scientists say that the reason for this is because fireworks could have terrified the birds while asleep, and the scare could have been traumatizing that it might have killed the birds. Then again, the birds had broken wings, beaks, and other serious injuries that couldn't have been caused from hitting the ground. So the next theory is, a "freak of weather," because a storm went through the night of New Year's Eve.

In Sweden, there were 100,000 drum fish washing up on the shores dead. The explanation for this is said to be, "done by diseases," which I think is highly unlikely! Simply because how are ALL these fish going to get the same disease and die at the same time? A mystery don't you think? It's kind of mind blowing!

Well, I guess this very possible if the water was intoxicated with toxins, and these fish all are inhabited in the same spot to get a disease. So it is possible.

So, this crazy, mind blowing news just makes you think doesn't it?

Is the explanation for these unexpected incidents reasonable, or is this a sign that the world we love so much is coming to an end? And are we are just a little too late to try and save the Earth now?

Yearbook cover

Mary Yetsi Powless
Thunderhawk Times Editor

It's that time again—Yearbook Cover Contest Time.

Here at ONHS, every year we have a year book cover contest within the entire school" ninth through twelfth grades, all ages, and no discrimination against anyone who wants to "give'er a shot."

Becky Anderson, high school art teacher, puts up flyers every year to inform the students of the contest. Then, the creativity kicks in.

The criteria for the contest are: The cover must be in full-color, must have Oneida Nation High School 2010-2011 somewhere in the cover design, needs to be on an 8 ½ x 11 inch paper, and it is due by Jan. 31st, 2011.

The Top Three Prizes are: 1st Place-$75.00, 2nd Place-$50.00, and 3rd Place-$25.00.

Also, all three places will receive a free year book.

Not only are there these top three places, but three other lucky contestants will receive an Honorable Mention award.

Pretty sweet. I know, right?

I encourage all students at ONHS to give'er a shot. Who knows; maybe you'll be walking away $75.00 richer?

"Everyone is a winner, and I hope all the students at least try," Anderson stated with a smile. Also, one more thing, the teachers will be judging the cover designs.

Powless wins award

By Thunderhawk Times Staff

The Environmental Protection Agency held a national art contest recently and announced one winner, two runners-up and seven honorable mentions.

Amongst the Honorable Mentions was ONHS Freshman Vincent Powless.

According to its news release, the contest "challenged participants to create posters about protecting the environment and reporting environmental violations."

The contest was open to "all middle and high school students who are members of a federally recognized tribe."

The artwork will be used on the EPA website and on posters "encouraging the reporting of environmental violations."

Shopping around for the right fitness plan?

Review Contracts Before Making Any Commitments In The New Year

MADISON – The start of a new year often means the start, or at least intentions, of a healthier lifestyle for many Wisconsin consumers. The Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection encourages consumers to do their homework before signing a contract, or making an upfront payment to a fitness or weight reduction center.

"The exciting prospect of a 'new you' can cloud a consumer's better judgment," said Michelle Reinen, Director of the Bureau of Consumer Protection. "Take the time to visit different centers. Compare the programs, facilities and membership fees before entering into any agreement. If you are going to put more than $100 down or consider paying in full, verify the center has proof of financial responsibility on file with Consumer Protection."

When in doubt, consider a short-term membership to begin with; don't be persuaded to purchase an expensive long-term program unless you are sure you will stay with it. Consumers sometimes feel pressured by persuasive sales techniques.

"Fitness and weight reduction center contracts are legally binding documents," added Reinen. "Most centers do not allow contract cancellations – meaning consumers who stop using the fitness center are still responsible for making payments for the entire term of their contract. Some centers do make exceptions if members relocate to a different city or state."

Wisconsin consumers are protected by state laws regulating both fitness and weight reduction centers.

Fitness Centers

Memberships cannot be sold for a period greater than two years. All memberships must have an expiration date. If a center collects more than $100, in advance of providing services, it is required to have a $25,000 form of financial responsibility filed with the state. The law includes specific contract and staff requirements. In addition, Wisconsin law requires fitness center contracts to include a three-day right to cancel. Consumers regretting a membership purchase must put their cancellation request in writing.

Weight Reduction Centers

Memberships cannot exceed two years; unless the contract includes a weight maintenance program. In this case, the contract can be extended to a period not to exceed three years. The full price of the membership must be disclosed, including any interest or other charges. Like fitness centers, weight reduction centers requiring members to pay more than $100 in advance fees are required to establish proof of financial responsibility with the state. New members must be informed of their three-day right to cancel.

• See 8B, Fitness

"We strongly recommend consumers get all membership information in writing," concluded Reinen. "Never rely on verbal promises. Should an issue arise – the wording of a contract will likely determine the outcome."

Shakopee Mdewakanton open organic market

PRIOR LAKE, Minn. (AP) – The Shakopee Mdewakanton (mid-WUH'-ka-ten) Sioux Community is getting into the local and organic food craze with its own natural food market on its reservation south of the Twin Cities.

The market called Mazopiya (mah-zoh-PEE-ya) opened to the public this week. It offers a large inventory of organic items including free-range grass fed meats and local and organic produce, as well as a deli and prepared meal area with café seating and a coffee bar.

Community member Lori Watso, the driving force behind the store, says Sioux ancestors thrived on a diet free of foods with pesticides, growth hormones and manmade chemicals, and that trying to return to that tradition will pay health benefits for the community.

To schedule an appointment for you or your child, please call the Oneida Community Health Center at 920-869-2711or by calling Community Health Nursing Department at 920-869-4840.

Vaccine Preventable Disease of the Month

Pertussis (whooping cough) can cause serious illness in infants, children and adults. The disease usually starts with cold-like symptoms and maybe a mild cough or fever. After 1 to 2 weeks, severe coughing can begin. Unlike the common cold, pertussis can become a series of coughing fits that continues for weeks.

Early symptoms can last for 1 to 2 weeks and usually include:

- Runny nose
- Low-grade fever (generally minimal throughout the course of the disease)
- Mild, occasional cough
- Apnea – a pause in breathing (in infants)

As the disease progresses, the traditional symptoms of pertussis appear and include:

- Paroxysms (fits) of many, rapid coughs followed by a high-pitched "whoop"
- Vomiting (throwing up)
- Exhaustion (very tired) after coughing fits

The best way to prevent pertussis (whooping cough) among infants, children, teens, and adults is to get vaccinated. Also, keep infants and other people at high risk for pertussis complications away from infected people.

In the United States, the recommended pertussis vaccine for infants and children is called DTaP. This is a combination vaccine that protects against three diseases: diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis. For maximum protection against pertussis, children need five DTaP shots. The first three shots are given at 2, 4, and 6 months of age. The fourth shot is given between 15 and 18 months of age, and a fifth shot is given before a child enters school, at 4–6 years of age. Parents can also help protect infants by keeping them away as much as possible from anyone who has cold symptoms or is coughing.

Vaccine protection for pertussis, tetanus and diphtheria fades with time. Before 2005, the only booster available contained protection against tetanus and diphtheria (called Td), and was recommended for teens and adults every 10 years. Today there are boosters for pre-teens, teens and adults that contain protection against tetanus, diphtheria and pertussis (Tdap). Pre-teens going to the doctor for their regular check-up at age 11 or 12 years should get a dose of Tdap. Teens who did not get this vaccine at the 11- or 12-year-old check-up should get vaccinated at their next visit. Adults who did not get Tdap as a pre-teen or teen should get one dose of Tdap instead of the Td booster.

Most pregnant women who were not previously vaccinated with Tdap should get one dose of Tdap postpartum before leaving the hospital or birthing center. Getting vaccinated with Tdap is especially important for families with and caregivers of new infants.

The easiest thing for adults to do is to get Tdap instead of their next regular tetanus booster—that Td shot that they were supposed to get every 10 years. The dose of Tdap can be given earlier than the 10-year mark, so it is a good idea for adults to talk to a healthcare provider about what is best for their specific situation.

Enhanced VA Health Care Enrollment Opportunity Closing for Certain Combat Vets

WASHINGTON – Certain combat Veterans who were discharged from active duty service before Jan. 28, 2003 have until Jan. 27, 2011 to take advantage of their enhanced health care enrollment opportunity through the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA).

"While there is no time limit for Veterans to apply for the VA health care they earned with their service, I highly encourage this group of combat Veterans to take advantage of the enhanced enrollment window to use their health care benefits through this simplified process," said Secretary of Veterans Affairs Eric K. Shinseki. "VA has health care eligibility specialists online and at every medical center eager to help Veterans take advantage of this opportunity."

The enhanced enrollment window was provided for in Public Law 110-181, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008. That law gave combat Veterans who served after Nov. 11, 1998 but separated from service before Jan. 28, 2003, and did not enroll before Jan. 28, 2008, three years, beginning on Jan. 28, 2008, to apply for the enhanced enrollment opportunity.

These Veterans will still be able to apply for health benefits with VA after Jan. 27, but will have their status for receiving VA health care determined under normal VA procedures that base health care priority status on the severity of a service-connected disability or other eligibility factors. This would mean some Veterans could face income or asset-based restrictions, as well as delays in establishing their VA health care eligibility while their disability status is determined.

Since the inception of the enhanced enrollment opportunity, VA has sent more than 750,000 personal letters to eligible Veterans and hosted thousands of outreach efforts through OIF/OEF and enrollment coordinators stationed at every VA medical center.

Since June 2010, VA sent another 194,000 personal letters to give every eligible Veteran a chance to take advantage of this opportunity, but to date only 13,000 of these Veterans have enrolled.

The law does continue to provide the enhanced health care enrollment window to combat Veterans who were discharged or released from active service on or after January 28, 2003. For these Veterans, the five-year enrollment period begins on the discharge or separation date of the service member from active duty military service, or in the case of multiple call-ups, the most recent discharge date.

Veterans can apply for enrollment online at www.1010ez.med.va.gov/sec/vha/1010ez, by contacting VA at 1-877-222-VETS (8387) or with the help of a VA health care eligibility specialist at any VA medical center. Go to www2.va.gov/directory/guide/home.asp for locations. For more information regarding enrollment, visit VA's eligibility site at www.va.gov/healtheligibility.

Oneida teens, adults participate in snowshoe tying class

The OCHC Diabetes Team and the Oneida Adventures program join forces to teach Oneida teens and adults the art of snowshoe tying. "This is hard work, but it will be worth it!," said Cindy Young of Oneida Adventures.

The Oneida Community Health Center's Diabetic team received federal grant money to help individual's manage their diabetes. The epidemic of Type 2 diabetes in Tribal communities is associated with decreasing levels of physical activity and an increasing prevalence of obesity. Promoting physical activity is a crucial component of the management of type 2 diabetes. The Oneida Community Health Center (OCHC) Diabetes Team partnered with Oneida Adventures to offer patients with diabetes an opportunity to make snow shoes. Maraget VanDen Heuvel from the Diabetic Team worked with her team to evaluate the individuals and Kip Miller and Mark Steinbach from the Oneida Adventure program provided the instruction on how to tie the snowshoes. The collaboration was an effort to increase physical activity, which is one of the goals of the OCHC Diabetes Team. Physical activity is anything that gets a person moving if performed on a regular basis, at the right intensity. Physical activity can have a positive effect on body composition, heart health, flexibility, and strength. Most importantly, physical activity can have a direct impact on improving blood sugar control.

The Oneida Adventure program strives to provide programs that help people use adventure based activities as a way to learn about themselves in a fun and challenging way. When participants learn the art of snowshoe tying, they will quickly realize the importance of following a well-prescribed plan on correctly tying the patterns. If one small step is missed, it may not be notice until later. Even though missing a step may have little impact on the structural/safety of the shoe, it does affect the lacing strength and durability. Experientially this can teach participants about the importance of following a well–prescribed plan to manage their diabetes. The Oneida Adventure program is doing a similar program with the teens in the community through a Prevention grant administrated by Kristen Shaw, Prevention Specialist, Behavioral Health Department. The focus is on getting the kids involved in healthy, physical activities which will hopefully lead to making better choices after school. The experiential approach is very effective in teaching teens important life lessons. The staff applies concepts to prevention and how they relate to following steps to tying the snowshoes. This activity can be very challenging and requires the individual to develop some patience, which is a great life lesson to learn.

Snowshoeing is a fun, inexpensive and an active way to get outdoors and enjoy nature in a beautiful setting. It's very easy to learn and a great cardiovascular workout, along with being an entertaining social activity. The Oneida Adventure Program has been working with the Diabetic team the past couple of years providing lifelong recreational opportunities for individuals who may qualify for the diabetic team program.

The Mission of the Church Restoration Committee (CRC) is organizing, planning, managing and raising funds that shall benefit the maintenance, historic preservation and restoration of the facilities and property of the Church of the Holy Apostles, Oneida, Wisconsin, a congregation of the Diocese of Fond du Lac.

Oneida Ancestors Cultural, Historical, Spiritual Connection

Stone Church: The early years…

Special to Kalihwisaks
WWW.holyapostlesoneida.com
CRC representative: 920 819 0563

To all Oneidas,

Several years ago a church restoration company was asked to give the Holy Apostles Church authorities an estimate as to what it would cost to fix the many areas of depreciation the church was/is experiencing. Over the years Holy Apostles has had various touch up areas fixed and some are still holding. However, the major structure of the church is in dire need of repair, not only for liability purposes but for the longevity of the church itself.

As mentioned in the last issue of the Kali a core group of individuals are moving forward to recruit more members to help Save Our Sanctuary (SOS). We want Oneida People to understand that this effort is inclusive of all Oneidas, full well knowing that after coming to Wisconsin Oneida members traveled different roads in their spiritual journeys. In the meantime Holy Apostles stands as a reverent reflection of the love the Oneida had/have for an awesome God or Creator.

The CRC (Church Restoration Committee) has extensive documentation on the repairs which are critically needed. The restoration we refer to will be done in approximately twelve phases; nine on the outside and four within. The most critical will be addressed first. Also, as mentioned, the consultants who specialize in church restoration, have expert experience in this field. The CRC has set a goal of approximately two million dollars which includes maintenance of the structure. We are not talking about church services nor pay for clergy.

This past week while hanging the cedar boughs made by church members two of the gentlemen who climbed into the church rafters took note and pictures of the openings on the roof which allowed them to see straight out to the sky.

As Oneidas we often refer to our history and when we look around (here in Oneida) we see a few remnants of that history, some preserved at the Cultural Heritage site. However, one of the greatest historical structures, built by our people and protected by Her stands tall and proud on Freedom Road.

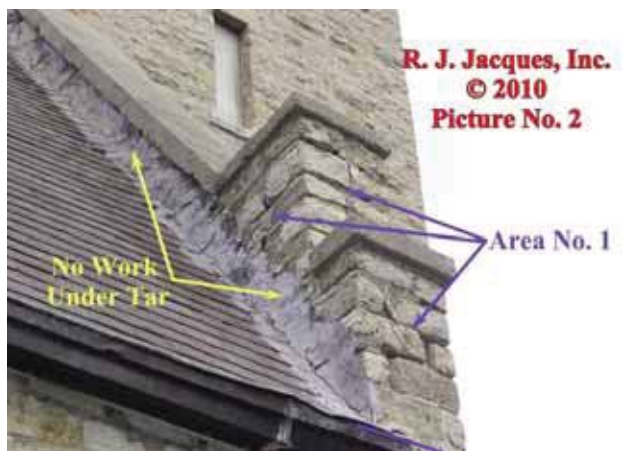
We have come a long way as a community, our ancestors should have had it so easy. They labored hard and long to quarry the stone, haul it by horse and buggy and then build it. That was then, this is now. Can we who have so much, neglect the work and love of our last seven generations of ancestors?

Restoration fund raising plans are in process and we will put forward our best efforts to save this historical, cultural monument built by our people, we hope and pray there will come others to help us in this cause.

Apostles Episcopal Church is often referred to as "the big stone church" - she is a church whose history in interwoven with all Oneida People whose ancestors migrated here in Wisconsin from New York. Our connection goes back over three hundred years ago when the Oneidas worked with the Queen of England who in turn sent missionaries through The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

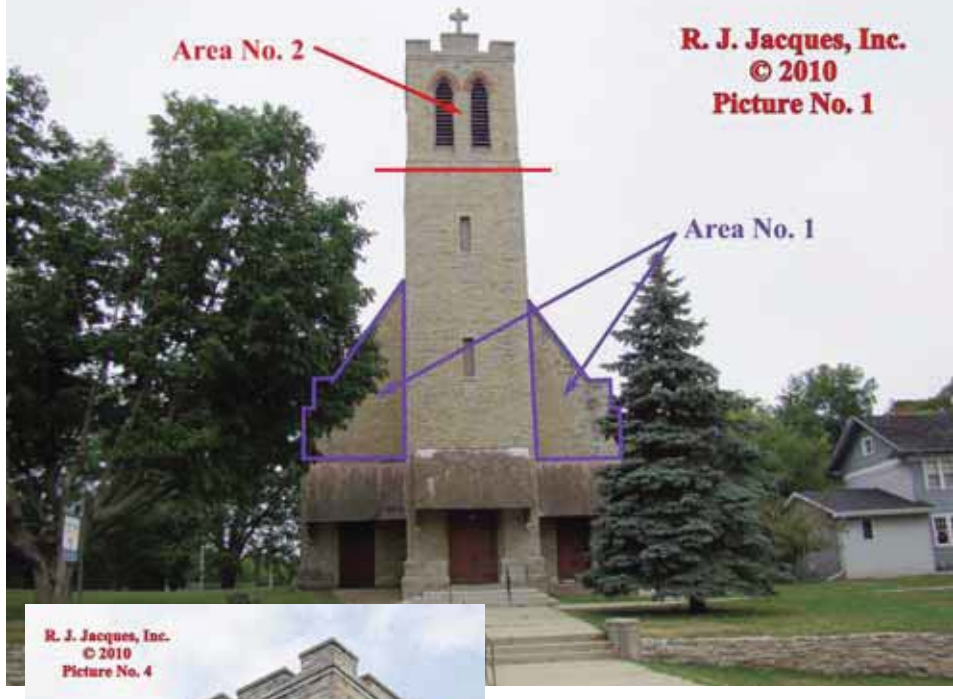
Ultimately the Oneida Indian Mission was built in 1702. During that time the missionaries helped the Oneida translate their songs and prayers into the Mohawk language to better understand the Christian religion.

During the 1700's the Oneida faced some very difficult times; the French and Indian War, The Revolutionary War, the split in the Confederacy and the forever land hungry colonists. The US government was (and still is not) a friend to Indian Country. There is not doubt in my mind that most Oneidas have no clue about the incredible hardships suffered by our ancestors.

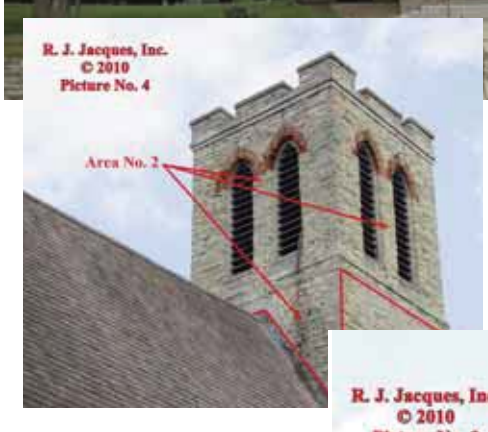


In the early 1800's many Oneida moved West to Wisconsin Territory and settled at Duck Creek, no easy task. In 1838, once settled, they built a small wooden church (such was there dedication to their Creator/God). Bishop Kemper traveled to Oneida to consecrate the new church and thus it is the first consecrated Episcopal Church in the Territory of Wisconsin; September 1839.

The Oneida had barely settled into their new homes when the government was seeking to move all Indians west of the Mississippi, this included some very prominent "Green Bay Men" as referred to in some of the history written by Oneida authors. The Episcopal Oneida Indian Mission had some great Oneida leaders who were supported by the missionaries and were able to old the ground (reservation)and prevent the removal – again, no easy task. The Church and Her missionaries are part and parcel of our Oneida History, they fought the good fight right along side our ancestors.



That was then, this is now. I often use or over use the quote by Charles Dickens in his book, The Tale of Two Cities: "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times". The "Big Stone Church" stands in the middle of our reservation as a reminder about our history and our ancestors who with much love, sweat and tears built her. However, as our community grows more prosperous and many move away the prosperity has not reached Her weather and time worn surface and structure – She needs critical help.



In the meantime there are some who respect our history and those who made it. We cannot stand idle with so much to be thankful for and not preserve this beautiful historical structure. An organization has been formed which we call CRC (for Church Restoration Committee). The goal or object of this committee is to seek and find ways to restore the Church and make sure it is maintained for all posterity, this is our only mission. We hope there will be others who will join us, those who will contribute in any way they can. We are made up of church members and community people – religion is not the basis. We met every Thursday evening in the former convent building on the church property at 5:00 pm.

Future plans include a series of articles outlining the history of the Oneida Mission and the Oneida People.

Free Fitness Assessments and Wellness Profiles for January

By Brad Sosinsky
Fitness Specialist
920.490-3852
bsosinsk@oneidanation.org

Attention all members at Oneida Family Fitness. During the month of January we will be offering free fitness assessments and wellness profiles to all current members and future members. So start your New Year's resolution the correct way and schedule an appointment.

Fitness assessments are a great starting point for a person to determine their baseline. Your results will help you determine the best exercise régime for you. Fitness assessments are also very helpful when a client is reassessed to determine areas of improvement. Assessment results will help the trainer and client decide how to alter your program to maximize client success. A fitness assessment measures:

1) Blood pressure and resting heart rate
2) Weight and body circumferences
3) Body fat % analysis
4) Aerobic fitness
5) Bicep arm strength
6) Back flexibility.

A wellness profile is a comprehensive evaluation of your overall health, disease risk and fitness level. Basic, health and wellness information and results are compiled to generate a personalized health risk report. The report provides you with preventative lifestyle recommendations, allowing you to take a proactive role in managing your health.

Don't wait until weeks or even months later to decide what your fitness and health levels are at. Take advantage of these two measuring tools and get your fitness plan going in the right direction. Have this be your beginning step to a great New Year and a healthier lifestyle.

Looking for help during a down economy

The Kalihwisaks will be focusing on the effects of the economic downturn and sharing stories of Oneidas struggling in these financially hard times. This is the first story of the series.

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

A circle, a cycle, a juggling act; these are all words used by Oneida Social Services (OSS) employees Pricilla Leverance, Barb Metoxen and Mary Motquin to describe a pattern of poverty many Oneida individuals and families find themselves in.

"We see people who might have had a job, and their hours have gotten cut down, and so they're back here," said Metoxen who is the Economic Support Program Manager.

The OSS staff administers programs such as Foodshare, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF), and childcare services.

Community Economic Support Director Leverance reports an upswing in requests.

"The demand for walk-in service has really seen an increase," she said.

Job loss and irregular hours lead many people to seek assistance.

"In childcare, what we're seeing is we have moms that have to work two part-time jobs, because they can't find a full time job," said Motquin. "The other trend that I'm seeing is we have more families coming in that have to work for temp agencies, and it's very difficult to write child care authorizations for them under one of the state grants because they're not stable on their hours."

Working parents may also find they're paying more for childcare.

"In Wisconsin, the daycare rates have been frozen since 2006 in the state system, but in reality the daycares went up on their price every year, so (the parents are) having top pay a higher and higher parent payment," said Motquin.

Those who have lost their jobs can apply for TANF, but that doesn't go very far.

"TANF is only a small check of $653 a month. We've got people paying $700-$750 a month for rent, so that barely helps them with that," said Metoxen. "It's a lot of all of us working together to see which program can help with what here, and first we look at grant funded programs, and then we look at as a last resort the tribal funded programs. It's like we're doing a little balancing act here."

"We see more families, and when you're talking to them, you can sense there's a high level of stress," said Motquin, who stated her program offers a respite option for families with children.

"If they need a little time out, our family services grant is designed to try and reduce child abuse and

Deke Suri appears for preliminary hearing

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Outagamie County Court Commissioner Brian Figy found that there was probable cause that Deke Suri committed four counts of first degree intentional homicide at a preliminary hearing held Thursday, January 20.

Suri is charged with attempting to kill his four sons, ages 5 to 12, by giving each boy two to three tablets of a prescription drug Trazodone on December 27, 2010.

Suri's defense attorney Jeffery Oswald filed to get the charges dismissed, stating that Suri had not given the youths enough of the drug to kill them, and had called 911 two times

"Deke thought that the boys were going to die that night until he called 911," said Oswald reading from the criminal complaint. The request to dismiss was denied.

Detective Sargent Ronald King of the Oneida Police Department testified that a diary belonging to Suri contained details of how Suri wanted he and his sons to be buried as well as which funeral home to use and mementos to place in the caskets. King also testified to an interview done with Suri after the incident.

"He wanted the boys to go on a journey with him, he didn't want the boys to see him suffer, he wanted the

Suicide prevention training featured at event

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Community members gathered at Parish Hall on Tuesday, January 18 to address the eighth leading cause of death amongst Native Americans – suicide.

Presenters Rob Haen and Ken Ninham of Oneida Behavioral Health (OBH) explained a basic intervention technique called QPR which stands for Question, Persuade, Refer.

"You don't have to have a PHD to do this work, you just have to have some compassion, some understanding," said Ninham.

A video produced by Wise Youth Group demonstrated the steps of QPR. The young people role played asking someone if she was thinking of committing suicide, and then persuaded her to seek counseling. In the refer step, the youths suggested people for the young lady to go talk to.

"Confronting a person about suicide is the best thing to do. Some people don't come out and say it, and usually it does not cause them to be angry, it usually helps the person calm down, and they're actually thankful that you asked that question, said Haen.

Doug Haen, left and Ken Ninham, far right, explained QPR - Question, Persuade, Refer - as a process most people can employ to help prevent suicide.

According to Ninham, the best thing someone can do for a person considering suicide is to listen to them.

"Listen to their problem, give them your full attention," he said.

Haen and Ninham listed signs that might indicate an individual may be prone to suicide such as changes in behavior, drug and alcohol abuse, sleep disorders, and complaints of being bored. Life events such as the death of a spouse, physical and mental health problems and break ups may also contribute to suicidal thoughts.

Finally, the two recommended keeping a list of contacts and numbers to refer people to such as a guidance councilor, OBH, or the Oneida Police Department.

To contact Oneida Behavioral Health, call 920-490-3790;

Triage 920-490-3860 or call 1-888-490-2457.

The event was sponsored by the Oneida Housing Authority.

boys to go with him to die," King testified.

In his final argument, Oswald argued that Suri did not intend to kill his sons.

"No doctor is going to get up here and tell you that giving two-or-three Trazodone is going to kill somebody," said Oswald.

However, Outagamie District Attorney Melinda Tempelis countered that just because Suri did not know how much of the drug to use did not mean he did not intend to commit murder.

"Did the defendant act toward the commission of a crime? Yes, he did act. He gave prescription medication to his children with the intent to kill them," said Templelis.

An arraignment is scheduled for February 9 at 11:00am in Branch 7, Courtroom 7.

All vets meeting

There is an All Veterans meeting called for on Wednesday, February 16 at 6:00 P.M. at the VFW for the purpose of discussing the theme of the Oneida Code Talkers Medal. Any and all family members of known Code Talkers are encouraged to attend. This will be the last and final meeting for this purpose. Shortly thereafter, the results of that meeting will be sent to Betty Birdsong at the United States Mint so that an artist's rendering can be developed from those ideas gathered at that meeting.

Oneida themes on new Duck Creek Bridge

On the Hwy 54 route through Oneida, most people know how fast the traffic goes pass the Oneida Housing Site I, in Oneida, WI. The speed of the traffic, the number of trucks on that route, and the aging Duck Creek Bridge are reasons why the WI Dept of Transportation, (WISDOT) are making changes there.

The new Duck Creek Bridge and some roundabouts feature Oneida tribal designs. The WISDOT and engineers will display the designs at the Radisson Hotel, Feb. 5th, in Ashwaubenon, WI, from 8 am to 10 am before the GTC meeting. Oneida tribal members are invited to review and comment on the designs.

The engineering firm, Mead & Hunt, is coordinating the tribal designs into their plans for WISDOT to build the bridge. Plans for new bridge include creating pedestrian and bicycle paths under the bridge.

One unique feature will be support columns in the shape of cattail reeds designed by Kiona McDaniel. The design theme, under the bridge, is about Oneida stories including the Creation Story, Three Sisters, Seven Brothers, Thunder Boy, and others. Oneida tribal artists include Sharon Sarnowski, Jennifer M. Stevens, Brenda John-Stevens, Dylan Benton, and Ki McDaniel.

The detail construction of the bridge will include the look of local quarry stone as seen on the Holy Apostles Church, Oneida clinic, and the new VFW post.

The WISDOT will begin construction of the new bridge next year. The WISDOT will pay for re-routing of Hwy 54, round-abouts, and bridge along with funds from the BIA Indian Roads Project.

In Loving Memory

In Loving Memory of...

Josh Webster

Who passed away 11 years ago on January 21, 2000

I think about you often which is nothing new
I think about all the love you gave
And all the joy you brought into our life
And everyone you knew.

I think about all the times we shared laughter and all the bumps in the road traveled together

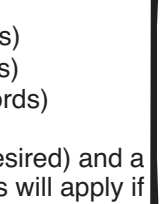
I think about our softball days and you Tearing up the bases

I laugh about our volleyball days and not being your best setter!
But most of all, I think about the love we shared as mother and son and how your smile could light up the room.

Rest in peace my son, until we meet again!

Love Mom, Brian, Jerome, Jermaine, Jason and BJ

Thank You!



To Family/Friends of Deacon Edmund Powless...

The family of Deacon Edmund Powless wish to express our sincere appreciation to everyone who has stepped forward to offer support of any kind during our time of great loss.

There are no words to adequately convey our deepest appreciation for expressions of support we've received from across the United States. We do not wish to overlook acknowledging anyone and hope you will accept this form of thanks from all of us.

Sincerely,
Blanche Powless, Pat & Cornelius Hill
Sister Theresa Rose Powless
Kathy Hughes, Dottie & Doug Krull
Barb & Rick Dickson

Thank You!

The family of Louise Archiquette would like to express our most sincere thanks and appreciation to those who helped during the loss of our mother. We would like to thank friends for the prayers offered, gifts, and food donations. Your kindness and generosity was greatly appreciated. A special thank you to the Oneida Hymn Singers, the Oneida Assembly of God Church, the Muehl & Beottcher funeral home, Pastor Johnson, Katherine Johnson, Beverly Anderson, Debbie Melchert, Brandy Suri and children Dakota, Cheney, Seth, Leah, Tabitha, Carissa and Charity, Maria Danforth, Peggy Bork, Karen Nolan, Vicky Johnson, Debbie (Webster) Melchert, Virgie Dessart, for your wonderful support, and to all of those who sent cards, flowers, called, visited. We would also like to especial thank (Louise's grandson-in-law) John Berry for making every family member a DVD of the special memories of our mom. Our apologies to anyone we may have forgotten.

Sadly missed by:

Oneida Life Ins. Plan Plus (OLIPP) is underway

Frequently asked questions about OLIPP

Now that the Oneida Life Insurance Plan Plus (OLIPP) has been in place since October 1, 2009, the Trust and Enrollment Departments would like to answer some frequently asked questions.

Q. Why is it important to return a completed beneficiary form to the Enrollment Dept?

A. The completed form will assist in processing the life insurance benefit at a crucial time. Without the form, the Enrollment department will need to research the next of kin. That research takes time. The form will also clarify who you want to receive the life insurance and how much. You may list several beneficiaries.

Q. Can I name a beneficiary who is non-tribal?

A. Yes, there are no limitations on who may be named as Primary or Contingent beneficiary(ies).

Q. What is the difference between Primary and Contingent beneficiary?

A. A Primary beneficiary is a person(s) or entity you choose to receive your life insurance proceeds.

A Contingent beneficiary is a person(s) or entity you choose to receive your life insurance proceeds if the listed Primary beneficiary(ies) dies or the entity chosen no longer exists.

Q. What is meant by the percentage section on the beneficiary form?

A. The percentage is the portion of the proceeds you would like to allocate to the named beneficiary(ies). If more than one beneficiary is named, the percentage must equal 100%. The percentage portion is not linked to blood quantum.

Q. Where do I mail the Beneficiary Designation Form?

A. The form is to be mailed to:

Oneida Enrollment Department
PO Box 365
Oneida, WI 54155

Q. Do I need to pay a fee?

A. No, the insurance premiums are paid for by the Oneida Tribe.

Q. Is there a deadline for returning the form?

A. No, the Beneficiary form may be turned in anytime and may be changed anytime. If there is no form on file, the proceeds will be paid according to the following Naming Sequence:

- Widow or widower
- Child(ren) (natural and/or legally adopted)
- Grandchild(ren)
- Parent(s)
- Brother(s) and/or sister(s)
- Member's estate

Q. May I buy additional insurance?

A. Sorry, but not at this time. We hope to expand the benefits in the future.

Q. How much is the Oneida Tribe paying for the insurance?

A. The Tribe is paying approximately $2 million a year in insurance premiums. Of that amount, $180,000 is used to administer the insurance payments annually.

Q. Why change from the previous burial fund?

A. The previous fund was no longer meeting inflationary costs. OLIPP enhances both the Oneida burial fund and the Federal burial benefit.

Q. I did not receive my form in the mail. How can I get one?

A. You may access the OLIPP documents via the website www.oneidanation.org/enrollment/OLIPP.aspx or you may call or write to:

Oneida Enrollment Department
P O Box 365
Oneida, WI 54155-0365

Phone: 920-869-2214 or Toll Free 1-800-236-2214

Thanks for your attention to the current OLIPP FAQ's.

Ho-chunk visit Oneida Trust Dept.

Legislators and executives from the Ho-chunk Nation visited the Oneida Trust Department and various oneida service areas on Wednesday, January 19. Above, the group met with Oneida Higher Education to learn how it administers its program. Members of the group also attended a Trust/Enrollment Committee meeting.

Update on Oneida Life Insurance Plan Plus

Submitted by Carole Liggins
Chairwoman Oneida Trust/ Enrollment Committee

The implementation and administration of the Oneida Life Insurance Plan Plus program has been successful. OLIPP has always been designed to be a unique benefit that has numerous features and benefits. One of the Trust Committee's goals was that the program be as tax efficient as possible. Although, the life insurance benefit ($15,000) is tax free, the EPIC Life Insurance Company recommends beneficiaries seek advice from a tax professional. The benefit is tax free, but we are still working on getting clarification on the status of the premium payment with the Internal Revenue Service. This letter is to update you on the insurance premium status and process.

The Oneida Elderly Per Capita, Higher Education and General Welfare Trust fund pays the premiums to EPIC Life Insurance Company on behalf of Tribal Members. Currently the premiums cost $10.68 per month for each Tribal Member totaling $128.16 paid by the Trust per year for each Tribal Member.

The premium payment for Tribal Members is considered an economic benefit which typically is also considered taxable. However, the Oneida Life Insurance Plan Plus was created under a general welfare program. General welfare program benefits are usually not taxable. As a general rule, tribal benefits that resemble state and local governments' programs are not taxable to the recipient. For example, many tribes provide benefits to Tribal Members in a variety of areas, including health care, housing, education, business, etc. Benefits may be in the form of free or reduced-fee services, grants, low-interest loans and forgivable loans. Therefore, subsidies for public education, disaster relief and needs-based welfare programs do not trigger a tax obligation. As stated earlier, the Oneida Life Insurance Plan Plus program was created under a general welfare program in an attempt to ensure the premiums paid on your behalf are not taxable.

The Trust Committee is continuing to work with the Oneida Law Office as well as outside legal counsel in order to get clarification on the premiums from the Internal Revenue Service. We will continue to provide updates as we move forward.

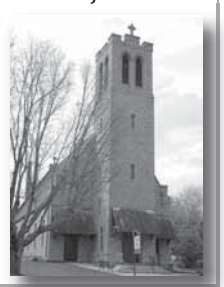
Oneida couple file suit against Village of Hobart

By Yvonne Kaquatosh
Kalihwisaks

Daniel and Judy Cornelius-Hawk of Oneida have filed a class action lawsuit against the Village of Hobart on behalf of their deceased descendants.

Dan is the great-grandson of Ben and Amelia Jordan, and Judy is the daughter of Lee McLester II - decedents buried in the Holy Apostles Cemetery.

The complaint states that the Village of Hobart is in violation of collecting taxes on cemetery property.



"Your family members and our veterans who are buried in Holy Apostles Cemetery are being taxed unlawfully by the Village of Hobart," said Hawk.

The Village of Hobart has made tax assessments and has collected $4,304.98 on tax parcel HB-1304 since 2007 according to online records at www.co.brown.wi.us

According to the Plaintiffs, Parcel HB-1304 encompasses all the newer portion of the cemetery before going up the large hill. The plaintiff's are asking for a Cease and Desist Order and are demanding that all taxes that have been paid regarding HB-1304, be reimbursed to Holy Apostles Cemetery Authority.

Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Jean Webster and Leland Wigg-Ninham will be presiding at a pre-trial hearing, which is set for Tuesday, February 1, 2011 at 10:00 a.m. at Ridgeview Plaza, 3759 West Mason Street, Suite #1 in Oneida, Wisconsin.

Event for Native Writers to be held at MATC

Events for Native writers will be held on February 25 and 26 at Milwaukee Area Technical College, Downtown Campus, 700 W. State St. On Friday evening at 7:00 pm, there will be a read-around. On Saturday, 11.00 to 4:00, a workshop will take place. Both events are in Main Building, M515.

This is sponsored and facilitated by Yukhika-latuhse (She tells us stories), a Native literary magazine sponsored by Oneida Nation Arts Program.

All Native writers are invited to attend. Participants will be sharing their work with others and taking part with in-session writing. Writing notebooks will be provided. There will also be a raffle. The workshop is facilitated by Cathy Caldwell, Mildred Schuman and Jim Stevens.

Yukhika-latuhse is now in its sixth year of publication. It is funded by Oneida Nation Arts Program and Woodland Indian Arts Initiative, a program of Wisconsin Arts Board.

For more information on the events, contact Jim Stevens at 920-598-0535 or Cathy Caldwell at 414-571-4662.

Giving Tree 'Helpers' Acknowledged

I would like to thank all of the community members and employees for helping make the 2010 Social Services Giving Tree a success once again this year. With everyone's help gifts were provided to 270 Oneida families which had a total of over 680 Oneida Children. GREAT JOB EVERYONE!!! It truly takes a community effort to make this event a success year after year.

Thank you to everyone who held fundraising events which raised much needed monies to cover the children who did not get selected from the tree.

I would especially like to thank the following individuals for their generosity, support and hard work they put into helping make the Giving Tree a success.

- Pogi King, Carol Liggins and Business Committee Members
- Oneida High School Student Council
- Oneida High School Girls Varsity Team
- Meg Waldo & Radisson Staff
- 7 Gens Corporation

Historic Preservation update

Tribal Historic Preservation Program 2011-2012

Annual reports due, Activities report due and the amount of surveys that have been identified and inventoried thru out this grant period has been completed. It has been another prosperous year and have once again met our goals and objectives. In year 2011 the program will be applying for another year of grant funded program, this year will make it the 10 years for the Tribal Historic Preservation program to be funded.

If anyone would like to receive a copy of the activity report please notify the Tribal Historic Preservation Officer Corina Burke at cburke@oneidanation.org by email or by phone 920-496-5386. OR if any one needs information regarding training, or our process in more detail I would be happy to assist.

Renewable Energy Facility

Benefits Environment & Community

There is considerable misinformation circulating about the proposed Oneida Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) Renewable Energy Facility. It's intended to scare and mislead people. All of us at OSGC live here too, and would not undertake a project that would be harmful to the community, our families, or the environment.

It's important to have a thorough understanding of what the project is and isn't. We hope you will find the following information helpful as you learn more about the facility. The proposed facility will take municipal solid waste that would otherwise be put into a landfill, put it through a gasification process, and create five megawatts of power daily, which will be sold to Wisconsin Public Service Corp.

In our ongoing efforts to keep the Oneida community informed on various aspects of the project we offer this fact sheet about the Renewable Energy Facility.

Facility Size: Approximately 60,000 square feet.

Facility Features: All municipal solid waste will be unloaded and processed inside the closed facility. There will not be any outside unloading or storage. The facility will be constructed of eight-inch thick block wall.

Technologies: This is not an incineration project. The system is oxygen-starved, and will meet all Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations. This gasification process produces synthesis gas that is used to produce electricity. Solid wastes will be heated to temperatures ranging between 800 to 1,200 degrees in the gasification process.

Energy Creation: Five megawatts of electrical power will be generated per hour. This is equal to the output of 38 wind turbines and can power between 3,000 to 5,000 homes. Energy production will occur 24/7.

Jobs Created: Approximately 40 to 50 construction jobs while the facility is being built. Thirty jobs will be required to operate and maintain the facility (anticipated to be 22 full time and 8 part-time jobs).

Landfill Reduction: The facility can reduce the amount of waste going into local landfills by up to 90%. Currently, approximately 500-600 tons of municipal solid waste is transferred at the Brown County Waste Transfer Station.

Emissions: Emissions will meet or be lower than the standards set by the EPA. Emissions will also meet or be lower than the standards set by the South Coast Air Quality Management District in Southern California. California has the strictest environmental laws in the country. Every hour the OSGC facility runs it saves approximately 15 tons of coal from being burned in a standard coal-fired power plant.

There will be no smokestacks such as those associated with coal-fired power plants.

Pollution: There will be little noise created by the plant's operations; no odor created by the plant's operation and there will be no groundwater discharge. Any odors from the process will be contained and no process water will be introduced to the environment.

Safety: The facility will meet all EPA and OSHA regulations.
According to the EPA, waste-to-energy generates electricity with "less environmental impact than almost any other source of electricity."

The EPA has also stated "modern waste-to-energy facilities meet or exceed EPA's Maximum Achievable Control Technology standards."

Traffic: Approximately two trucks per hour will carry waste to the facility from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The maximum capacity of the plant can support up to 24 trucks per day.

Facility Cost: Approximately $23 million.

Revenue: Revenues generated by this project will be used for tribal housing, education, healthcare, infrastructure and additional economic development opportunities.

About OSGC: OSGC is tribally chartered and tribally owned subsidiary of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin. The function and purpose of the corporation is to promote and enhance business and economic diversification on behalf of the tribe.

The next issue of the Kalihwisaks will include the Myths vs Facts document we have prepared in order to dispel the misinformation that has been circulating. You can also visit our website www.osgc.net and follow the "Renewable Energy" link on our homepage.

Looking for help neglect, so it allows some respite time for (parents) to have time away from the children so that they can just have some time for themselves," she said.

Because so many people are struggling now, it's become easier to apply for some services such as Foodshare. According to Metoxen, there are 3200 people on Foodshare through her program.

"And that grows, it grows a little bit every month," she said.

The state has done away with enrollment in work programs for parents, and students seeking training in high demand fields are eligible as well.

"That's really positive because some of our families are finding they can't get a job without skills are deciding to go to school," said Motquin.

However, it can be a struggle for some people to ask for help. Metoxen shared a story of someone who was too embarrassed to come to OSS to apply for aid.

"I said 'don't think of it that way. These programs are here to help you when you need the help, and we all know everybody's struggling in the economy now,'" she said. "It takes some courage to make the call."

Chairman's Corner...

Rick Hill
Chairman

For as long as I can remember, our Oneida Business Committee and General Tribal Council meetings have been conducted under Robert's Rules of Order. GTC has used the Rules to provide structure for governmental action, and at the same time the Rules protect GTC from governmental action as well. To those persons and entities outside of Oneida, the Rules protect the integrity of our government actions and provide credibility to our OBC and GTC governmental actions.

The Rules serve a few purposes, one of which is to provide a predictable format (or agenda) for how our meetings are conducted. Another purpose is to provide fairness to all meeting participants by allowing each individual the opportunity to speak to the meeting body and participate in discussion in an orderly manner that leads to an informed vote. Yet another purpose is to have rules for actions taken by the voting body.

For actions taken by our General Tribal Council, it is usually a simple majority vote that is needed. Examples are approving the annual budget, accepting reports, or adopting a new tribal law. Where a previous action has occurred on a particular subject or agenda item by a simple majority vote, the Rules require a 2/3 vote for the subsequent action. An example would be amending the annual budget at a later point in time, or amending or repealing an existing tribal law.

For our tribal laws, GTC adopted the Administrative Procedures Act in 1991 that tells us the process for creating and adopting our laws, as well as amending or repealing those laws. The APA protects the GTC by making sure that the Oneida membership knows what laws are being created and any changes that might happen to our laws.

GTC also adopted the General Tribal Council Ten Day Notice Policy in 1991 that requires any resolution or motion that relates to due process, or would directly impact tribal budgets or operations, to have a minimum 10 day notice to GTC. This means the 10 day notice has to be followed for GTC to take any action on any agenda items the day of a duly-called meeting. Our tribal law trumps the Robert's Rule that allows a 2/3 vote for new agenda items presented without notice.

By following Robert's Rules of Order, and the APA, our GTC will know what governmental actions are to be taken and how. Through the 2/3 majority vote and the GTC meeting rules and processes we have had in place for many, many years, we are able to protect the Tribe and our members from actions without proper notice to the membership.

We have more than 16,000 members nationwide, and we regularly have approximately 1,200 - 1,300 voting members at any given GTC meeting. This is your Oneida government, and I encourage all GTC members to share your voice and your views in our meetings so that the GTC will have a thorough debate of the issues and actions that impact you and your families.

Guest Editorial...

To the Ones Who Have Gone Astray

It is with a heavy heart and weary body that I gave this message to my people. It is also written with faith and yearning for the welfare of our people to search their hearts and ask themselves where has all the love gone that was once shared amongst our people? It was given to us by the Creator to help guide our future generations to a good life. A better life where the welfare of our people meant more to us that the almighty dollar. We are being blinded by the sign that is leading our people towards total destruction of our future generations.

I do not sit here in judgment of any one person, but to plead with them to think again of where we all have gone wrong that we have been separated so harshly and we are looking at one another as total strangers.

We all have to sit in judgment of ones self to determine if all the misunderstandings of today is worth utter ruin to our children. Is it worth the price we may have to pay someday for the mistakes we have made for being unforgiving as we look about us as we are forgetting that we are put on earth as one people? Our white brother who crossed the salt waters has done a good job of brainwashing our people in believing that the instructions the creator laid down for the red race is no longer needed. He can now sit back and laugh as he has enjoyed himself to see our Indian people being divided and fall into his trap of self-destruction.

Our ancestors of long ago has given to us instruction in how to live on this turtle island. We have prophecies handed down generation to generation which foretells the future.

Before the white man came, our people were aware of the corrupt things he would bring to our people. It was whisky (the mind changer) the violin (so our people would lose respect for the drum), and the playing cards.

He gave us instructions not to accept these things as it would change our way of life. If we accept these things, we would be helping to bring utter ruin to our people.

If our prophecies it tells of how the elm trees would start dying off from the top, of how our children would be born incomplete and missing limbs or without a mind, our women would be breaking the natural laws of childbirth. It also mentions of how our young would rise again to retain their birthright. There are so much more that as time goes by throughout the years have fulfilled themselves. But the one I will stress on is of the three groups of people. The first group is not sure of which way to follow and are undecided. The second group have gone astray and completely believes the white man's way is their way, and the third group are the traditional people who are still following the instructions of the creator. It tells of the difference between them and the group that has gone astray will be hurt the most, as it was never meant to be that way to follow the white brother from the salt waters and go completely out of their way of life and beyond sailing.

We are beginning to fulfill this way and it is time to prepare ourselves and gather back our people who have gone astray as the end is near. We are to make them aware of the importance of our way of life that was given to our people when the creator made the red race.

It is with a heavy heart that I sit here on this day and think of the bloodshed that we might face and wonder if we are so blind to think that we don't realize money is the root of all evil and that money will be worthless some day. We should be prepared for the future as to ask ourselves if all this heartache is worth it. Ask ourselves are we doing this for love oe money or shall we think again and prepare for our future children. It is with the goodness of my heart that I beg you to search your hearts with honesty and to ask yourselves what did you have before our brother from the salt waters came? What ways did the Onkwehonwe follow and do not our children deserve the chance of growing up with the peace and harmony amongst us? We must remember that for every ending there was a beginning and that is life itself. Are we to be so blinded by the luxuries that we no longer see the life hardship and heartache that our children are facing today?

Letters & Opinions...

Hoyan Thank you

Greetings:

Countdown to Hoyan: This was an effort that came from the On^yote aka Gang Prevention Task Force, a volunteer group consisting of various Oneida program staff and community members. The mission of the On^yo>te=aka Gang Prevention Task Force (OGPTF) is to eliminate gang related activity and to offer positive alternatives for the Oneida Community.

When the Sobriety Pow Wow was canceled due to cost constraints, the OGPTF discussed the need to have something on New Years Eve to replace that event. The idea of a social came about and a sub-group was established This group was to try and put something together for New Year's Eve.

The idea of a "Countdown to Hoyan" theme was established and the group ran with it. We requested help from Tribal programs to help with a community initiative to,

1. Decrease alcohol related incidents in Oneida Community
2. Provide healthy alternative activities for Families & Community Members and
3. Create a sense of belonging to the Oneida Community.

By having a social dance and introducing a variety of lifetime fitness activities we hoped to encourage participation and fun activities in an effort to reach different populations of our people that may have diabetes and increase awareness to prevent it as well.

We would like to thank the following for their donation to our event:

Recreation for rent-free space for a community event

Bingo for a fundraiser

Casino for lots of party favors

Pow Wow Committee for monetary donation

Finance Committee for monetary donation

Diabetes Team for corn soup, posters and a mailout

A very special thank you to all those dozens of people who provided giveaway items for prizes throughout the night and to those who volunteered their precious time on New Year's Eve to help make this event a great success. Thank you all for striving to make the Oneida Community a healthier active & place to live.

By the numerous positive responses we received, an awesome time filled with laughter and friendship made this a memorable event by all who attended!

Thank you,
Countdown to Hoyan Team

Hoyan Thank you

Dear Editor:

While the GTC is looking at creating a new Oneida tribal court, we also need to look at the standards and expectations we set for judges. The education and experience of judges are important, as well as character and ethics, and respect for the separation of powers.

If Oneida people are to trust and support a future tribal court, we must start out with high standards. We're talking about clear separation of powers between the lawmaking forum of the GTC and BC, the executive branch of the GM's office, and the judicial branch of our future tribal court.

In the proposed "Judiciary Act, we're raising the educational requirements and experience for candidates in future judges elections. In short, having an education or good experience, means the judges have high reading and comprehension levels, and can research and analyze concepts. These qualities refer to competency and ability to do the job.

Beyond those basic requirements, we also expect judges to understand former case rulings (precedent), current tribal law, and other laws. We expect judges to understand the intention of laws, and make accurate interpretation of laws in the court.

In addition, we want judges to use the correct legal tests or legal standards when hearing a case or complaint. For example, the "prove beyond a reasonable doubt," concept is a legal test that prosecutors are held to when proving if somebody is guilty of a crime.

We expect our judges to be fair, honest, and neutral when ruling on cases. This means we expect good character and higher ethics standards from judges.

There six pillars of character we ought to look for: trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, and positive citizenship.

Having ethics means being able to see what's right or wrong, and figuring out the gray areas. Ethics looks for answers to questions like what is "good behavior" and what are the community values or standards?

To strengthen the separation of powers, we must prohibit future judges from attending GTC meetings. Some say prohibiting judges from GTC meetings would be a violation of our tribal constitution, because they have a right to be there. I disagree on the basis of ethics and separation of powers.

The GTC meetings are a lawmaking forum. Judges shouldn't be in GTC meetings because they couldn't claim to be fair and neutral as a judge if they had a hand in making the laws or mandates.

For example, if a judge votes in GTC meeting about an employee issue, that judge won't be able to preside on any cases involving employees. By the same token, judges shouldn't be writing petitions for GTC meetings, either.

Judges can't be lawmakers one day, and sit in court and interpret the law the next day. That would be unfair, and a conflict of interest.

GTC ought review and approve the judges "Canons of Ethics," when they're written. Every tribal member has a stake in holding judges accountable to higher standards of ethics and behavior.

Sincerely,

Sherrole Benton

Ayes: Tina Danforth, Ed Delgado, Patty Hoeft
Opposed: Trish King
Abstained: Brandon Stevens
For the record: Tina Danforth said I would like to recite of few instances and excerpts from a letter received from Sovereign Finance regarding the incomplete sale of the Oneida Retail Sales Revenue Bonds Series 2010. For the record, the purpose of the memorandum to the Committee was to further inform them that the incomplete sale and subsequent withdrawal from the market of Oneida Sales Revenue Bond Series 2010 the bonds which occurred on Tue. Sept. 21, 2010 is part of the background regarding these bonds, on May 20, 2010 Oneida engaged Robert W. Baird company incorporated Baird to be the sole managing underwriter and connection what is proposed issuance of approximately $30 million in tax exempt bonds through to fund various governmental purpose facilities including a new residential community care center, a government service community center, sewer and water projects, athletic fields and energy conservation projects. Shortly therefore after, the Tribe engaged Sovereign Finance known as Sovereign to serve as a financial advisor to the Tribe in connection with a proposed that issuance and provide an objective third party guidance and assistance with respect to the issuance of it's bonds. Since that time, the Tribe threw the combined efforts of it's management, legal staff and bond counsel along with Baird and Sovereign had taken significance steps toward the execution of it's tax exempt bond and transaction which includes the following, a compilation of the required due diligence, the development of a sophisticated financial model to provide a long-term view of the impacts of the additional debt on the Retail Enterprise know as ORE and on the Tribe as a whole. The creation of a financing plan and debt structure to optimize the goals and priorities the goals of the Tribe to formulate a rating agency strategy including the comprehensive rating agency presentation to exhibit the strength of the Tribe and the transaction Oneida received and the exceptional double a minus rating from standard empowers as a result of these efforts. Further the development of comprehensive preliminary offering memorandum that was ready for distribution to potential investors on Aug. 20, 2010. So this was ready to go for sale Aug. 20, 2010. Drafting all of legal documents necessary to successfully execute the transaction and conducting an internet road show to introduce potential investors to the Tribe its business and governmental entities and to explain the sources of repayment and the collateral for the bonds. So all of this work was done and compiled with the assistance of all those people and parties that I mentioned, Sovereign Finance and Baird. But despite these efforts in all though Baird had been marketing the bonds for a month and that the date scheduled for pricing, Baird did not have a complete book of orders for the bonds based on the information provided during the order period. The period Baird had one or two firm orders and one additional order that was contingent upon a change to the indenture that the Tribe was unsure they were willing to accept. Taking all these things together these orders were insufficient to fill the total $30 million worth of bonds and the interest quotes were .25 and .5 percent higher than what the Tribe had been expecting to be paid based on conversations with Baird. I'm not going to go into all five pages but the other underlying reasons why these bonds were not sold was a failure to effectively communicate the story and respond to investor concerns, failure to target the appropriate investor audience and failure to structure the bond transaction for the market. Another one was the overreliance of the double a rating to sell the bonds. And as a result, it is unfortunate that Baird was unable to secure sufficient orders to execute the sale of the bonds at rates that were acceptable to the Tribe. However Baird's failure to contact a significant number of investors active in the tribal debt market now presents an unfortunate opportunity for more season and experienced lead underwrites reach out to those investors and convey the story of the Tribe's credit as well as reengage those investors who have already been reviewed and this is unfortunate has lead us to today's engagement letter and resolution to move forward with the bonding process to get these projects done and that is why we are making that recommendation to go with Merrill Lynch and that is for the record.
For the record:
Tina Danforth said my last comment is that the second week in September by Mr. Newack who represents Baird, I was assured by him that these bonds were sold and I was assured that we didn't have any considerations to make otherwise and that was told to me between Aug 20 and Sept. 20 and so I relied on that assurance, because I relied on the that assurance it has created a lot more work in my office. That's for the record.
For the record: Ed Delgado said I made this motion because our nursing facilities are currently not sufficient for our elders. We need to get moving on this and that's my reason.
Motion by Ed Delgado to recess for lunch at 12:14 p.m., seconded by Tina Danforth. Motion withdrawn.

February 9, 2011
February 23, 2011

Regular Business Committee meetings are scheduled every second and fourth Wednesday of each month at 9:00am on the second floor of the Norbert Hill Center in the BC conference room.

Public Hearing Notice
11:30AM • Norbert Hill Center (BCCR)

February 24, 2011

Purpose:
Pardon and Forgiveness Law. This law will replace the current Pardon Ordinance with a new law which reforms the process for obtaining a pardon and includes a new process for forgiveness. The law will allow for the forgiveness of individuals who have committed acts which have caused them to be ineligible for tribal employment, tribally issued occupational licenses, certifications or permits, housing through the Tribe, or tribal member benefits. This law will still allow Tribal members to be able to obtain pardons for crimes but will also be able to obtain forgiveness for acts in which there was not an actual criminal conviction.

Public Hearing Process
Testimony:
Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.
Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or Tonya Boucher, Legislative Reference Office at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.
If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via GroupWise tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 1-920-869-4376*. O.B.C. Legislative Operating Committee

LOC Update

In January 2011, the LOC held three community meetings to address the proposed Judiciary law and the proposed Legislative Procedures Act (LPA). The meetings were held Wednesday, January 12, at the SEOTS Office in Milwaukee, and Thursday, January 13, and Saturday, January 15, at the Norbert Hill Center, Oneida. These meetings were held in response to a directive from the January 3, 2011 GTC meeting to allow more opportunity to discuss these proposals. The discussion at these meetings helped provide the public with a greater understanding of the proposed laws, and gave the LOC an opportunity to understand what information was necessary for presenting these proposals.

A total of 33 people attended these meetings, and the questions and comments covered a wide range of issues, primarily with the proposed Judiciary law.

Education/ Experience Requirements for Judges

The main issue discussed at all three meetings was the education/experience qualifications that would be required for judges serving within the Judiciary. The Judiciary law that will be presented to the GTC offers three options for education/experience requirements:

A. Judges must have a Bachelors degree with a major in one of 11 listed fields, or a Bachelors degree in any other field plus 400 classroom hours of additional specified education, or one years' experience serving as a judge or Appeals Commissioner, or
B. Judges must have a Bachelors degree in any field or one years' experience serving as a judge or Appeals Commissioner, or
C. No education or experience requirement.

From the discussion, it became clear that there continues to be a wide range of opinions about the level of education or experience the people believe is necessary for judge qualifications.

Suggestions varied, and included requiring judges to all have law degrees; to have a bachelors degree in one of the 11 fields as listed in Option A or a Masters degree. Other suggestions included that judges and lawyers be required to pass an Oneida Bar exam, and that a specific number of candidates running for office possess a law degree. Some argued that higher education is a necessary component for serving as a judge, while others argued that education does not guarantee a person can make a fair decision. Some felt that one year of experience as a judge or Appeals Commissioner was not adequate to allow a judge to avoid the Bachelors' degree requirement. There was discussion of requiring accreditation for schools granting degrees, or not counting education received through online courses. There also seemed to be a common sentiment that judges should be familiar with Oneida laws, history, and traditional ways, and there were a few requests that the Tribe consider returning to a system of women decisionmakers like were used traditionally.

Salary for Judges

Another issue that was heavily discussed was the salaries for judges. This is not included in the Judiciary law; rather it is part of the transition resolution that will accompany the law. Future salary levels will be determined by the General Tribal Council. At present, the transition resolution provides for full-time judges salaries to be based on whether or not they are licensed attorneys in good standing in any state or with the DC Bar – judges that are not licensed attorneys would receive an annual salary of $56,000, judges that are licensed attorneys of less than ten years would be paid $75,000 annually, and judges that are licensed attorneys of ten or more years would be paid $85,000 annually. Part-time judges would be paid a $30 stipend for each hour of work, and the trial court and appellate court chief judges would receive an extra $3,000 per year.

Discussion mostly addressed the issue of paying full-time judges different salaries based on licensing and experience. It was explained that a salary reasonable to compensate licensed attorneys is much greater than that which is reasonable to compensate a person with a college degree or no degree. On average, salary for a college graduate is roughly $46,800 per year, and the average salary for a law school graduate is roughly $92,600 per year. Some felt $56,000 for a judge with no education or experience is excessive, others felt it was only excessive until the judges had been trained.

Other Issues Raised

Several general questions were raised regarding the Judiciary. There was discussion of the necessity of implementing the Judiciary while the Tribe is facing cost constraints. It was explained that the cost should not impact the budget too much; that there will only be limited additional costs during the transition period and costs will be similar to the current system after the new Judiciary is in place and the Appeals Commission is wound down.

There was one request that judges be appointed by the Business Committee, with approval of the GTC, instead of being elected. Another requested that judges not be allowed to attend GTC meetings. A few questions were raised regarding the sort of training judges will receive, the extent of jurisdiction the Judiciary will exercise, separation of powers, ways to get people more involved at the GTC level, and the possibility of implementing districts. Other questions were about the current Appeals Commission, and the statistics on the types and number of cases they hear.

Legislative Procedures Act

The discussion on this proposal primarily included a clarification that the amendments to this proposal were made to clear up any ambiguity of the intent, verifying that the GTC does not have to follow the same process for making law as the OBC does.

Next Step

The revised Judiciary law and Legislative Procedures Act proposals will be presented to the General Tribal Council on February 5th, 2011. For more information about these proposals, including the revised drafts and several publications explaining these items, please visit www.oneidanation.org and click on the link titled "Judiciary law and Legislative Procedures Act proposals."

Skenandore pinning the competition down

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Pulaski High School senior Nevada Skenandore already knows the value of a hard day's work. Proof of that shows up everyday at 3 p.m. when he takes to the wrestling mat for practice.

Skenandore has pilled up a 31 -1 record and has climbed to wiwrestling.com's third-ranked wrestler in all of division 1 at his 285-pound weight class.

Skenandore's draw to wrestling is related to the payoff it provides him. "It's the work you have to put in to it," he said. "It's such a hard sport mentally and it creates the personality (to succeed) and puts the drive in you. It shows you what hard work is."

Last season, Skenandore's first as a varsity wrestler, finished 37 – 9 and qualified for the individual state tournament. He lost in the first round and is determined to get back, but is putting the team ahead of his personal goals.

"I want to qualify (for state) again and place in the top three," he said. "But, we want to be successful as a team, I don't like to think individually. We want to win conference and be successful as a team."

Skenandore's work ethic has also lead to success on the football and rugby fields. He was a two-time All-Conference selection in the Fox River Classic Conference as a defensive lineman. Skenandore is proud of his individual accomplishments on the football field but being viewed as a leader by his peers had the biggest impact.

Nevada Skenandore

"My senior year I was named captain, that was a big deal," Skenandore said.

Skenandore also plays an integral role in the Pulaski Roos back-to-back state rugby championships.

With individual success on the athletic field it is expected that the opportunity to play at the next level has presented itself to Skenandore. The opportunities are there but Skenandore plans on using the drive and determination he obtained through sports to succeed in the classroom.

"With sports and high school there is a balance for me between sports and grades," Skenandore said. "When I go to college I want to be successful and focus on my grades."

Skenandore was contacted by schools gauging his interest in college football but he advised them he was not interested. He then told his wrestling coach that college athletics were not for him and inquiries from wrestling recruiters don't reach him.

Skenandore's march to return to state starts in regional action in two weeks.

UND Student Senate opposing nickname bills

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) ~ The University of North Dakota Student Senate has voted to oppose efforts in the Legislature to force the university to keep its Fighting Sioux nickname and American Indian-head logo.

The Student Senate resolution says the three bills only "reignite the division" over the moniker and logo. The Grand Forks Herald reports that the resolution passed Sunday night on a 10-8 vote with four members abstaining from voting.

Legislative committee hearings are scheduled on the bills Wednesday. One requires UND to keep the nickname and says the state would have to consider suing the NCAA if there's a penalty. The NCAA considers the nickname offensive.

The other two measures say UND must keep the nickname unless the Standing Rock Sioux tribe votes to deny permission to use it.

Hopis to vote on revising constitution

By Felicia Fonseca
Associated Press

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) ~ Members of the Hopi Tribe are going to the polls this week to vote on a revised constitution.

The draft constitution reorganizes the tribal government under four branches, and creates a presidency and vice presidency.

The current government is unicameral with most powers resting with the Tribal Council. The tribal chairman and vice chairman are part of the council.

Critics say the proposal undermines the sovereignty of 12 Hopi villages by making them part of the central government. They have sought court orders to halt Thursday's election.

Supporters say the revised constitution stabilizes the tribal government and clarifies roles within it.

Thirty percent of registered voters must cast a ballot for the election to be valid.

The tribe adopted a constitution in 1936 as part of the Indian Reorganization Act.

Life sentence for 1975 reservation slaying in US

By Nomaan Merchant
Associated Press

RAPID CITY, South Dakota (AP) ~ A man convicted in the 1975 slaying of an American Indian Movement activist will serve life in prison without parole, a judge decided Monday, closing a major chapter in an investigation that has spanned more than three decades.

John Graham, a 55-year-old Southern Tutchone Indian from Canada, was found guilty last month of felony murder for participating in a kidnapping that ended in Annie Mae Aquash's death. He's the second person convicted in Aquash's death, which garnered international attention and remains synonymous with the 1970s clashes between AIM activists and federal agents.

State law from the time of the incident, which prescribes a life sentence for felony murder without mentioning parole, requires a sentence of life without parole, state Attorney General Marty Jackley argued Monday. A South Dakota jury found Graham not guilty of premeditated murder.

Judge John Delaney agreed with Jackley but said arguments made by Graham's attorney, John Murphy, had "some merit."

"The sentence is preordained at this point," Delaney said, adding that he expected higher courts to make a final decision on what the law means. "The Supreme Court will decide this issue, not I."

Authorities believe AIM leaders ordered her death because they thought she was helping the government, which officials have denied. No AIM leader has ever been charged in her slaying, and several people involved with AIM have denied their own involvement.

Federal and state prosecutors have confirmed that they continue to discuss the case, and the investigation remains open. On Monday, Jackley refused to say if more charges are forthcoming.

Aquash, a member of the Mi'kmaq tribe of Nova Scotia, was active in AIM and close to several of its leaders. By late 1975, however, she started to fear for her life due to circulating rumors that she was an informant, witnesses testified.

Graham did not testify at his trial, but spoke Monday before he was sentenced. Graham, wearing a striped jail uniform and chains around his waist and ankles, stood and turned to look at Aquash's daughters as he spoke. He accused witnesses of speaking in "half-truths."

"The truth hasn't come out here," Graham said. "Anna Mae was never kidnapped, never tied up in my presence, never murdered in my presence."

Graham said he had taken Aquash from Denver to a safe house on Pine Ridge with her consent. He said he had not taken orders from anyone else. "I would not do that," he said.

Denise Maloney Pictou, Aquash's elder daughter, spoke during the hearing about how the decades-long investigation strained her and her family, and accused AIM of bringing about Aquash's death. "They were no friends of my mother," she said.

As she finished her statement, Maloney Pictou looked at Graham and held up a page-sized photo of her mother.

"This, John Graham, is what you stole from me," she said.

Afterward, she was asked about Graham's statement. "I don't believe him," she said.

Her sister, Debbie Maloney Pictou, described exhuming her mother's remains and reburying them in their native Nova Scotia.

"The images of her remains will stay with me forever," Debbie Maloney Pictou said. "Because of you, I have held my mother's skull in my hands."

Graham's brother, Harold Johnson, also spoke briefly, and Murphy submitted more than 20 letters on his client's behalf.

But Delaney said he would not change his mind about the sentence, though he acknowledged it would likely be examined by higher courts. Murphy has said he will appeal the conviction.

"None of that changes what happened 35 years ago," Delaney said. "There's no way that Anna Mae comes back to life."

During five days of testimony last month, witnesses said they saw Grahamand two other AIM activists take Aquash from a house in Denver and eventually to the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Arlo Looking Cloud, who was convicted in Aquash's slaying in 2004, testified that he watched Graham shoot Aquash with a .32-caliber pistol.

Murphy did not call any defense witnesses but questioned the credibility of Looking Cloud and others who said they saw the kidnapping.

AIM was started in the late 1960s to protest the U.S. government's treatment of American Indians and demand the government honor its treaties with Indian tribes. The movement grabbed headlines in the early 1970s with its takeover of the Bureau of Indian Affairs headquarters in Washington and its 71-day occupation of the South Dakota reservation town of Wounded Knee.

Illegal deer carcass dumping

Submitted by Jacy Rasmussen
Oneida Conservation Adminstrative Assistant

On Nov 16 2010 Conservation Officer Kosowski responded to an anonymous complaint regarding illegal deer carcass dumping on Oneida Nation Lands. During the initial investigation, Officer Kosowski uncovered approximately 30 deer carcasses near the future lake site off of Cty U. Through further investigation a non-Oneida member was found to be illegally disposing deer carcasses under a current State of Wisconsin contract to dispose of vehicle killed deer.

Officer Kosowski worked with US Fish and Wildlife Service, WI Department of Natural Resources, and other local agencies to prosecute this individual. After a complete and thorough investigation, the suspect was cited for numerous violations totaling over $1,800.00 in fines and the State contract was revoked. Due to the severity of the situation, all recreational and gathering activities at the lake site were suspended, until water samples could be analyzed. On December 3, 2010, water samples were received and found to hold no contaminants to the lake water. All recreational and gathering activities can be resumed at this time. Please contact the Oneida Conservation Department with any questions or concerns at (920) 869-1450.

A lone wild rice plant was found in a restored wetland in Oneida. The WisDOT is working to restore wild rice beds in Winnebago and Brown Counties.

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) ~ A major transportation project in northeastern Wisconsin could include reinstating traditional Native American wild rice beds.

Many of the beds have disappeared because of development. But US 41 Project coordinators from the Department of Transportation say they will seek the input of tribal leaders on reinstating the beds.

Coordinators from the US 41 Project in Winnebago and Brown counties say they will seek the knowledge of the ricing chiefs in Wisconsin to possibly reinstate the traditional, cultural, and spiritual aspects that impact the growth and success of wild rice. A plan has not been finalized.

Wisconsin Public Radio News says the cost of the entire US 41 Project is $1.5 billion.

Recycle It: Used Oil Filters

By Amy Spears
Pollution Prevention Specialist

The newest entry to the recycling world is Used Oil Filters. A new law bans the disposal of used automotive oil filters and oil absorbent materials in Wisconsin landfills as of January 1, 2011. The ban covers everyone in the state, including homeowners, farmers, businesses, industrial operations, and others. The oil filters and absorbents ban is intended to keep these materials out of Wisconsin landfills and out of the landfill leachate (liquid that moves through or drains from a landfill). Each year, Wisconsin residents throw away an estimated 187,000 gallons of oil in used oil filters and 1.6 million gallons of oil in oil absorbents," says Jack Connelly, solid waste program coordinator for the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources waste and materials management program. "Oil is a valuable, reusable material. By recycling filters and absorbent material, used oil can be extracted and reused." Filters also contain steel components that can be recycled. Recycling the approximately nine million filters that currently enter the landfill will save more than 4.5 million pounds of steel for reuse.

Recycling options for tribal members on the Reservation and in Brown and Outagamie Counties are listed below

Single Stream Recycling in Oneida

By Amy Spears
Pollution Prevention Specialist

The Oneida Tribe is now offering single stream recycling to their waste and recycle customers. Gone are the days of separating your paper from plastics, glass and metal. From now on customers can keep all items together in the same bin at disposal. Please continue to use your existing recycling bins or cart.

Q. What is single-stream recycling?

A. Single-Stream recycling is a recycling process in which materials are collected all mingled together with no sorting required by individual recyclers. So cans and bottles can be recycled together with newspaper, cardboard, etc.

Q. What happens to the single-stream recycling once it's collected?

A. Once the single-stream materials are collected, they are taken to the Tri-County Single-Stream Recycling Facility, located in Outagamie County. The recyclable materials are then separated in this state of the art facility and sent to various markets for sale.

Q. What exactly can I put into my single-stream cart?

A. Newspapers/ Brown Paper Bags
Magazines, Catalogs
Telephone/Soft Cover Books
Junk Mail/Envelopes (all types)
Paper
Paperboard (cereal/tissue boxes)
Cardboard
Narrow-Neck Plastic Bottles (examples: Milk Jugs, Bleach/Detergent, Shampoo Bottles)
Plastic Grocery Bags
Glass Bottles/Jars (any color)
Metal Cans (tin/steel/aluminum)

Q. Should I put recyclables into bags then into my bin?

A. There is no need to place recyclables into bags before putting them into the cart. If you have an overflow of recycling, please place the items in extra bins or paper bags.

Q. Why are we moving to single-stream?

A. Using just one collection bin for all your recyclable items increases the ease and convenience of recycling. More people participate and more resources are saved.

Q. Won't the paper get wet if I recycle my commingled containers with the paper? Doesn't that make the paper non-recyclable?

A. The paper mills allow a small percentage of moisture in the paper they buy, so it's not a problem. As always, we do ask that you rinse and empty all containers to keep food contamination out of your bin. But moisture will not ruin the paper. Part of the recycling process for remanufacturing paper includes water, so it is not a contaminant.

Q. Can I use the same bin I've been using?

A. Yes, you may use the same bin/container you have been using.

Q. How often will my recyclables be picked up?

A. Residential recyclables will still be collected every week, on the same day as your regular trash collection.

Q. Where do I find more information on what I can recycle?

Cannery closing Jan. 31

By Vickie Cornelius
Food Processing Supervisor

The Oneida Cannery will be closing for renovations. Work is scheduled to begin January 31.

Renovations include: moving current cannery door, installing floor drain for the two new steam kettles, two existing steam kettles and the two Acidifier steamers. All will be placed against wall along hallway. A stainless steel back splash will be placed behind kettles. three exhaust hoods will be installed. Additional exhaust fans and duct work installed for exhaust hoods. Water sprayers will be installed for kettles. An electrical outlet will be placed hanging from the ceiling for using the food strainer/juicer.

The Oneida Cannery will continue to have white corn products available at the Tsyunhehkwa Retail store located at Ridgeview Plaza.

We look forward to see you at our Open House scheduled for April 28, 5:00-7:00.

Recycle Like You Have Never Recycled Before

Oneida Tribe is now offering single stream recycling for their waste and recycle customers. Now you can put Glass, Cans, Paper, Newspaper, Cardboard, Paperboard and Plastic Containers all in the same recycle bin.

Glass: Jars and Bottles

Cans: Tin and aluminum cans, empty aluminum cans and empty paint cans

Cardboard: Empty and flattened

Mixed Paper: Newspapers, magazines, mail (junk and personal), phone books, computer paper, flyers and wrapping paper.

Paperboard/Food Boxes: Shoe boxes, food boxes such as cereal, canned soda, cracker, etc (not food soiled) and product boxes.

Plastic: Recycle #1 and #2 plastic containers ONLY (mostly beverage and detergent containers). Look on the bottom of the container for the following symbol: 1 2

If one recycle container isn't enough, just add another. Any container will do!

Start a New Career Within Six Months

In anticipation of major road construction work on U.S. 41, Swan College in Green Bay is offering a 24-week course in Highway/Heavy construction beginning February 25, 2011.

The course will include segments on surveying, grades and slopes (elevations), trucks, heavy equipment and crane operation, earth moving, paving and structural work.

The 24-week course, scheduled to start February 25, 2011, will provide individuals with training needed to find employment in the highway construction field.

The training is designed to give job seekers skills they need to work on road construction projects and is timed to coincide with the Wisconsin Department of Transportation's approximately $1.5 Billion, 8-year project to widen and reconstruct U.S. 41.

Courses offered by Swan College, 1221 Bellevue St., are accredited by the National Center for Construction Education and Research, and Approved by the Wisconsin Education Approval Board.

Individuals who successfully complete the 170hour Highway/Heavy course will receive a certificate from Swan College and a National Certification from NCCER.

Cost for the course is $1,250, plus $150 book costs and $100 registration fee. Funding available to qualified students.

To register or for more information, go to www.swancollege.org or call (920) 217-6738.

Financial Aid Seminar at UWGB

Green Bay, WI – You are invited to attend the Green Bay Area Chamber of Commerce Partners in Education Financial Aid Seminar hosted by Wells Fargo Bank at UW-Green Bay in the Phoenix room at the student union, Thursday, Feb. 17, 2011, from 6:30 p.m. 8:15 p.m. At the event high school students and their parents will learn about the various financial aid programs to assist in paying for college.

Learn how to work with the financial aid office, complete the FAFSA application and understand the Financial Aid Award letter all at the seminar! Presenters will discuss how to complete the appropriate forms for grants, scholarships, meeting deadlines, Federal work-study programs, and student loans. In addition, tips on searching for national, local and institutional scholarships will be shared with the opportunity to ask questions following the presentation.

The presentation will run from 6:30-7:30 p.m., with a Q&A session to follow. The event is free, but registration is preferred to ensure sufficient materials for distribution to attendees.

To register or for more information, please contact Nancy Schopf, vice president of education & leadership at 920.593.3413 or schopf@titletown.org

2011-2012 4K Enrolment Information for the Pulaski Community School District

The enrollment window for the Pulaski Community School District's 4K-PEEP (Pulaski Early Education Partnership) program will be from February 1 through February 28, 2011.

Enrollment for 4K/PEEP will be done on-line through the PEEP website at http://connect.pulaskilk12.wi.us/dist_stserv_4K_.cfm. The 4K/PEEP enrollment document can also be accessed by going to the Pulaski Community School District website at www.pulaski.k12.wi.us and accessing the Quick Links.

If parents do not have access to the on-line forms, need assistance filing out the on-line form, or have questions there will be a PEEP Enrollment evening on Tuesday, February 1, 2011 at Glenbrook Elementary PACE Conference Room, (enter PACE doors on Front Street) from 4:00 – 7:00 p.m.

A mailing will be sent to parents in the district that anticipate their child will attend 4K/PEEP in 2011-2012. The mailing will be sent to a list of families generated from district census data and other sources. If a parent has not received the mailing by January 24th please contact the Pulaski Student Services Office at 920-822-6021.

A child is eligible for the Pulaski 4K/PEEP program if they are 4 years old on or by September 1, 2011 and is planning to attend kindergarten in September 2012. This program is designed for the one year preceding 5 year old kindergarten entrance.

There are seven 4K/PEEP sites in the Pulaski Community School District. They are: Polka Tots Child Care Center, Assumption BVM Parochial School and Glenbrook Elementary in Pulaski; Peaceful Beginnings Christian Child Care Center on Hwy U in Pittsfield; Building Blocks Child Care Center in Sobieski; Hillcrest Elementary in Hobart, and Fairview Elementary in Krakow.

If a parent has questions they can also contact Pam Engel, 4K/PEEP Coordinator at pmengel@pulaski.k12.wi.us or call 920-865-6400.

Get Expert Help Applying to College!
NEW, ONLY 1 Deadline To Apply By: February 14, 2011
www.collegehorizons.org

About the Program:

College Horizons, is a six-day "crash course" in preparing for college. Students will learn about a broad variety of colleges and universities, and establish personal relationships with admission representatives and college counselors. At each site, 90 students from across the nation work with over 70 expert college counselors and college admission officers to help students:

- Select 10 suitable colleges to apply to,
- Write memorable essays and create a resume,
- Complete winning applications including The Common Application,
- Receive test taking strategies, resources, and information on the ACT & SAT,
- Navigate the financial aid/scholarship jungle, complete a preliminary FAFSA financial aid form, and learn about the Gates Millennium Scholarship Fund and other available scholarships, and
- Attend Informational Sessions & a College Fair consisting of over 35 colleges and universities!

How To Apply:

Deadline: Complete applications must be postmarked February 14 (note, only 1 deadline to apply by). Late applications are accepted on a space available basis and are placed behind applicants who applied on time.

Eligibility: American Indian (enrolled), Alaska Native (proof of status) or Native Hawaiian (proof of heritage); 3.00 GPA (in academic courses); current 10th and 11th grade high school students.

Application: The application consists of the Student Application & Essay, Teacher Recommendation, Counselor Recommendation, and Transcripts. Application information will be available online October 1, 2010.

Cost $225 & Airfare: $225 program fee includes tuition, room, meal, program materials, and ground transportation to/from the airport to campus. Airfare from student's home to program site not included.

Financial Aid Available: Significant financial aid is available to students in need for program fee and airfare. Each year 45% of students are awarded travel assistance. Simply apply for financial aid in the application.

Obama adopted by Crow Tribe

By Johnny Big Medicine

On May 19, 2008, before becoming president of the United States, Barack Obama visited the Crow Tribe Reservation.

While he was there, he gave a speech and was also adopted into the Tribe. During his speech he told thousands of Native American supporters that he would honor long-ignored treaty obligations of the U.S. government, and revamp health care and education on reservations all over the United States.

Obama said, "Few have been ignored by Washington as long as Native Americans, the first Americans. That will change when I am President of the United States."

When he was adopted into the tribe he was given a native name. His native name was pronounced Awe Kooda Bilaxpak Kuuxshish which means "One Who Helps People Throughout the Land."

While some feel that progress toward his promise has been slow, others are at least encouraged that more attention is being paid to Native American issues.

At the second "White House Tribal Nations Conference" held on December 16, 2010, Interior Secretary Ken Salazar emphasized progress on meeting trust management responsibilities, empowering tribal governments and working with them to build safe, strong communities.

The Secretary also discussed the work remaining to build "a solid foundation for a bright, prosperous and more fulfilling future for the First Americans."

Who is Jade Doxtater

By Joelle Thomas and Thunderhawk Times staff

Jade Doxtater is a senior at Oneida Nation High School. She was born November 4, 1992. She has been attending Oneida "for seven years altogether." She's been to two other schools besides Oneida, for third through fifth grades.

She is ¾ Oneida and the rest is "unknown," says Jade.

She doesn't participate in pow-wows, but she likes to watch them. She used to love reading, but she says she not as big as a reader that she used to be. She doesn't go to GTC meetings but she said she should.

She doesn't play sports, but she is in the Oneida High School Diversity Club.

Her plans for the summer are to get her own place, get her own car, and "start her life out right."

Jade Doxtater

If she could meet and possibly interview one celebrity in the whole world, and she said it had to be Hayley Williams because she loves her.

When asked if there was one thing that we should know about her, she said "she is not a people person." She likes to keep to herself.

The reasons she chose to be in journalism class is because a lot of people have told her that she is an excellent writer, like her sisters.

Her favorite subject in school is Art, and, of course, her least favorite would be math.

Her hobbies outside of school are photograph, playing video games, and playing paintball.

She also said when she has the money to do it, she LOVES to go paintballing. Otherwise she loves to play all of her videogames.

Jade comes from a big family. Her father is John Doxtater and her mum is Stacey Moore. Jade says her heroines in life are her mother, Stacey, and her step-mom, Jodi Doxtater.

Jade's favorite color is orange and the genre of music she listens to is Alternative.

Her favorite quote is, "I hate people who remind me of myself."

And now that you know the one and the only wonderful Jade Doxtater, it's time to wrap things up here.

Meet Jason Skenandore

Jason Skenandore

By JoJo Santiago

Jason Skenadore is a twelfth grader at Oneida Nation High School. He has been attending ONHS for three years now and went to Flandreu Indian School before that.

He has five people in his family.

His hobby outside of school is playing lacrosse. His favorite type of music is R & B and Rap. His favorite colors are blue, black, gray, and white. His favorite store is Elf's, his favorite sport team is the Packers, and his favorite animal is a pit bull.

Guess what! He picked the Packers over the Bears and he is taking the Pack over the Steelers, too.

It's ONHS Junior JoJo Santiago

By Jason Skenandore

JoJo Santiago is an eleventh grader at Oneida Nation High School. He has attended Oneida schools since first grade.

He took journalism class because he "needed the credit."

His family is brothers Eddie and Brandon, and his sisters are Aja, Val, and Deb.

The one person he would want to interview is Kobe "because he is laid back and my favorite basketball player."

He does not like to do creative writing. His favorite classes are Art II and Ancient World History.

JoJo Santiago

The hobbies he likes to do outside of school are "hanging out with friends and watching TV."

The music he likes to listen to is mostly rap. His favorite artist is Lil Wayne. He doesn't listen to the radio.

JoJo's grades are pretty good, mostly A's and B's.

His favorite food is enchiladas. The clothing he likes is shirts. He enjoys going to FootLocker. The sport he loves to play is football. His favorite sports team is the LA Lakers.

His hero is Greg Matson because he "has his stuff together and is very wise."

JoJo's words of advice or motto is, "Go for the gusto!"

JoJo wants the world to know that they "can't guard him." He has future plans that include college and afterward. And, with him, it's Packers "all the way."

My Scoop

Senior Class of 2011

By Mary Powless

Thunderhawk Times

So, the year is coming to an end. That means "Hello" to 2011. The school year will be nearly halfway through when we come back from our winter break (which runs December 24 through January 3).

Seniors, that means… WE'RE ALMOST DONE!!! YAY!

Some seniors here at ONHS will be done at semester, and won't have to get up every Monday through Friday. (LUCKY! And congratulations to those who this applies to!) The next time we'll see those seniors will be at our graduation ceremony.

We have 16 seniors in the Class of 2011; yes I know what you're thinking, small class right? Well, compared to other schools that are not all about a certain culture, yeah, we are a very small class. You should know though, that, in most cases, you must be a certain amount of Native American to get into our school. That explains why we have such a small school. We are also very strict on who we let in our schools.

Anyway, back to the importance of this article… us. We have been doing a lot of fundraising for our senior class trip; it would be great if you, the community, would help us raise money for that trip by contributing money by buying stuff from us.

Get to know La Kota

By Joelle Thomas

Thunderhawk Times

La Kota Martinez is currently going to Oneida Nation High School. She is in 9th grade. She "loves playing basketball." Her nickname is "Miss Ballaholic."

Her favorite color is purple. Her favorite food is pizza.

She loves the name brands Jordan and Aeropostale. Her favorite store to go shop at is Finish Line. She loves the NBA team the Miami Heat.

I asked her if there was one animal she could have as a pet and this is what she said: "I'd have a monkey!"

La Kota Martinez

Her favorite basketball player is Le Bron James from the Miami Heat.

She also said she wants to go to college when she gets out of high school.

Well now you know the one and the only Miss Ballaholic!

Winter brings snow days

By Schuyler Metoxen

Winter brings the possibility of Snow Days-those unexpected breaks from the school routine.

How do you like to spend your time when the weather gets crazy and it is below freezing outside? I'll tell you some of the things I find interesting on a snow day.

I love to just hang out with the family or my siblings and relax, while possibly playing games.

The best things I love to do are to just take that day and snuggle on the couch with a great big blanket and watch movies. In the past I have taken snow days to watch all of the Harry Potter movies. I could not believe it was possible for me to do that and sit still through each one.

You will amaze yourselves on the things you figure out while being stuck in doors all day long. Maybe you're the type of person who just loves to sit indoors and cook all sorts of things, such as deserts, cookies, huge dinners, etc. Who knows? You may even create your own new little creation that just knocks the socks off of everyone who eats your hard day's work.

There are so many possibilities that come out of having a Snow Day. Just always remember, even though you are not outside your house playing and going here and there, there are always things to be done and to be created.

Don't let your one day off go to waste; remember all the things you are good at these are the days to put them in use.

Scabies is an equal opportunity infection

By Jocelyn Champeau
Community Health Nurse

SCABIES….. We all know the word. And that it has something to do with our skin. There are a lot of rumors, misunderstandings, and confusion about this often-frustrating skin condition.

But what are the FACTS about Scabies? What causes it? How is it treated? How is it transmitted… and how can it be prevented?

In our community we have been seeing a consistent number of Scabies cases, and, while it is considered a "nuisance condition" and is not reportable or followed by Public Health departments, we understand that it can be very frustrating to treat, control, and overall handle in your home.

Here are the basics about this fairly common skin condition:

Scabies is caused by a microscopic mite (bug) that burrows into the skin. The skin then gets irritated, and often has pimple-like bumps, occasionally in a line-like pattern. Sometimes the skin actually blisters.

The most common reason people discover that they have been affected by Scabies is that they start itching: ITCHING is the major symptom, and it is usually very intense, worsening at night. If scratched, sometimes the skin can break open and you may get an infection in the skin, causing crusty scabbing to the site.

ANYBODY can get Scabies: it affects ALL socioeconomic levels, all ages, races, genders, and without regard to standards of hygiene. Getting Scabies does NOT mean someone is not a "clean person".

Scabies is spread by direct skin-to-skin contact including sexual contact. Occasionally, it can be spread by contact with the undergarments or bed linens of an infected person, but only if the items have been contaminated by the infected person IMMEDIATELY beforehand.

If exposed, symptoms will appear from 2-6 weeks later in people who have NOT previously been affected by Scabies. If you've had Scabies before, though-the symptoms can show up within 1-4 DAYS after any further re-exposures.

It's important to be aware that an infected person is able to spread Scabies until ALL MITES & EGGS are DESTROYED: this usually occurs after ONE treatment with an anti-scabies medication, usually a cream or lotion.

- USUALLY, the cream or lotion is applied to the whole body except the head, then is left on for the prescribed amount of time, and finally washed off as directed.
- It is a good idea to wash all clothing & bed linens used by anyone infected with Scabies in the three days before being treated, using HOT cycles of both WATER for washing & for the DRYER: this will kill the mites and eggs.
- If items cannot be washed & dried on HOT? Then placing them in a tightly closed plastic bag for seven days will also kill the mites & eggs.
- It is NOT recommended to use environmental pesticides, like "bug bombs' or sprays: they haven't been shown to be needed, effective, and add potentially harmful toxins to the home.

ANYONE that a person infested with Scabies has had skin-to-skin contact with is potentially going to become infested with Scabies, too: Therefore, it is recommended that family members and sexual contacts are referred to their health care providers to get treatment preventatively, at the same time as the infected person.

Scabies is a nuisance; however, it can be treated, controlled, and prevented if recognized early and treated properly.

If you have any further questions, please feel free to contact your medical provider or the Oneida Community Health Nursing Department at 920-869-2711. Thank You!

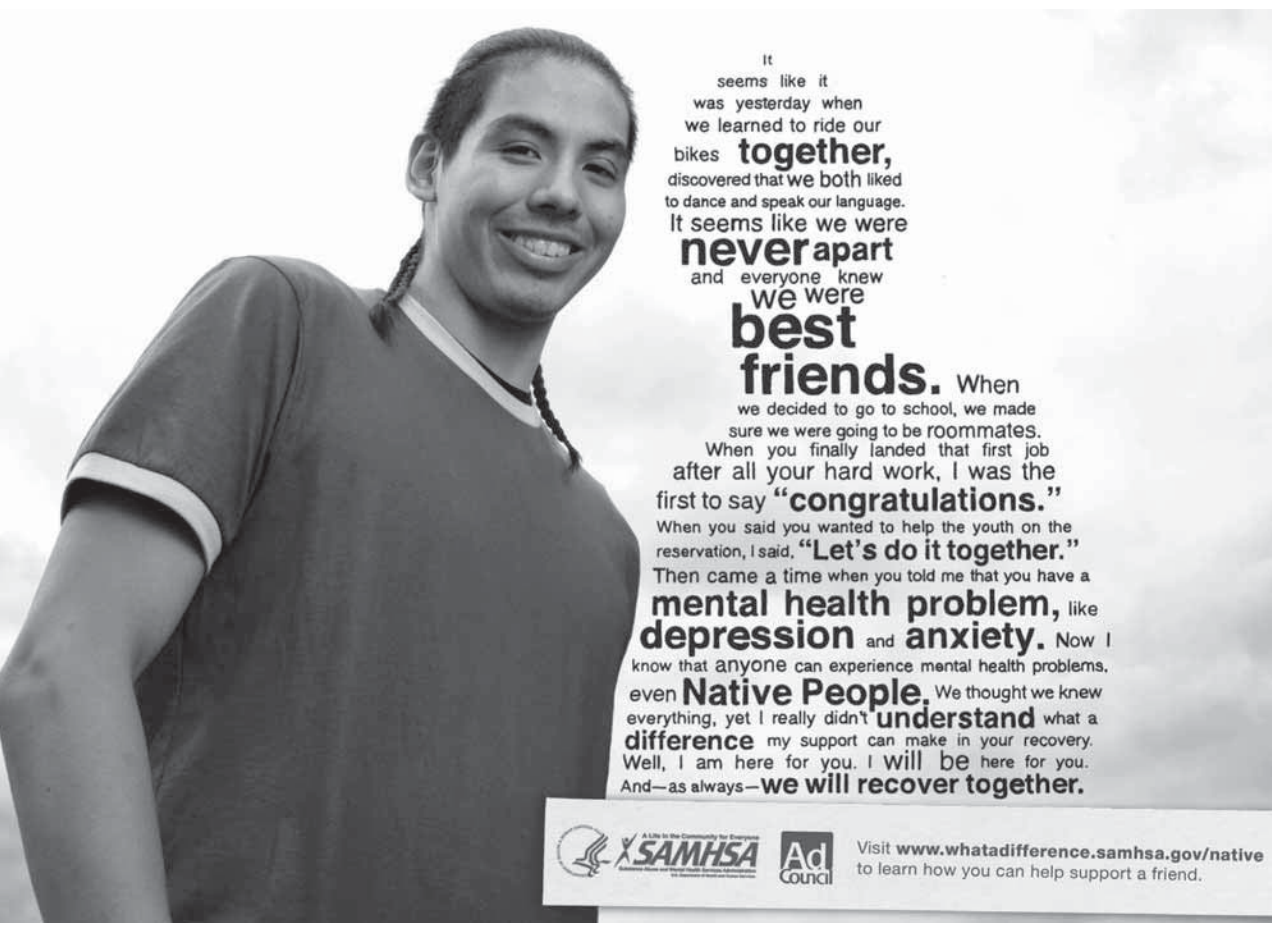
USDA Home Loan Program

Shawano, WI ~ With an abundance of homes for sale in most of the country, buyers continue to have plenty of choices and lots of bargaining power. Unfortunately, for many, being able to take advantage of the current housing market and purchase a home can be difficult. The down economy continues to make it hard for individuals and families to save for a down payment, extinguishing dreams of homeownership.

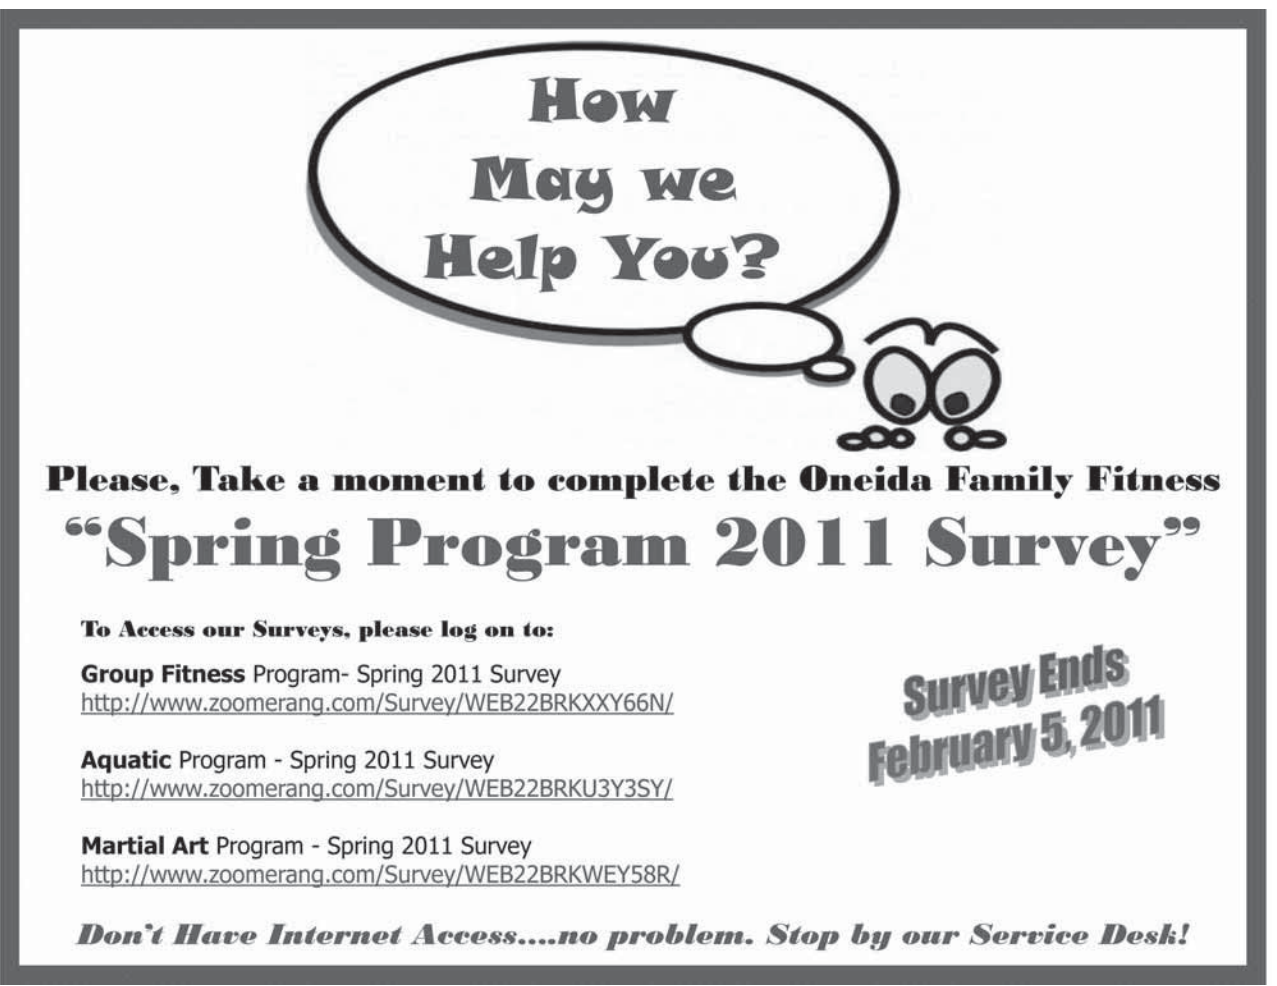
With the help of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Rural Development's No Down Payment home loan programs, those dreams of homeownership may still come true.



Stan Gruszynski, Wisconsin State Director, announced today the availability of funds for Homeownership Loans to Wisconsin residents.

"While some take owning a home for granted, there are a number of people through the State that homeownership remains just a dream. Considering the current economic climate of the Nation and because finding financing for a home in rural areas can be difficult, achieving this dream may seem nearly impossible. But, USDA Rural Development can help," said Gruszynski. "By opening the doors to more homeownership opportunities, we are helping to improve the quality of life for Wisconsin residents during these hard times."

USDA Rural Development's Rural Housing Direct Home Loan Program offers 100 percent financing with no down payment required for low and lower income individuals or families at a 4.5 percent interest rate. These loans are made directly through USDA Rural Development and are offered for a period of 30-38 years. The repayment on the loan may be subsidized by the Federal Government, based on the household income. Direct loans may be made for the purchase of an existing home or new home construction.



The amount loaned is determined on repayment ability of the borrower. The number of dependants and buyer's income are also factors in the loan package. Loans made under this program are to families with income 80% below the median income level of the county where they live and who would not otherwise qualify for a conventional loan. Median income is calculated and some expenses are taken into consideration. County Income limits for the programs are posted on the USDA Rural Development Wisconsin website at, http://www.rurdev.usda.gov/wi/programs/rhs/ and clicking on Income and Property Eligibility on the right hand side of the screen.

For further information call your local USDA Rural Development Office at 715-524-8522 ext 4 or by visit our website at www.rurdev.usda.gov.

Elder Abuse

By Joyce Johnson
Elder Abuse Prevention Supervisor, Oneida Elder Services

Elder Abuse is a term that makes us cringe and pull back in disbelief. Unfortunately it is a glaring reality in our existence as Tribal people in today's society.

In 2009 the Wisconsin's statistics on reports of elder abuse show that Elder-at-Risk reports received throughout the state were 5,316 cases of suspected abuse, neglect or financial exploitation. 28 of these incidents were related to death and a total of 371 incidents were life threatening.

There are more reports of financial exploitation than any other elder abuse category. As people age they may depend on their adult relatives as caregivers and those caregivers may view financial exploitation as an exchange for their future inheritance. And in today's economic downturn the loss of an elder's home may contribute to a situation where an elder's finances can be easily exploited because the elder may become more dependent on the provision of shelter by relatives.

Chapter 46.90 of Wisconsin State Statutes defines Financial Exploitation as obtaining an elder's money or property by deceiving or enticing the individual, or by forcing, compelling, or coercing the individual to give, sell at less than fair market value, or in other ways convey money or property against his or her will without his or her informed consent.

If you suspect that an elder is being abused in any way please contact the Oneida Elder Abuse Prevention Coordinator at (920) 869-2448 X 6833; 8:00 A.M. – 4:30 P.M.; Weekdays: Monday – Friday or 1-800-867-1551; 24 hr. service. If the situation is an emergency and an immediate safety issue please call the Oneida Police Department at (920) 869-2339 or 911.

National Indian Council on Aging (NICOA) Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP)

Announces Important Changes:

Paid Sick Leave
New Participant Time Sheet

In accordance with new SCSEP federal regulations the require participants to be offered necessary sick leave, NICOA SCSEP has established a policy allowing paid sick leave which can be used through the end of the grant year (June 30, 2011). The numbers of hours that can be paid are 20 hours of sick leave beginning in January. Sick leave cannot be accumulated or carried over after June 30, 2011. These hours are to be used for necessary sick time only. Notify your supervisor in advance, if possible and at the time of your absence.

Please note: Absences of more than five days for illness require a written release to return to your training assessment.

Your supervisor also will receive the new time sheet from NICOA state program manager. It is revised to include a column for reporting hours of sick leave used. NICOA SCSEP will track hours of leave used through its database system. No more than 20 hours will be paid from January through June 30, 2011; any sick time over 20 hours will be unpaid leave.

Enrollment Adjustments

As you know, NICOA SCSEP is dependent on grant funds; and in some states the rate of spending has exceeded the funds available. We regret that enrollment is being reduced as well as hours in some areas to keep the project operating through June 30, 2011. When funds are available and as remaining participants leave SCSEP for employment or other reasons, those who are being exited for budgetary reasons will have the opportunity to return to SCSEP. All participants need to continue to look for outside employment that will provide better pay and hours than are available through SCSEP work experience training.

NICOA wants to hear from you!

If you have learned something new in your community service assignment or provided exceptional service to the agency where you are assigned or completed a training course on your own, we want to know! Your accomplishments deserve to be applauded. Include the What, When Where, Why and Who benefitted in a written note.

Please share you successes and accomplishments in writing with your NICOA SCSEP program manager. Notes from your training site supervisor are also welcome!

May you gain skills and confidence to succeed in 2011!

The goals of NICOA SCSEP are to assist you to increase your skills, knowledge, confidence, and employability; and ultimately, to help you find a job outside SCSEP and become more secure, independent and economically self-sufficient.

In the face of changes in the economy, budget limits, and challenging situations, NICOA SCSEP encourages you to set your goals, believe in yourself, your wisdom and your dreams; and to continue to work with all parts of the community to help you reach your goals.

Focus on Your Plan

NICOA staff will be focusing more this year on developing with you plans to become self-sufficient. Known as an Individual Employment Plan (IEP), an IEP is your blueprint for action and success; and it is updated with you at least twice a year. You need to set an employment goal in your first IEP; and modify your goal and targets as you accomplish the steps you have outlined for yourself with NICOA staff and the input of your supervisor.

You receive a copy of your IEP so that you can use it to motivate yourself to accomplish your target steps towards your goals. Instead of placing it in a drawer, I suggest you display it somewhere you will see it often so you can check your progress (on your refrigerator door, office wall, or bathroom mirror). NICOA staff will be checking your progress when they conduct an assessment/IEP update interview with you; and helping you to set new targets and timelines.

To be truly successful, each of us must do more than focus on a community service assignment alone. Creating an IEP will help you chart your path. Depending on your sills and interests, you may need to focus on such things as increasing your basic skills; completing a GED (if you did not graduate from high school); accepting training and referrals to job openings; learning or increasing your job seeking and interviewing skills, computer skills, and/or new skills that are needed by employers in your area.

In the words of aging advocate Senator Claude Pepper: "Life is like a bicycle – You don't fall off unless you stop pedaling?"

Your community service assignment is the core of your SCSEP experience because it gives you opportunity to earn a small wage while you practice some new skills or sharpen your existing abilities. Think of a community service assignment as "training wheels" for the purpose of some stability as you move toward a real job.

Greetings in the New Year from NICOA and the SCSEP Staff!

Cultural Heritage

Genskow donates documents, family photos to Museum

Madelyn Genskow recently donated a binder of documents to the Oneida Nation Museum of Isaiah and Genevieve (Moore) Cornelius' family farm. Isaiah and Genevieve were Madelyn's parents. Their family farm was located on N6668 Moore Rd, Seymour, on the Oneida Nation Reservation. The binder contains tributes of family members, photos, sales receipts, mortgage documents, income taxes, and contacts with vendors, among other things.

As part of the New Deal, The federal government purchased the 40-acre farm for the Oneida Tribe, in the late 1930s. The farm included a 5-room, two story house with a basement. The house did not have indoor plumbing, but there was a well pump in the yard. The farm also included a barn with doors on one side.

Isaiah and Genevieve purchased the farm buildings and leased the land from the Tribe. In the 1940s, they put a dark blue roof and white siding on the house, and also had insulation blown into the walls and attic. Around 1945, Amos Christjohn had wired the house for electricity. They raised horses, milking cows, chickens, pigs, and rabbits. Excess milk was hauled to the Chicago Corner's Cheese Factory, which was owned by James Hodkiewicz. They grew beans, cucumbers, and beets and sold them to canning factories. The family also planted corn, hay, and oats for their animals. There was also a small apple orchard and Genevieve had a beautiful flower garden.

We asked Madelyn why she kept all the documents. She told us, "I've always loved history, not just mine but everyone's. I would love to see more about the history of different Oneida people."

History is very important. It is the only way we can understand who we are and how we got to be that way. Any connection to our ancestors helps us understand our culture or how we fit in. It is exceptionally rewarding to be able to trace your ancestral roots. Through discovering your roots you become aware of whom you are as a person.

Think about preserving your own family history. It is educational and you will enable the coming generations to learn about their ancestors. {For tips on organizing and preserving your family history, visit http://www.mnhs.org/people/mngg/stories/.} or performing an internet search with the phrase "preserving family history" will yield helpful information that you can use to preserve your family history.

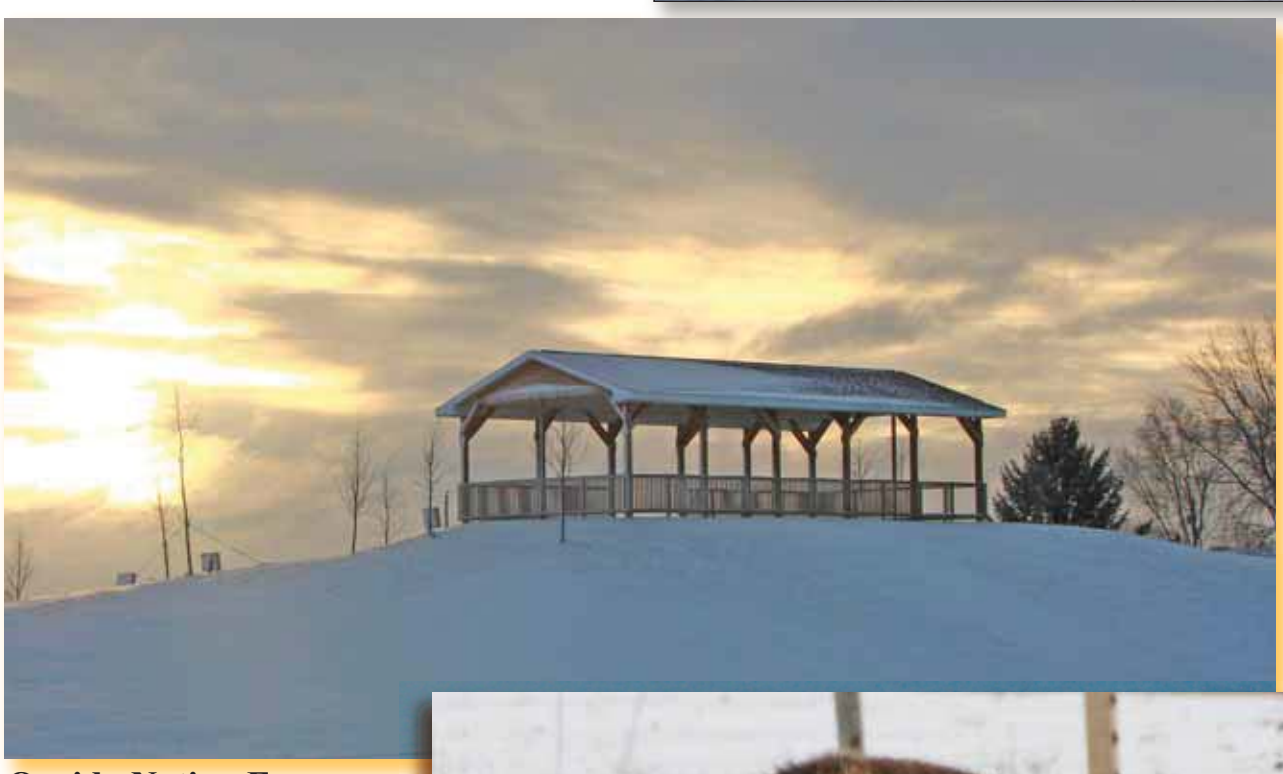
Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems

Do you know where your food comes from?



In these times of Mad Cow Disease, Chronic Wasting Disease, and Chicken Flu; it is important to know where your food comes from. The Oneida Nation Farm uses sustainable and best management practices, new plant varieties, and fertilizers that can double the yields of major crops. Selecting livestock genetics increases the amount of meat that animals produce. No steroids, hormones, antibiotics, or animal byproducts are used in our feed. The Oneida Nation Farm features a "Point-of-Origin" cow-calf pasture, a beef feedlot, and pastured Bison herd.

The Farm has approximately 450 - 550 head of Black Angus cattle, with about 160 cow/calf pairs which is used to stock their beef feedlots. The cow/calf operation works like this: the cows are left in a 140 acre pasture to feed along with a couple of excellent breeding bulls. When the cows give birth the male calves and select female calves go to the feedlot and some female calves stay in the grazing herd. This way the Farm can tell you exactly where that meat came from, which is now being called 'Point of Origin' and adds much value to your products.

The Oneida Nation Farm is also deeply concerned about the health of the Oneida people and our community. That is why education is of extreme importance to the folks at the Oneida Nation Farm. As diseases continue to spread, and health continues to decline, you will see a change in our views from just eating plain food to eating healthy food. As people start becoming more aware of how they are fueling their human gas tank they will understand the need to pay more for good healthy food.

Oneida Business Committee (OBC) Councilwoman Trish King enjoyed the Special General Tribal Council (GTC) meeting held Saturday, February 5 which resulted in tabling the Judiciary Law and Legislative Procedures Act.

"Although the discussion took a long time, there was some really good points made. Some of that was about keeping in mind our ways and our values," said King.

The meeting dedicated the bulk of the time discussing the educational requirements for judicial candidates. Option A had the highest requirements; a bachelor degree in one of 11 majors, or a bachelor degree with 400 hours of additional training, or one full year as an Oneida Appeals Commissioner. Option B required a bachelor degree, or one full year as an Oneida Appeals Commissioner. Option C set no requirements.

Some members of the GTC such as Brian Doxtator expressed preference for option C.

"We talk about common sense, that should be the requirement, but how do you measure it? Well, I think the people who are voting measure if you have commons sense or not," said Doxtator.

However, others shared real life experiences that demonstrated a need for potential judges to be familiar with the plethora of laws pertaining to Indian Country. Herb Powless told a story of an Oneida man who killed a non-Indian on the reservation and was convicted in state court.

"Under the seven major crime acts, crimes committed on reservations, this man in 1949 should have been tried in federal court, and nobody on our council knew about the seven major crime acts," he said.

Wes Martin spoke in support of creating a court to deal with the Indian Child Welfare Act.

"I'm in favor of a forum that allows us to control what happens to our own Oneida children, and I think that's very important, we don't have that today. Every time I have this discussion, it always comes back to 'what's it going to cost us to have control of our Indian children?' I don't think there's a price tag,"

Trial Court Judge Linda Dallas asked that the proposed judiciary law be sent to a working committee.

"We have an Appeals Commission in place right now, and they are a judicial system. We have something in place, and we don't need a court right now," said Dallas who is on the Appeals Commission.

Loretta Metoxen introduced a motion to adopt a modified version of Option B eliminating the prevision where one year of service on the Appeals Commission could be substituted for a bachelor degree.

Cathy L. Metoxen moved to table the motion and direct the Legislative Operating Committee (LOC) to formulate a working group to bring back options six months from the day of the meeting. The tabling passed with 634 yes votes and 274 no votes.

Welcome Back Home to Titletown

The World Champion Green Bay Packers bring the Lombardi Trophy back home to Titletown. Thousands of fans braved the cold to extend a warm welcome home to the team members and coaches at Lambeau Field. The Oneida Nation Gate was filled with die hard Packer fans and was a perfect location to get a glimpse of the Champions as they rolled into Lambeau. Fans gathered along the motorcade route that began at Austin Straubel Airport to Packerland Drive, to Hazelwood and the home stretch to Lombardi street and Lambeau Field on Monday, February 7, 2011 – the day after the Green Bay Packers won the Superbowl Title against the Pittsburgh Steelers, 25-31.

Demand for housing assistance steady at OHA

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The Kalihwisaks will be focusing on the effects of the economic downturn and sharing stories of Oneidas struggling in these financially hard times. This is the second story of the series.

With many Oneida community members entrenched in a battle with very slow recovering economy, many would suspect that housing needs would increase at the Oneida Housing Authority (OHA).

The OHA acknowledges that there is a need for housing in the community but to identify the current economic condition as the sole source of the issue would be irresponsible.

According to OHA staff the number of inquires for housing has remained steady with no measurable increase during the economic downturn. With 70 percent of the clients that meet with Scott Denny, OHA Housing Coordinator, being considered low-income, he points to a more broad list of problems playing a role in the request for assistance.

In meeting with over 2500 inquiries about housing since 2006 Denny has been able to identify key factors leading to the need for housing assistance. Denny can place each situation into the following categories; low or

On Saturday, January 22, 2011 the family and friends of Toni Marie (Stevens) House came together and celebrated her achievement in receiving her Doctorate of Human Services. Toni is the daughter of Marjorie (Powless) Stevens and Ernest Stevens Sr. Toni's husband Doug and three children Cole, Jasmine, and Jessica all seen her commitment to a better life first hand as she attended and taught at the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh, while home schooling all three children.

Toni's educational journey includes receiving her Bachelors of Arts in Human Development in 1987 from the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay. Her emphasis was in Lay Midwifery, a program that she created because it didn't exist.

She earned her Masters of Science in Education-Counselor Education, in 1992 from the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh. Her emphasis was in Community Counseling. At that time she received UWO's Graduate School-Graduate Honors Award. She also became an Honorary Member of UWO Alpha Delta Omega.

In September of 2010 Ms. Toni House became Dr. Toni House. She received her Doctorate of Human Services, School of Human Services from Capella University, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Her concentration was in General Human Services. Dr. House's dissertation: The benefits of Oneida Nation High School students learning the native language.

Toni began teaching at UWO in 1999 as an Adjunct Instructor, teaching Human Services classes such as Domestic Violence, and Multicultural Education to name a couple.

In 1999 she became an Assistant Professor in Human Services Leadership, again teaching numerous courses in the Human Services Program. Toni continues to teach at UWO today.

In her lifetime career, Human Services has always been a large part of who Toni is and what she does. She has always wanted a better world for Indian people and has been strongly influenced by the many strong Ukwehuwe women that are not only her dear friends, but also guided on her path to helping others.

Jeanne Shenandoah is one of those women who has played a large role in whom Toni has become today. Jeanne showed Toni how important it was to honor her own body as not just a woman, but an Ukwehuwe woman. Jeanne taught her the importance of taking the power back of being a woman and loving ourselves as women and loving our bodies. It is due to Jeanne's influence that Toni became a mid wife.

VFW Post #7784 honored for recruitment efforts

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Robert Cornelius Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #7784 has come a long way since the post only had seven active members just 5 years ago.

Andy John, the post's Quarter Master, received the National Aide-de-Camp Award for his efforts in recruiting members to the VFW. The post boosted their membership to 120 veterans and has a 110 percent membership rate.

"I've been doing a lot of recruiting, "said John. "It's time for the younger guys to join us, step up to the line and help us keep this place going. We lose a veteran every 90 seconds in this country."

John, along with other post members, have been successfully recruiting other veterans to join the post along with younger veterans that served in Iraq and Afghanistan. John is quick to point out that in his eyes this is a post award. "It's an honor for the whole post," he said.

"This is one of the greatest honors for our post," said Post Commander Cletus Ninham. "All of our members are helping recruit. This award is for our whole group."

The post currently only has 10 percent of its membership categorized as young but is slowly gaining more. While many local posts are seeing declines in membership or total shutdowns, Post #7784 is adding about four or five members a month.

"The post really is an asset to the community. We want to help educate the younger vets to what benefits are available to them and help their claims go faster," said Ninham.

"The more members we have the stronger we will be," added John.

The post is located at 2980 E. Service Road in Oneida.

Oneida comedian to perform at UW-Green Bay

GREEN BAY – Charlie Hill, a renowned Native American stand-up comedian, will perform at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 18 in the Phoenix Room inside the University Union on the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay campus, 2420 Nicolet Drive.

Hill, one of the first and most prominent Native American comedians, is a member of the Oneida Nation. He uses humor to share things about Native American culture and break down stereotypes. Hill's humor is filled with cultural observations and focuses on his experiences as a Native American performer in the national spotlight.

Hill has performed on the Tonight Show With Jay Leno and The Late Show With David Letterman. Hill has also written for Roseanne and was featured on Moesha.

Hill is the inspiration and leader of "Club Red" and the "Club Red Players," a comedy show on public radio. In 2009, he received the "Ivy Bethune Tri-Union Diversity Award" for the Screen Actors Guild. He was also featured in a Showtime special, "The Indian Comedy Slam, No Reservations Needed." Hill was the featured performer in the PBS program "On and Off the Res," from Native American Public Telecommunications.

The performance at UW-Green Bay, titled "Lastelishtha," is free and open to the public. The event is sponsored by the UW-Green Bay Intertribal Student Council. Canned goods will be collected at the event and donated to a local food pantry.

Passing On...

Canard, Ruth (Swamp)
May 17, 1915 – December 13, 2010

Ruth Swamp Canard, 95, beloved mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, and friend passed to the spirit world on Dec. 27, 2010. She was born May 17, 1915, in Oneida, WI. She was a proud member of the Oneida Indian Nation of Wisconsin. Ruth spent most of her life in PHX, AZ and ABQ, NM. She was retired from the BIA, where she had a long and enjoyable career. Ruth passed peacefully surrounded by her family. She is survived by her children, Linda (Allen) Doering, Patti Canard, Roger (Denise) Canard; her grandchildren Robert (Andrea) Canard, Jason Romero, Brantley (Tammy) Doering, and Tracy (LT) Goodluck; six great-grandchildren, and her caring companions Clara, Ruth and Evelyn.

She was preceded in death by her mother Nellie Baird Swamp; her husband of 54 years Virgil "Buck" Canard; and her eldest son Robert L. Canard.

Doxtator, Ruth "Cookie" Marie
November 12, 1934 – January 30, 2011

Ruth "Cookie" Marie Doxtator passed away January 30, 2011. Ruth was born to the late Finley and Evelyn Peters Sr. on November 12, 1934. In June of 1951, Cookie married Vernon David Doxtator. Together they raised 11 children. For many years, Cookie worked at Elderly Services in Oneida, being employed as a cook. Cookie enjoyed several hobbies in her life, especially ones as was a cook at several community weddings, and those helping at funerals in the community. Cookie enjoyed watching Pow-Wows, and especially liked to cook for those dancers. Cookie helped and loved caring for her grandkids. She was especially kind to all animals, especially her cats, and any/all animals in the area. Cookie was a kind-hearted soul, who enjoyed helping.

She is survived by her 10 children and their spouses; Mona (Matt) Ellis, Seymour, Toni Thomas, Green Bay, Ann (Doug) Haven, Oneida, Connie Cox, Seymour, Steve Doxtator, Vancouver, WA., Pam (Fred) Skube, Vancouver, WA., Gerald Doxtator, Waupun, James Doxtator, Vancouver, WA., Patti Doxtator, Vancouver, WA., and Vernon Peters (Special friend Carol), Green Bay. Her 19 grandchildren, and 12 great grandchildren, and siblings further survive her.

Cookie was preceded in death by her husband Vernon, and her daughter Carey Anderson.

Services were held at Ryan Funeral Home, 305 N. Tenth Street De Pere on Friday, February 4, 2011 at 11am. Pastor Earl L. Smith officiated with burial in the Oneida Nation Cemetery following the service.

Orie, Gerald Steven
July 11, 1941 – February 3, 2011

Gerald Steven Orie, 69, Green Bay, passed on to the Creator's world on Wednesday, February 3, 2011 after a long, courageous battle with cancer. Jerry was born on July 11, 1941 to the late Steve and Elizabeth (Bagosy) Orie. Jerry grew up in the Hungarian community of Southgate, Michigan. He was proud of his Hungarian heritage growing up in the history, language, music, cuisine, and culture of his family and friends. Jerry was an anthropologist, social scientist, and scholar of Native American and World history. He was well educated and was schooled in Montieth College, Detroit, Michigan, and graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay. Jerry worked for the Wisconsin Department of Transportation for many years. He was also a substitute teacher for the Menominee Indian School District. Jerry loved the outdoors, the New Mexico skyline, traveling West, and visiting Mexico. He loved the mountains, camping, swimming, and nature. He enjoyed visiting national parks and he was an avid reader.

Jerry was a dear, loving husband to Sandra DeCoteau Orie. They were married in Detroit, Michigan on May 25, 1968. He provided a solid foundation of family values and love to his children and grandchildren. He was a great friend and was well respected to all who knew him.

Jerry is survived by his wife, Sandra DeCoteau Orie and their children Fern Orie, John Orie, Jules (Kim Hendricks) Orie, Linda Orie and Julia Orie. He is survived by his grandchildren Hannah Orie, Sage Birdsbill, Sierra Birdsbill, and Orion Wesho. He is further survived by his brother, Donald Orie and his niece Jonise Orie, and many in-laws, aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, and cousins.

Jerry was preceded in death by his parents Steve and Elizabeth Orie, his sister Janet Lawson, his father-in-law and mother-in-law, Harry and Vivian DeCoteau, sister-in-law Hareen DeCoteau O'Connor, and his uncles Frank, Bill, and Alex, and aunts Renee and Mary, and other relatives.

"The work goes on
The cause endures
The Hope still lives
And the Dream shall never die"

We thank the Creator for bringing you to us. You have enriched our lives so very much. Thanks Dad for all your love and support. You've raised us and loved us Dear Grandpa. I'm trailing you closely my Darling. We'll love you forever and be with you always.

Funeral services were held at Ryan Funeral Home, 305 N. Tenth Street, De Pere, at 10:00AM on Wednesday, February 9, 2011 with burial at Emmanuel Lutheran Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, a memorial in Jerry's name has been established. To send online condolences to the family please go to www.ryanfh.com

Hoven assigned to Indian Affairs

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) – U.S. Sen. John Hoeven has been assigned to the Senate's Appropriations, Energy, Agriculture and Indian Affairs committees.

Hoeven said Thursday he's also been put on an advisory panel that serves as a policy sounding board for the Republican Senate leadership.

The former North Dakota Republican governor had been promised the appropriations and energy assignments if he won his Senate race last year.

North Dakota's other senator, Democrat Kent Conrad, already serves on the Agriculture and Indian Affairs committees. Conrad is also a member of the Senate Finance Committee and chairman of the Budget Committee.

North Dakota's new Republican congressman has already been assigned to the House Ways and Means Committee. Rep. Rick Berg will serve on three Ways and Means subcommittees dealing with taxes, public assistance and Social Security.

From 1A/GTC

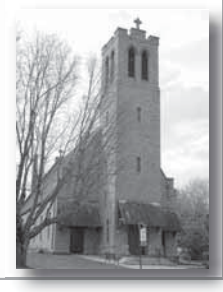
This effects the election of judges that were planned to take place in July of this year.

"The transition … was developed this year specifically because there would be eight Appeals Commissioners' (seats) becoming vacant naturally. Without the law in place, then we'll have to defer that to another time," said King. "The transition is totally built on that timeline, but it's not a bad thing, we just have to refigure it."

King said the LOC will start planning community meetings to work on the recommendations.



"I think there was a lot of wisdom … that was shown. This is one of the hardest laws we're going to do," she said. However, she stated that the more the GTC can contribute to it development of the Judiciary Law, the more the community will feel a sense of ownership of the results.

"I think we're going to get there, I really do, one step at a time," said King.

There was no discussion on the Legislative Procedures Act at the meeting.

Frequently Asked Questions
Oneida Tribal General Election Primary

How will the election process be different for the 2011 General Election?
In 2011, a Primary Election will be held. In years past there was no primary election.

What is a primary?
Excerpts from Oneida Tribal Election Law:
2.12-2. There shall be a primary election for Business Committee positions whenever there are three (3) or more candidates for any officer positions or sixteen (16) or more candidates for the at-large council member positions.
(a) The two (2) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for each officer position shall be placed on the ballot.
(b) The fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for the at-large council member positions shall be placed on the ballot.
(c) Any position where a tie exists to determine the candidates to be placed on the ballot shall include all candidates where the tie exists.
2.12-3. The Election Board shall cancel the primary election if the Business Committee positions did not draw the requisite number of candidates for a primary by the petitioning deadline set for the primary.
2.12-4. In the event a candidate withdraws or is unable to run for office after being declared a winner in the primary, the Election Board shall declare the next highest primary vote recipient the primary winner. This procedure shall be repeated as necessary until the ballot is full or until there are no available candidates. If the ballot has already been printed, the procedures for notifying the Oneida public in section 2.5-11 and 2.5-12 shall be followed, including the requirement to print a notice in the Tribal newspaper if time lines allow.

Why have a primary?
To give members a chance to select from fewer candidates or the Business Committee positions in the General Election.

Will there be a primary for all vacancies?
No. The primary election is for Business Committee vacancies only.

When will the primary be held?
On Saturday, May 7, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

If there are only two candidates running for an officer position, will a primary still be held for that position?
No. The primary is designed to get the top two candidates for each officer position. If only two applicants run for that position, each applicant will automatically be placed on the General Election ballot as a candidate.

If a candidate didn't advance in the primary, can I write their name on my ballot at the General Election?
No. Write-in candidates are not allowed.

When will the Caucus be held?
On Saturday, March 12, 2011 at the Norbert Hill Center at 1:00 p.m.

Is the Caucus just for vacancies within the Business Committee?
No, the Caucus will be for ALL vacancies of all boards, committees, and commissions with elected positions to be filled at the 2011 General Election.

When can I submit application for candidacy?
Officially this is done at the Caucus by being nominated and submitting the required application by the deadline date to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

If I can't attend the Caucus, can I still submit my application to be a candidate?
Yes. You will need to complete a petition and submit the required application by the deadline date.

How long do I have to submit an application to become a candidate?
All applications are due by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, March 18, 2011 to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

When is the General Election?
On Saturday, July 16, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

When can I begin campaigning?
Whenever you wish.
Excerpt from Oneida Election Law: 2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:
(a) Placement of campaign signs:
(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's permission.
(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.
(3) No campaign sign shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.
(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.
(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.
(d) Enforcement. The Zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.
(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Can I vote by absentee ballot?
No. Article III Section 2 of the Constitution states "All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin who are 21 years of age or over shall be qualified voters provided they present themselves in person at the polls on the day of election."

Will the Milwaukee voting site be open for both the primary and general election?
Yes. Business Committee Resolution 03-13-2002-O states: "NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that an approved facility; compliance with the Oneida Election Law, 2.8-0, Section B, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is hereby designated as a second polling site for Oneida triennial elections, beginning with the July, 2002, election." The SEOTS Building is located at 6820 West Wedgewood Drive, Milwaukee, WI.

Goodwill helping area Natives

By Lisa Hurst
Program Team Leader – American Indian Services of the Fox Valley

> "Since the closing of the AmerIndian Center and Native American Service Center, I've seen an increase in requests for programs and services from Indian People residing in the Green Bay Area..."
> – Lisa Hurst, Program Team Leader
> American Indian Services of the Fox Valley

The economic downturn has greatly impacted low-income Oneidas residing throughout the Fox Valley Area. Throughout 2010, American Indian Services of the Fox Valley (AIS-FV) provided services to 555 individuals (31% Oneida - these numbers reflect AIS-FV's initial intake and are unduplicated. It is important to note that we have served most of these people on numerous occasions and in multiple ways) the majority of whom are living below established federal poverty guidelines.

Oneida Tribal Members are truly blessed to have comprehensive benefits at their avail; unfortunately, many of the individuals that I provide support to via AIS-FV don't have reliable, insured vehicles, valid driver's licenses or money for gas or Transit fare. As a result, they can't transport themselves up to the reservation to access the array of services there.

Much of the work that I do via AIS-FV involves attempting to bridge existing gaps in services for Indian People (e.g. helping transport Oneidas up to the reservation for services or connecting them with support down in the Fox Valley Area). In addition, since the closing of the AmerIndian Center and Native American Service Center, I've seen an increase in requests for programs and services from Indian People residing in the Green Bay Area. AIS-FV has been providing outreach services at Harmony Café on West Mason Street to those individuals. Sadly, I've been spending a lot of time intervening in crisis situations (due to loss of jobs and housing) and responding to the emergency needs of low-income Oneidas these days.

The state of the economy has also impacted AIS-FV as a program. In years previous, the Oneida Nation has gifted AIS-FV with financial support that allowed us to provide services to not only Oneidas, but all Native Peoples residing throughout the Fox Valley Area. But with recent budget constraints (cost containment in regards to external donations) the Oneida Finance Committee wasn't able to offer that support in 2010.

In these economically challenging times, I highly encourage all Oneida Tribal Members to access and utilize other Goodwill Programs that are available to them at no/low cost in the Green Bay Area, such as FISC and Harmony Café:

Financial Information & Service Center (FISC) is a program designed to help people find peace of mind and self-sufficiency through financial planning, education and counseling. FISC provides services such as debt management plans, educational workshops, individual and family financial / budget /credit counseling, and long-term assistance. FISC's Green Bay office is also located at our West Mason site. Their contact information is:

- Caring Credit Counselors: will listen, explain options and help you get on track with your finances. We can help you find relief from bills and recover from financial impacts such as job loss, medical issues, etc. Most importantly we LISTEN.
- Budgeting advice: We help you understand where your money is going, identify spending traps and build a spending plan that fits your life. We strive for self sufficiency.
- Bill Paying: Offered for people who like the security or convenience of someone else paying their bills or organizing their finances.
- Credit Reports: We help you understand your report and tips for improving your score.
- Debt Management Plans: can be affordable ways to consolidate debt, seek lower interest rates and get out of debt without bankruptcy.
- Housing counseling: can help you prepare for homeownership or look for ways to avoid foreclosure. We are HUD approved.
- Educational workshops: include topics such as budgeting, foreclosure prevention, homebuyer education, improving your credit worthiness, bankruptcy, etc.
- Bankruptcy counseling: is offered for people considering filing for bankruptcy; and the Bankruptcy Personal Finance Course which is required for people who file for bankruptcy.

FISC services are offered in person, via telephone or online.

Harmony Café is a safe and peaceful place to celebrate diversity of people, ideas, and activities. It is open to all people of all ages. The Harmony Café has a wide variety of food and drink choices, as well as a cyber café, free WI-FI, meeting room, toddler area, and unique programs such as drumming circles, live music, issue discussions, poetry readings, etc. …

Both FISC and Harmony Café are located at:

How you can help

While waiting for economic recovery, AIS-FV continues to seek financial support that will allow us to keep on providing services to Native Americans. We are looking for ways to network with tribal departments, agencies and offices to help Indian People overcome barriers and access services. At this time I would like to urge all Oneida Tribal Members to donate to and shop at Goodwill. Please know that related proceeds support programs like AIS-FV, FISC and Harmony Café and will help us better meet the needs of the people we serve.

Matt Cornelius, age 26, has made some bad decisions in his life, but he's trying to get back on track with help from Goodwill Industries and other programs in Appleton.

"I do my best to do what I got to do," he said.

Cornelius was convicted of second degree sexual assault of a minor and spent about four years in custody.

Released a year-and-a-half ago, he's been working at Goodwill Store in Appleton as a donation attendant. He also participates in programs offered by Goodwill's American Indian Services of the Fox Valley, and gets help from Program Team Leader Lisa Hurst.

"Lisa's helped me through my troubles," said Cornelius. Hurst introduced Cornelius to a support group for people released from prison and occasionally gives him rides to the Oneida Community Health Center or an area food pantry.

Cornelius is living at a hotel, but hopes to move into the transitional shelter program COTS.

"You can stay there for about two years. They help you with your goals," he said.

Cornelius' hours at Goodwill vary between 24 to 32 hours a week.

"My biggest struggle right now is with the job. I'm trying to find another part-time job even though I have a part-time job. It's just with these days off, I can't budget," he said.

Currently, Cornelius is training to do maintenance work, and is planning for the future.

"I would like to go to school. I like to cook, so I want to try and get into the Fox Valley Tech to go for culinary arts," he said.

no income, marital issues, social issues, domestic issues, chemical dependencies, financial and budgeting issues, low employment marketability, criminal issues, resource exhaustion, inadequate education, and teen/young adult pregnancy.

"There are a lot of issues that lead to an income problem, these things are variables that we see to one degree to another that definitely impact people's options," Denny said.

Denny feels by simply building four walls with a roof is not going to solve the perceived housing issues.

"People are saying we need housing. Putting people just haphazardly in housing - if they have in a number of these issues - results in them not being able to maintain their housing because these issues are still remaining," Denny said.

The OHA has almost embraced these issues and has hired staff to help families work through their unique situation.

"We don't want people to fail," Denny said. "If you fail here, where else are you going to go?

The OHA also is using grant money to get people out of (the OHA) and into home ownership.

"We have a Ross Grant that helps coordinate activities to help budgeting, employability and get them out of housing. Our ultimate goal is to get them out of our housing and into their own," said Dale Wheelock, OHA Executive Director.

Currently there are 1116 people utilizing the OHA and their homes. The current waiting list has held steady at roughly 100 families with the OHA having 328 housing units, including home ownership opportunities. The OHA expects an additional 50 added in the next two budget cycles.

The OHA has a minimum rent limit of $50 and requires tenants to have employment due to it being an income-based program. If individuals don't qualify for OHA assistance, the staff works to find other tribal programs or outside programs to assist them. They can be reached by calling (920) 869-2227 and is located at 2913 Commissioner Street in Oneida.

OBC Forum...

Oneidas punishing Oneidas for doing nothing wrong. Is it our way, should it be?

Early in my first term, I wrote about a young Indian leader from the Northwest who brought up an interesting topic for discussion at our National Congress of American Indian discussion table. He proudly told of his tribe's new policy of mandating that their youth in order to become full members of their tribe, would have to demonstrate that they were competent in their understanding and exercise of their traditional ceremonies. If the youth did not comply, they were punished by not being allowed to become adult members of the Tribe. I questioned the fairness of their practice. I asked him about what happened to those youth who had other interests, like music, like pursuing careers, or exploring other religious practices and ceremonies. I was promptly told that what his tribe did was not my business. He was right, it was not my business, but then again, he brought it up.

Ed Delgado
Councilman

Over the past five years, I've often thought about that short discussion. I've often wondered how that worked out for those tribal youth who were more inclined to think for themselves and to make decisions regarding their own lives based upon their own values. I have often wondered about their more free-thinking Indian youth. Were they punished, or were those wonderful free thinking minds destroyed by having to bow down to the dictates of authoritarian leaders who would punish their own people for actions that should not be punishable.

Now, five years later, our own Tribal leaders are proposing policy that would logically mandate the use of Oneida language at the worksite, and if violated, could lead to punishment. In other words, Oneidas could be fired for not using language while working even when the use of the language is not a mandatory part of their jobs. Vice Chairwoman has said that the policy logically allows for punishment, even though I don't think she supports the concept of punishing employees for not using Oneida language while working. She has recommended a change to the policy if punishment is to be eliminated.

Our Oneida language is a beautiful language. As a Tribal educator, I spent almost 10 years teaching it and incorporating it into my curriculum. As a teacher of Oneida children, I needed to learn all the Oneida language I could, and I did, and I understood that if I did not, I could be fired (punished) because teaching Oneida children requires knowledge and use of the language. There are other professions within the Oneida Tribe where that Oneida language should be a requirement. I support all of that. But I do not support requiring Oneida language for those professions that do not logically require its use.

Regarding the concept of punishment, we to often see in countries across the ocean, instances of governments punishing their own people for behaviors that harm no one. I think policy implemented by the tribe in the Northwest is an instance of an Indian tribe adopting a foreign concept of punishment by young leaders who need to do a little research, reading and soul searching. And, I definitely think, that as Oneidas, punishment being proposed against our Oneida employees who do nothing wrong, is a concept of governmental responsibility that is completely against our culture and should be rejected by the membership.

Wage petition submitted

At Saturday's GTC meeting, I signed a petition that would increase Tribal wages by 75 cents per hour for all Tribal employees whose current wages are currently $60,000 annually and below. I understand that the petition has been submitted to the Tribal Secretary's Office. The submitter, Yvonne Metivier, said the employees need a fair raise and that time has come after years of being deprived of any raises or bonuses. Last year, employee bonuses, even though the bonuses were granted in the budget, they were later taken away by the Business Committee.

Thank you

Will there be a new face on Republican control of Wisconsin government?

Senators Mary Lazich and Neal Kedzie and Assembly Representatives Steve Nass and Andre Jacque have introduced LRB-0456/1 to repeal Wisconsin Act 250. This legislation will not create a single job. It will not do a single thing to balance the state budget. It will not reduce the size of government nor will it improve the business environment that most of us think is important.

Less than a month into Republican control of Wisconsin government, before the impact of any of the initial legislative initiatives can show results, this legislation is being moved forward. The bill's authors are pushing for quick action in March and April.

So what is at issue?

Wisconsin Act 250 changed the nature of the complaint process related to any school's race-based nickname and logo. A single complaint in a district would bring a Department of Public Instruction determination of whether or not the district's nickname and/or logo is race-based. If so, then a hearing is set up to determine if the nickname and/or logo promotes discrimination, harassment and stereotyping. The difference between Wisconsin Act 250 rules and the previous complaint process is that the burden of proof is now on school districts whereas the previous process put the burden of proof on complainants.

LRB-0456/1 would not only repeal Wisconsin Act 250 but would also void any actions that have already taken place under the law passed by the previous legislature, dismiss any current actions by any complainant and dismiss any current court actions involving race-based nicknames and logos. The meaning of this proposal brings up a very serious question about the face of Republican control of Wisconsin government.

First, a cornerstone of American democracy has been respect for individual rights. If even a single person sees something wrong, respect for individual rights dictates that a single person should have the right to advance an issue. Page Two of the Legislative Reference Bureau analysis attached to the bill states, "This bill eliminates the specific right of a school district resident to object to the use of a race-based nickname, logo, mascot or team name by filing a complaint …" Seemingly in a contradiction, two paragraphs later the bill analysis says a resident may file a complaint to the school board if the resident "believes he or she has been discriminated against." Inarguably, then, the net effect of LRB-0456/1 is the reduction of individual rights related to pupil harassment and stereotyping and a switch back to putting the burden of proof onto the victims in regards to discrimination.

Secondly, we should be asking if the abandonment of reason is also part of this new control. Wisconsin Act 250 did not pass through the legislature and gain the Governor's signature because of opinion. It did so because there have been eight scientifically conducted studies that had control groups, data validation, replication of results and review of results by multiple authorities in the fields of psychology, sociology and social psychology. All these studies showed there were harms to students when institutions use race-based nicknames and logos. Reason guided the process, and lest we forget, reason is the only hope to end the seemingly endless partisan bickering and take us toward cooperation in Wisconsin government for the good of all citizens.

Thirdly, we need to ask if this emerging face of control in Wisconsin government involves respect. The elected representatives of Wisconsin's First Nations have passed resolution after resolution since the early 1990's asking for schools to stop using 'Indian' nicknames, logos and mascots. Does this new Republican control assert that the simple respect involved with granting those requests doesn't matter?

Furthermore, the question of respect must extend to the Department of Public Instruction. They are educational professionals. They are experts in handling the issues of pupil discrimination, harassment and stereotyping. The proposed legislation is a slap in the face of their expertise in favor of the whims of some legislators to do what is popular in their districts. If education is to have any value then educational leaders deserve respect. The last four leaders of the Department of Public Instruction have all advocated the elimination of the race-based nicknames and logos that are at issue. Would the current party in power also ask that we not listen to business leaders on the creation of jobs? Of course not, so why not listen to educational leaders on this issue?

The answer to this brings up a final question about this emerging face of Republican control of Wisconsin government. If we are to listen to business leaders about job creation but not listen to educational leaders, the elected leaders of Wisconsin tribes, to the scientific research or to the founders of our country who heralded the democratic principle of individual rights, then what really is driving this legislation to repeal Wisconsin Act 250?

Sponsors will quickly talk about the importance of local control and hope that gives them the wriggle room to get LRB-0456/1 passed and signed into law. They, of course forget this is not a local issue. School districts that are hanging onto their race-based nicknames and logos represent less than 2% of all Wisconsin students and yet, without Wisconsin Act 250, they are allowed (through conference and playoff competition) to impose the possibility of stereotyping, harassment and discrimination on the other 98% of Wisconsin students. No, the question to ask about the new face of Wisconsin government with this proposed legislation runs far deeper than the smokescreen of local control. It goes to the heart of the issue of racial sensitivity.

So we have quite a situation. Those in control of Wisconsin government can choose to stick to emphasizing the reasons they ran for election or they can decide to push LRB-0456/1 forward. Voters can then begin to frame some interesting questions for 2012. Does repealing Wisconsin Act 250 help create the kind of climate we want to attract new jobs to Wisconsin? And more importantly, what kind of people do we want to be? When we reduce individual rights, abandon the use of scientific evidence, don't show cultural or professional respect and then taint it all with further questions about racial sensitivity, this emerging face of Republican control seems to be straying far from what voters expected.

Sincerely,

Clif Morton

Letters & Opinions...

Why?

In regard to the "Class Action" suit with Hobart between Daniel D. Kurowski and Judy Cornelius Hawk – I resent them using my parents name in their suit. They passed away in 1966 and 1977 and would never ever think of such a thing! I had wonderful parents and friends to everyone, Ben and Amelia Jordan.

Daniel should have used his own grandparents' names; Priscilla Manders and Albert Manders and Peter and Grace Kurowski, who are buried in the Holy Apostle Cemetery. I cannot believe Daniel would dishonor my parents in such a scheme to get money by using their names.

Energy to help them realize the opportunity and to locate the facility on a site that is most desirable, seconded by Melinda Danforth. Motion carried with two opposed:
Ayes: Melinda Danforth, Tina Danforth, Ron "Tehassi" Hill Jr., Trish King, Brandon Stevens
Opposed: Ed Delgado, Patty Hoeft

For the record: Ed Delgado said I am opposing because there are too many unanswered questions. I want to know what we are putting up for collateral. We don't know and I need to know. I want to be assured that there are enough resources "garbage" to feed that generator because without enough garbage we will not be able to be successful. We have not seen any written agreements.

For the record: Patty Hoeft said I opposed the resolution because the Oneida Tribe's positive relationship with most all neighboring local governments and the Tribe's reputation as a good neighbor and environmental stewart have been put at risk by the decision of the Oneida Seven Generations Corporation to construct and operate a waste-to-energy gasification plant on Packerland Drive in the Village of Ashwaubenon. Despite the opposition to locating the project on the Packerland Drive site, there seems still to be support for the Oneida Tribe's biomass energy project and I do support Oneida Seven Generations constructing and operating a biomass energy project, just not on the Packerland site. Many still hope that Oneida due to its mission to protect the environment will find a way to make alternative energy an option in Northeast Wisconsin that will help solve energy and environmental problems, improve our economy and create new jobs. This is one reason why Oneida can not afford to fail and as one reason why I believe we need to enter into this project in collaboration and cooperation with our neighbors. This project has potential of putting the Oneida Tribe in an environmental leadership role positively impacting the Tribe's economy and positively helping the greater community in and around the Oneida Reservation.

For the record: Tina Danforth said I support the resolution because I represent Oneida not Hobart and I support alternative energy and tribal sovereignty and that's for the record.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30AM • Norbert Hill Center (BCCR)

February 24, 2011

Purpose:
Pardon and Forgiveness Law. This law will replace the current Pardon Ordinance with a new law which reforms the process for obtaining a pardon and includes a new process for forgiveness. The law will allow for the forgiveness of individuals who have committed acts which have caused them to be ineligible for tribal employment, tribally issued occupational licenses, certifications or permits, housing through the Tribe, or tribal member benefits. This law will still allow Tribal members to be able to obtain pardons for crimes but will also be able to obtain forgiveness for acts in which there was not an actual criminal conviction.

Public Hearing Process
Testimony:
Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.
Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or Tonya Boucher, Legislative Reference Office at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.
If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via GroupWise tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 1-920-869-4376*. ONHS students win awards at science fair

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. – Students from four Wisconsin high schools competed at the Lakeland College Science and Engineering Fair on Saturday, Feb. 5.

Students from Oneida Nation School, Sheboygan South High School, Roncalli High School and Bayfield High School were among the participants.

Ali Gephart of Bayfield won Best in Fair and the opportunity to compete in the 2011 Intel International Fair in Los Angeles for her project entitled "A Study of the Relationship between the Lake Superior Seiche and Current at Bayfield Wisconsin." A seiche is a wave that forms in the Great Lakes causing sudden water level fluctuations. Gephart monitored water currents in a boathouse in Bayfield Harbor to judge the effect that seiche have on water currents.

Emma Dalzell and Sophia Howk of Bayfield won second place for their project entitled "The Relationship between water pH and DOC and Mercury in Eaglets."

Justin Jagodinsky and Tom Jessessky of Roncalli won third place for their project entitled "Surgical Skills" and Guadalupe Martinez of Oneida Nation won honorable mention for her project entitled "Effects of Beverages on Daphnia."

The following students won specialty awards:

- In Vitro Biology: Guadalupe Martinez, Oneida Nation.
- U.S. Metric Association: Noelle Metoxen, Oneida Nation.

Arti Gras volunteers

Green Bay - Arts Events, Inc. is hosting the 21st annual Arti Gras festival of the fine arts to be held at Shopko Hall, Green Bay. The event will be held on Saturday, March 12th from 10:00 am until 5:00 pm; and Sunday, March 13th from 10:00 am until 5:00 pm. Volunteers are asked to work a four (4) hour shift. It is the unselfish dedication of volunteers that makes Arti Gras a great success year after year. Without the help of volunteers the event would not be possible.

Volunteers are needed for the Children's Art Area, Artist Relief and Coat Check. Participants are needed to assist children with creative hands-on activities. Volunteers are also needed to relieve exhibiting artists and maintain the coat check-in.

A portion of the proceeds from the event benefit area high school and college visual, performing & literary arts students through the newARTS scholarship program.

Arti Gras is a designated project approved by the Green Bay Public Schools for service learning. Please contact Arts Events, Inc. if you wish to volunteer at (920) 435-5220 or email info@artseventsinc.com.

Detailed letters and schedules have been mailed to all Grade 10 parent(s)/guardian(s). Please contact the Student Services Office at 920-833-2306 ext. 430 to schedule your student's Thunder Talk Conference.

List of upcoming WisDOT State Highway projects affecting the Oneida through 2012

STH 172, 9280-04-71 Hwy 172 Resurfacing and CTH GE Roundabout - STH 172 was resurfaced from just east of the STH 54 intersection to a point just west of the Georgia Pacific Landfill Entrance. A roundabout was also constructed at CTH GE. This work was completed in the summer of 2010.

STH 172, 9280-04-72 STH 54 and Casino Entrance Roundabouts – Roundabouts will be constructed at the STH 54 and STH 172 intersections. Construction is expected to start in April/May 2011 at the casino/airport entrance. Traffic will be detoured along CTH EB (Packerland) north to STH 54 back to STH 172. This roundabout is expected to be completed by the middle of July 2011. Construction on the STH 54 roundabout will begin at that time. This roundabout will be constructed in two stages. During the first stage, traffic on STH 54 will not be impacted. STH 172 traffic will be detoured up CTH GE to STH 54 back to STH 172. In this first stage, 3 of the 4 legs of the roundabout will be built (all except the west leg of STH 54). The first stage will take approximately 2 months. The second stage will be to construct the STH 54 west leg. At this time, STH 54 traffic will be detoured down CTH GE to STH 172. Traffic will then be using the roundabout and the detour continued using CTH E to CTH U (east service road) back to STH 172. This stage will be completed in approximately 3 weeks.

US 41/WIS 54 Mason Street Interchange, 1133-03-72—The US 41/WIS 54 interchange will be reconstructed in 2012. Construction is anticipated to begin February 2012. Mason St. will be closed from Hinkle St. through Taylor St. The posted detour will begin at Hwy 172 to Hwy 41 to IH 43 to Hwy 54 at the University Interchange. Construction is anticipated to take 6 to 8 months.

Hwy RK, South Frontage Road, 9202-07-72—Hwy RK, a frontage road (South Frontage Road) paralleling WIS 29 will be constructed as part of the US 41/WIS 29 interchange improvements. Hwy RK will accommodate local traffic between County Highway J and Hwy EB (Packerland Drive). WIS 29 will be converted to freeway status during the Hwy 41 project, thus necessitating the need for Hwy RK. Access from Hwy J to Hwy 29 will be eliminated. Hwy J will be reconstructed with a roundabout at the intersection with Hwy RK. Hwy J will be built under new Hwy 29 bridges over Hwy J. Hwy RK construction is planned for 2011 and into 2012.

STH 54, 9210-11-71 Duck Creek Bridge Replacement and Seminary Road Intersection – This project involves the replacement of the Duck Creek Bridge north of the existing bridge and construction of a roundabout at the STH 54 and Seminary Road intersection. Construction on the new bridge and roadway will begin in spring 2012. The project is currently planned to be completed under traffic (no detours) using temporary lanes and constructing the roundabout in stages.

STH 29, Hwy FF Interchange – The Department is currently planning to construct this interchange in 2013 and 2014. Design is just beginning. Specific details are unavailable at this time.

Interior asks Montana judge to allow bison slaughter

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) ~ The Interior Department on Monday asked a federal judge not to intervene in the impending slaughter of potentially hundreds of wild bison that were captured in recent weeks after migrating out of Yellowstone National Park.

An estimated 382 bison are being held in corrals along the Yellowstone's northern border after leaving the snowed-in park to find food at lower elevations. Park officials have said those that test positive for exposure to the disease brucellosis will be shipped to slaughter - and so could the remaining animals if the corrals get too full.

The park put those shipments temporarily on hold last week after opponents asked U.S. District Judge Charles Lovell to intervene. A coalition of environmental, American Indian and sporting groups argued that bison could be safely managed outside the park to minimize the chances of brucellosis infections in cattle.

But attorneys for the Interior Department said in a response filed with Lovell Monday that stopping the slaughter would allow bison to enter parts of Montana where they could spread brucellosis to livestock.

The attorneys also warned that if the migration of the "massive wild animals" is not put in check, they will enter agricultural and inhabited areas where they could jeopardize public safety, cause property damage, compete with livestock for grazing and destroy crops.

More than 1,000 bison could attempt to exit the park this winter, according to P.J. White, the park's wildlife chief, in an affidavit filed with the court. White estimated the bison population now stands at about 3,700 animals, down about 200 animals since late summer after 125 were killed by hunters outside the park and others died due to natural causes.

This year's slaughter plans are not unique: More than 1,400 bison were slaughtered and dozens more killed by hunters during the park's last major migration, in 2008.

In his affidavit, White acknowledged that "frequent, large-scale" slaughters could have "unintended consequences." But he added that maintaining an average population above 3,000 of the animals was sufficient for a robust population.

Brucellosis can infect cattle, bison elk and some other animals, causing pregnant females to prematurely abort their young. It was introduced to the Yellowstone region through the cattle of earlier European settlers, but has since been eradicated in livestock nationwide. No bison-to-cattle transmissions have been recorded.

Some landowners near the park have joined slaughter opponents to say bison should be allowed to roam more freely. The livestock industry insists that bison be kept largely inside the park as long as they carry brucellosis.

School-to-work program aims to increase graduation

By Randy Dockendorf
Yankton Press & Dakotan

WAGNER, S.D. (AP) ~ He's only a high school sophomore, but Sage Zephier wants to accomplish something never done in his family. He not only wants to attend college, but he wants to attend medical school.

That's a lofty personal goal, and it's particularly good news for the Wagner school district as it works to increase its number of Native American graduates.

"I am looking forward to life after high school, looking ahead to college and what I want to be and what I am interested in," Zephier said. "I am looking at maybe going to the University of Washington medical school in Seattle."

Zephier credits his high career plans to his participation in Jobs for America's Graduates (JAG), a school-to-work transition program. The Wagner chapter, a pilot program for South Dakota, has motivated him and focused his interests.

JAG Specialist Renee VanDerWerff holds no doubts that Zephier will achieve his goals.

"Sage has quite a dream, to be a pediatrician, and he has the drive and ability to pursue it," she said. "He has 14 brothers and sisters and would be the first from his family to go to college. He is one of those all-around excellent guys who is good at everything - the all-American type."

JAG has created an impact on many students in only its second year at Wagner, VanDerWerff said.

VanDerWerff advises a dozen sophomores, while JAG Specialist Tana Langdeaux works with a dozen freshmen. They want to build the co-curricular program in succeeding years with 10-14 students per high school class. Wagner is also developing a middle school program.

The JAG program reaches students - both white and Native American - who might otherwise fall through the cracks, said Wagner High School principal Neil Goter. The program carries academic, community service and other requirements for membership.

The JAG students see VanDerWerff or Langdeaux for 1 1/2 hour sessions on alternating days. The students also receive assistance from teachers between JAG sessions.

"All students need a connection to school, and JAG gives that connection to Wagner School for most of these students," Goter added.

Since Wagner established the pilot program, Andes Central started its high school JAG program last year and Bon Homme has started a middle school program.

The Wagner students also sponsored a booth at the Indian Education Summit in Chamberlain, explaining JAG and its meaning for the school.

"The majority of these students are not involved in other groups in our school, and JAG gave them a sense of ownership into our school," he said. "Over the past two years, the students have been doing a number of different activities. Through the students' efforts, four (Wagner) students were chosen to attend the national conference in Washington, DC."

All four Wagner boys who went to this year's national meeting said JAG has changed their lives.

"JAG has turned things around. My grades got better, and I am more motivated with what I want to do after school," Provost said. "I want to go to Lake Area Tech in Watertown for something like architectural drafting or engineering."

Leines plans to attend South Dakota State University in Brookings for studies in architecture or construction. "JAG has me focused, looking to go on to college and getting better grades for some kind of scholarship," he said.

O'Connor hasn't made definite plans for after graduation, but JAG has provided him with the tools for success.

Goter thinks Smit has downplayed her role in the Wagner program's success.

"Since she was instrumental in starting JAG in South Dakota, the JAG organization found it fitting to honor her with the award in Washington, D.C.," Goter said.

The Wagner students drew attention wherever they went at the conference, VanDerWerff said. "I think they were probably (some) of the only Native American students that were in the JAG program," she said.

While in Washington, the students participated in breakout sessions, competed in the areas of public speaking and job interviewing, and went sightseeing. Upon returning to Wagner, they have been asked by three teachers to give classroom presentations this semester on the Washington trip.

Wagner school counselor Dana Sanderson served on the JAG Advisory Board, looking at whether to start the local program, she said. Sanderson has noted the growing racial unity as an outcome of the program, she said.

"At the (JAG) induction ceremony, I thought it was interesting that Mr. Sanderson said a lot of students in JAG are Native American. It's not a requirement, but we have a large Native American population," she said.

"He said it was nice, when we had the induction ceremony, there were so many very diverse groups. He felt that was a really good example of people coming together and being unified."

Appreciation expressed by Cancer free Survivor

By Laverne Bichanich (Elm)
Special to the Kalihwisaks

I am a cancer free survivor and grateful for the help and advice given to me by my mentor, Deb Ushakow, Community Services Specialist from the SEOTS office. She also invited my sister and me to attend a presentation on breast health and the next day I went in for my mammogram. Thank you Deb for getting me started, I appreciate that.

I would like to thank you, my husband Steve, my lovely daughter Lori Lutz, and my two wonderful sisters Phyllis Popovich and Bernice Elm. They were all there for me and I appreciate that. Thank you gang for your love, support, and understanding.

I would like to tell women of all ages to get their yearly mammograms and test themselves for lumps. There is definitely help out there for anyone and everyone.

Finally, I would like to encourage women facing cancer to try prayer. I am very thankful to GOD for my recovery.

All women age 40 and older should have a mammogram every year. If you are at high risk because your mother, sister, or daughter had breast cancer, talk to your doctor to find out when you should start getting mammograms. To find out if you qualify for a low or no cost mammogram, contact the SEOTS office: 414-329-4101.

Fun in the Snow

By Yvonne Kaquatosh
Kalihwisaks

A Winter Wonderland Fest was held at the Cultural Heritage grounds on Saturday, February 5. Participation was slim due to other events that took place on the same day, however, for those in attendance, the weather was very accommodating for the outside activities which included snow shoeing, cross country skiing, playing the snow snake game, and ice fishing. Heart healthy education information was also offered in the Salt Pork Avenue cabins as well as piping hot chocolate, coffee, tea and Oneida corn soup.

Thunderhawks battle Milwaukee X-Young Coggs Prep Eagles

Kali photos/Nate Wisneski

The Oneida Nation Thunderhawks boys and girls took to the court against Milwaukee X-Young Coggs Prep Eagles Tuesday, February 8 at the Turtle School in Oneida.

The girls handled the much larger school by a score of 59-39. The lady Thunderhawks were led by Eva Powless' 25 points and 10 rebounds. The win pushes their record to 13-4.

The boys fell behind early and fell to the Eagles 38-80. Eddie Santiago led Oneida with 19 points while their record slips to 8-11.

New Shiocton Public Charter School to Open in Fall of 2011

Dates announced for school enrollment for Shiocton and surrounding area students entering grades 6-11

Shiocton, WI – The Shiocton School District has approved the Shiocton International Leadership Academy (SILA) to open in the fall of 2011.

SILA is a free public charter school for students entering grades 6 through 11, and will open for the 2011-2012 school year as part of the Shiocton School District. The school will be located in the current Shiocton School building. The new school will open with approximately 60 students total in its first year, and will add grade 12 the second year.

All current Shiocton District students currently enrolled in grades 5 through 10 in the 2010-2011 school year will be offered the opportunity to opt-in to the new public charter school from February 7th – 25th.

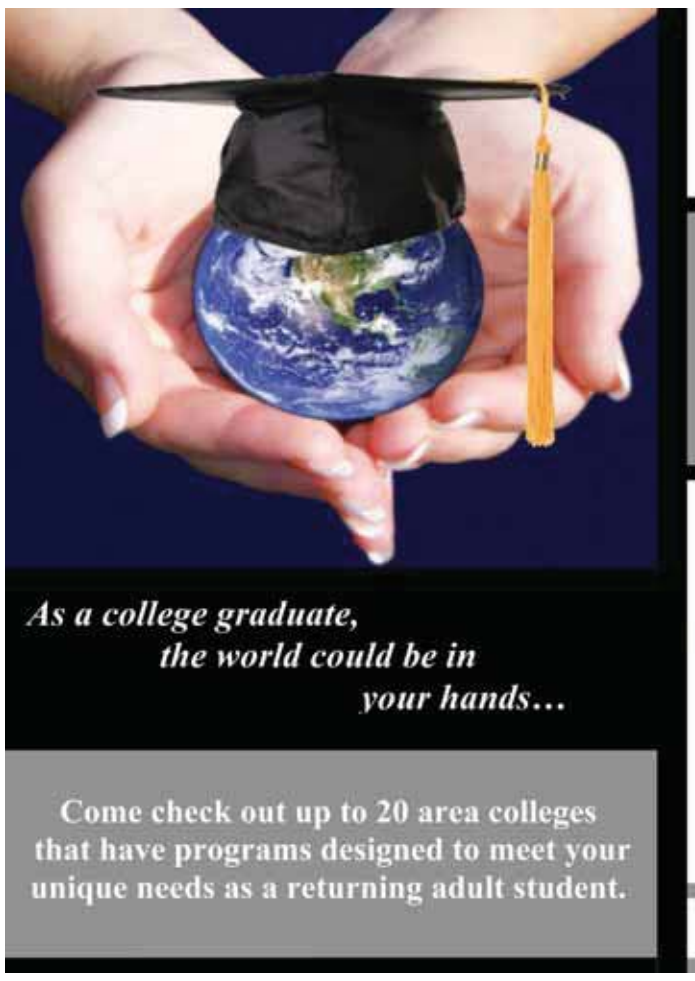
Deadline to apply is 4 pm, February 21

(Green Bay) Northeast Wisconsin Technical College is currently accepting applications for three open positions on the NWTC District Board of Trustees. Open positions include the following: two Additional Representatives and one Elected Official Representative.

Each of the three appointments will be for three-year terms beginning on July 1, 2011. In accordance with the Appointment Committee's Plan of Representation, of the three members appointed, one member will represent Marinette County, one member will represent Shawano County, and one member will represent Florence County.

Due to the distribution of minority population within the District, the NWTC Board of Trustees must include one minority representative. In the appointment process, equal consideration is given to the general population distribution within the District as well as to the distribution of women and minorities on the Board.

Applicants must submit at least two letters of reference supporting their nomination and must attend a public hearing of the District Board Appointment Committee on March 17, 2011, at 5:00 p.m., in the NWTC District Board Room of the NWTC Green Bay Campus. At the public hearing, applicants will be interviewed by the Appointment Committee.



How to Apply

Application materials are available by calling Mary Jo Tilot, NWTC executive assistant to the president, at: (920) 498-5409, maryjo.tilot@nwtc.edu; or by visiting the NWTC District Office, 2740 West Mason Street, Green Bay. Applications for the Board vacancies will be accepted until 4:00 p.m., February 21, 2011.

About the Open Positions:

- An Additional Representative is defined as a person who resides within the boundaries of the technical college district for which they are applying for a Trustee position.
- An Elected Official Representative is defined as a person who holds a non-partisan elected public office other than party committee chair, such as School Board, Common Council, County Board, Village Board, Town Board, Town Clerk, Sheriff, City Council or State Legislature.

PUBLIC NOTICE 01-21-2011

Notice of Availablity

Purpose:
Common terns, along with other colonial nesting birds, have been negatively impacted by the release of PCBs into the Fox River from the 1950's through 1970's. Common terns have been found at this site, indicating the potential for successful colonization is high.

Funding was provided by the Fox River Natural Resources Damage Assessment (NRDA) for the purpose of providing habitat for colonial water-birds and raptors which were affected by the release of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs).

An Environmental Assessment (EA) was prepared by the Oneida Tribe (Tribe) in April 2000 for the restoration of a 40 acre wetland. Funding was provided by the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) was consulted by the Tribe in 2002 for a second phase of project which included funding by the BIA. In January 2003, the BIA concurred with the finding by NRCS in 2000, and based on information provided in the original EA, issued a FONSI at that time.

This addendum for the proposed construction of common tern nesting habitat is in compliance with the Oneida Environmental Policy Act (2-13-93B) and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). The EA and addendum contain project information, affected environment, project alternatives, consequences, and consultation.

Comments were requested from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service regarding possible impacts to threatened and endangered species, Oneida Cultural Heritage Department for possible impacts to culturally significant areas, and the Environmental Protection Agency for possible permitting needs regarding in-stream development.

Alternatives: Preferred Alternative: The Tribe is proposing to initially construct a tenth acre gravel island in a 40 acre restored shallow marsh known as Where the Water-birds Nest (Nya?tekatsi?tʌ́·slake? thutstelístha? tsi? kahnekalúnyuhse?) on the Oneida Reservation. It is located in Township 23 North, Range 19 East, Section 15, in Brown County, WI. In the early 1900's the large wetland was ditched and farmed. In the late 1990's the Oneida Tribe started restoration to an open water marsh in multiple phases.

The area of the proposed island is in the southeast portion of the open water marsh, in waters approximately 3.5 feet deep. The construction of the tern island will include trucking rock and sand during winter months onto the ice which will drop into the shallow marsh after the ice melts in spring. The plan is to construct the islands in early 2011, while ice conditions allow for safe passage by trucks. If the first island is successful, one to three additional similar small islands may be constructed in the shallow marsh in the future.

No Action Alternative: To not construct the island(s) or provide habitat for common terns. This will not assist in the goal of the NRDA to restore habitat for colonial nesting birds in the areas impacted by PCBs or the Tribe's goal of increasing biodiversity at these restored areas.

Comments and Availability: Interested parties may obtain copies of these documents from the address below. Comments regarding the proposed action may be submitted within 14 days of the date of this NOA. Contact Lisa Miotke at (920) 869-4582 or write Oneida Environmental, Health & Safety Division, PO Box 365, Oneida, WI 54155 for additional information.

February Attendance Incentive Kicks Off

By Joelle Thomas and Thunderhawk Times Staff

The ONHS Student Council, in partnership with the Milwaukee Bucks' Andrew Bogut, kicked off an intendance incentive for all students for the month of February.

Bogut, selected first overall by the Bucks in the 2005 NBA draft, kicked off an attendance incentive for all interested schools on February 1st. Students with perfect attendance qualify for one free ticket to a Milwaukee Bucks game and reduced-cost tickets for parents and other family members. They also receive a free Andrew Bogut T-shirt.

In order to support Bogut's program, the ONHS student council voted to pay for the second ticket for any student who qualified. The council also is putting up the money to pay for a healthy pizza party for the class that has the best average attendance during the month.

The incentive has triggered some competition at ONHS.

ONHS freshman, Joelle Thomas said she and her 9th grade classmates would "win of course!"

Senior Advisor, Kal^na Brooks, worked up a little rhyme to inspire her class: "Seniors are the best, you better watch out you little pests."

Senior Mary Powless said, "The seniors are the best. Everybody knows it. We got this [winning the class incentive]. It's done already."

Junior Dazha Pidgeon said, "Talk is cheap. When the end of the month rolls around, the juniors won't be talking because they will be eating pizza and the other classes will be talking about how jealous they are."

Diversity Club Elects Officers, Sets Goals

By Thunderhawk Times Staff

At their January meeting, the Oneida Nation High School Diversity Club elected officers. They are Jaleesa Caldwell, President; Jordan Bain, Vice President; Anthony Cornelius, Treasurer; and Diego Metoxen, Secretary.

When asked about her reaction to be being elected president, Jaleesa said, "I was shocked and excited at the same time."

Jaleesa said it is now time for the officers to begin taking over some of the responsibilities from the staff members who organized the group, ONHS teachers Laura Studee and Amy Amschler.

"Right now we're planning on doing something for the new kids, like some kind of welcoming ceremony or event," she said.

"We are also making plans for next year," said Jaleesa.

One question that some people have asked is what role a Diversity Club would play at a small school that is almost entirely Native American.

"That's what I said at first," Jaleesa said. "When I was in DC at Seymour, there were lots of different kids in it. When I came here, I thought, it would be more about breaking down the different cliques."

When asked if the group was having that affect, she said, "Some people are making an effort to do this."

Asked if the group is having an impact at ONHS, she said, "It's too early to tell if the Diversity Club has made a big impact in the overall school climate, but that's our goal."

Jaleesa said that the officers and club members definitely intend to keep the group going next school year.

Students who are interested in joining can come to the next meeting which is set for Thursday, January 10.

Meet Brandon White

By Jade Doxtater
Thunderhawk Times

Brandon White

This is Brandon. He's in twelfth grade—a senior in high school.

He isn't going to lie; this is his fifth year at Oneida Nation High School.

Brandon has been to two other schools besides Oneida. Those schools were Keshena Primary and Menominee Tribal. All through grades K-8th grade, Brandon has lived in Menominee.

He made the choice to come to Oneida for his freshman year. Now he lives in Ashwaubenon, with his girlfriend Jade Doxtater; his mom, Kelly Summers; and his younger sister, Shalynn Webster.

This year, Brandon's favorite class was Journalism wink, and his least favorite were his two other English classes. He says "it's not good to have two English classes back to back during first and second hour of the day."

Outside of school, Brandon likes to read Game Informer (a gaming magazine), and, on occasion, he writes short stories. His hobbies are playing Xbox Live and playing paintball when he's got the money for it.

The type of music he likes to listen to ranges from Rap to Rock. His favorite band is Avenged Sevenfold.

While attending Oneida Brandon's grades were "solid C's to B's." So in his words, he "did fairly well."

Some of Brandon's favorites include: The color red, Philly cheese steak sandwiches, wearing Pajamas, shopping at Game Stop, favorite sport being Paintball, The Miami Heat, Man's best friend the dog, Great White Sharks, and his lucky number is 15.

His hero and role model in life is LeBron James "because he makes his own decisions."

His motto that he lives his life by is a derogatory one toward the Green Bay Packers.

Brandon wants everybody to know about him that, "you shouldn't mistake his kindness for weakness."

After high school, Brandon plans on going to college to become a police officer.

Last, but not least, when it comes down to Packers or Bears, he says he is "still a loyal Bears fan, no matter what."

For Me, It's Photography

By Jade Doxtater
Thunderhawk Times editor

To me, I find photography to be a hobby. I love taking pictures of anything and everything.

It's only a bad photo if you don't like it, I say.

I first came across photography when I was in eighth grade. After high school I plan on going to college for graphic arts, and maybe, in the future, getting a job as a professional photographer and making lots of sweet "moolah"!

I personally suggest that other people should try photography just to see if they like it. With technology today, you can basically do anything. Editing your photos is one of the best parts of photography. There are more than a million things you can do once you've taken a photo. All it takes to make it happen is you and creativeness.

Packers

By Eddie Powless
Thunderhawk Times editor

The Packers are in the Super Bowl.
I know we're going to win.
Well, that's our goal.
We're throwing Pittsburgh in the garbage bin.

Yes. Yes. Yes. We're bringing the pain.
We already know Pittsburgh's going to lose.
We're going to make Packers fans go insane.
Might as well quite now and cry, "Boo Hoo!"

Ski Trip Set for Feb. 28

By Joelle Thomas and Thunderhawk Times Staff

A tradition at ONHS is the annual downhill ski trip. This year, that happens on Monday, February 28.

Students qualify for the trip based on their attendance, academics, and behavior from the first semester. This year, the top twenty students from first semester will be going.

Trips in years past have usually been to Ski Brule, but last year the group went to Pine Mountain. That is where they are headed again this year.

"We just loved the instructor at Pine Mountain," said teacher Lynn Adrian. "He was a retired teacher and he was really good at teaching our kids."

Adrian will be chaperoning the trip along with Denis Gullickson.

"We had a lot of fun last year, like always," said Gullickson. "Things usually start off slow as the kids learn how to ski or get reacquainted with it after a year. But, once they get the feel for skiing, they are usually having a blast by the afternoon."

If students want to take a break or don't get into skiing, they can sit in a nice, warm, comfy lodge where there will be hot chocolate and other snacks.

Pine Mountain is also about an hour closer to Green Bay than Brule, cutting the total travel time by about two hours.

My Scoop

ONHS and Freedom Writers a Lot Alike

By Allie Spruce
Thunderhawk Times

I think that Native Americans can relate to the Freedom Writers because—just like the kids in the movie—Native Americans are easily judged by others. We, as a community, can get grouped as the people that make bad choices often. Like the students in the movie, a lot of people don't know much about us. Our Native American history is frequently told wrong or misunderstood by others.

Native Americans are a small percentage of the population in big cities or larger communities. So other races sometimes don't have the opportunities to ask questions about our cultures and reasoning behind them. To many people Native Americans are the alcoholics and druggies but that just shows how much they don't know. We have strong leaders and role models in our communities who rarely get the chance to show how good they are.

Like the kids in the movie, we went through a lot of change. The students received help from Mrs. G and she helped them realize that there is a whole world out there, and they can achieve a lot if they only try. Some of the teachers here at the high school can relate to that. Some of the students don't think they have what it takes to succeed; however, the teachers do their best to motivate the students.

Moreover, the movie Freedom Writers relates to Native Americans more than people realize. It shows determination to succeed and overcome stereotypes, just like the teachers here at ONHS provide the students with the environment to do so. I am happy that all my teachers are like Mrs. G.

Last of the Dogmen

By Johnny Big Medicine
Thunderhawk Times

I grew up only knowing my family that lived around me and not my family from Oklahoma. Little did I know I was related to an actor.

After I first saw the movie Last of the Dogmen, my grandmother Roberta R. Whistling Elk (Big Medicine) asked me, "Did you know that the man who plays the Cheyenne Chief is your great grandfather?" I replied, "No."

Shortly after that my great grandfather, Eugene Black Bear, and his family decided to come to visit us in Montana on the Northern Cheyenne Reservation. They arrived from the Southern Cheyenne Reservation located in Oklahoma. Although I am originally Southern Cheyenne, I grew up on the Northern Cheyenne Reservation.

When I first saw him, we shook hands as my father introduced us for the first time. As a joke my father told me to ask my great grandfather for an autograph and my great grandfather replied, "That will be $10!" Then, later, said he was joking.

[Advisor's Note: Sadly, this will be the last of Johnny's articles about his life and upbringing amongst the Northern Cheyenne in Montana as he graduated at semester.]

Meet my car, Buddy

By Jason Skenadore
Thunderhawk Times

I'm not taking the bus anymore. I'm driving.

I'm driving "Old Buddy." Old Buddy is a 1994 Buick LeSabre. Old Buddy is Royal Blue. He used to be a four-door, but one door doesn't want to open, so I guess you'd call Old Buddy a three-door. That's what happens when your buddy gets old.

It was my grandpa's car. And, since he passed away last June, Old Buddy means a lot to me.

So far, I put in a new water pump and fixed a tire. My dad has been helping me get Old Buddy running.

One thing I will tell you about owning a car is that they take a lot of gas to keep running and gas is over three bucks a gallon.

Myths vs. Facts: Renewable Energy Facilty

Oneida Seven Generations Corporation
P O Box 257, Oneida, WI 54155
Phone: 920-347-0500 Fax: 920-347-0504
www.osgc.net

There continues to be a considerable amount of misinformation circulating about the Oneida Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) Renewable Energy Facility. It's intended to scare and mislead people. We live here too and would not undertake a project that would be harmful to people or the environment. Our business philosophy maintains an eye toward the future, focused on sustainable growth for both our tribal economy and that of the surrounding area.

It's important to have a thorough understanding of what the project is and isn't. We hope you will find the following information helpful as you learn more about the facility. We have grouped the myths and responses to make it easier to find answers to your questions.

Public Health and Safety

Myth:
Government agencies say this technology is a health and environmental hazard; this facility poses risks to our health and the environment.

Fact: This statement is false and unsupported.
According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), waste-to-energy (WTE) is a "clean, reliable, renewable source of energy." In addition, the EPA says the facilities produce electricity with "less environmental impact than almost any other source of electricity."

America's WTE facilities today meet some of the most stringent environmental standards in the world and employ the most advanced emissions control equipment available.
Source: http://wte.org/faq

Myth:
The emissions will affect 10 to 40 miles surrounding the facility in the air, water, soil and food chain; creating a fallout zone.

Fact: This statement is false and unsupported.
Modern waste-to-energy facilities must meet or exceed EPA's Maximum Achievable Control Technology (MACT) standards. They are not allowed to operate unless they meet or exceed these standards. There is no "fallout zone."
Sources:
1. http://wte.org/faq
2. http://www.energyrecoverycouncil.org/userfiles/file/2007_EPAemissions_memo.pdf

Myth:
The facility will have adverse health impacts.

Fact: This statement is false and unsupported.
There is no adverse health impact data found at any Pyrolysis operating facilities throughout the US or the rest of the world. This is clearly being used as a scare tactic.

There will be no widespread air, soil or water contamination.
All EPA regulations will be strictly followed. Any wastewater (the same as residents' sink and bath water) will be treated and properly disposed. This is clearly being used as a scare tactic.

Myth:
The ash from waste-to-energy plants is not safe.

Fact: This is false.
Waste-to-energy carbon ash is safe and completely inert. Ash residue from waste-to-energy facilities is tested in accordance with strict state and federal leaching tests and has been consistently shown to be safe for land disposal and / or reuse. All ash from this facility will be handled and shipped in an enclosed environment.
Source: http://wte.org/faq#ash

Myth:
Particulate fly ash will be produced which contains dioxins, toxins and other materials.

Fact: This statement is false and meant as a scare tactic.
A byproduct called carbon ash (not toxic ash) will be produced. The byproduct is completely inert and can be used in numerous industries.

Myth:
The facility will generate toxic ash (one ton of ash for every four tons of waste).

Fact: This statement is false and meant as a scare tactic.
The fact is, for every 10 tons of waste, one ton of a byproduct called carbon char (not toxic ash) will be produced. The byproduct is completely inert and can be used in numerous industries.

Myth:
Companies claim their technology is zero emissions or pollution free. However, all of the technologies emit dioxins and other harmful pollutants into the air, soil and water.

Fact: This is a false and misleading statement.
Recent research and study provides valuable information about the impact. WTE facilities of this type are also known as Conversion Technologies in the State of California. Los Angeles County analyzed dioxin/furan data from four conversion processes. Their research showed that these conversion technologies have no issues complying with U.S. EPA regulations. "In fact, these conversion technologies have been shown in actual operation to produce dioxins and furans in amounts dramatically lower than the already low U.S. EPA limits, far less than many commonplace and natural activities such as a wood burning fireplace, and well within safe guidelines."

Emissions from Thermochemical Conversion Technologies, including Pyrolysis and Gasification in comparison to EPA, European Commission and Japanese Standards are reported at: http://www.bioenergyproducers.org/documents/ucr_emissions_report.pdf (pages 21-32)

Myth:
Waste-to-energy facilities are a significant source of both air emissions and toxic wastes containing dioxin, mercury, lead and other harmful substances

Fact: This statement is false and meant as a scare tactic.
Modern waste-to-energy facilities meet or exceed EPA's Maximum Achievable Control Technology (MACT) standards. America's waste-to-energy facilities spent $1 billion to retrofit pollution control equipment to achieve the strictest federal standards. "The performance of the MACT retrofits has been outstanding," according to the U.S. EPA. "Upgrading of the emissions control system of large combustors to exceed the requirements of the Clean Air Act Section 129 standards is an impressive accomplishment." New facilities (such as this one) must meet or exceed MACT.
Source: http://wte.org/faq

Myth
Leaching of toxic metals cadmium, lead, and mercury occurs more rapidly at low pH, and contaminates groundwater.

Fact: This is false and misleading.
The proposed Pyrolysis System is a completely closed loop system so all gases and wastewater are contained. Typical MSW (municipal solid waste) contains 17% moisture. Any moisture that enters the gasifier will come off as a vapor mixed with the gases; the vapor then condenses during the gas cleanup. Water will be treated and filtered, with a portion of the water used in the gas cleanup process and the remained filtered to a level that it can be disposed in a public sewer, just like dish, shower and sink water.

Myth:
Rats and carrion birds are attracted to the trash burned in this incineration and gasification facility.

Fact: This is false.
This facility is not an incinerator. In contrast to landfills, the OSGC facility will be an entirely closed loop facility; no garbage will be lying around in storage yards or on the ground. All operations take place inside a closed building; therefore, no rats or birds will be attracted to the location.

Myth:
The process produces toxic air emissions.
Fact: This is false.
Los Angeles County analyzed dioxin/furan data from the four conversion processes currently under consideration in our process. Our research and review of emissions test results reveals that these conversion technologies have no issues complying with U.S. EPA regulations.

In fact, these conversion technologies have been shown in actual operation to produce dioxins and furans in amounts dramatically lower than the already low U.S. EPA limits, far less than many commonplace and natural activities such as a wood burning fireplace, and well within safe guidelines.

Cadmium	0.08	0.01
Mercury	3.69	0.09

(All pollutants measured in pounds/year)

Myth:
An OSGC expert claimed at the Ashwaubenon open house that the generators in this incineration gasification facility will sound like three jet engines taking off 24 hours a day. That does not support the claim that there will be no noise.

Fact: This is false.
This facility is not an incinerator. While the quote is intriguing, it cannot be verified who said it, in what context or, as we believe, it was misunderstood.
The following data shows that noise outside the facility will not be significant.

Distance from Facility	Noise Level	Comparison
23 feet	85 dB	Average Traffic (from inside a car)
46 feet	21.25 dB	Whisper
Noise < 15 dB Human Hearing Threshold
69feet	9.35 dB	Calm breathing
92 feet	5.75 dB	NA
115 feet	3.4 dB	NA
230 feet	.85 dB	NA

In addition, it is unrealistic to expect there will be absolutely no noise generated inside a facility of any type (including our own homes). The external noise generated will be minimal.

Technology

Myth:
Many companies claim their technology is not an incineration process; but the EPA and the European Union (EU) defines all of these processes as incineration. Cited is the U.S. Environmental, Hazardous Waste Management System: General subpart B-definitions, 260.10.

Fact: This statement is false, unsupported and misleading.
Nowhere in the document sited does it define gasification as incineration. In fact, the definition of gasification is:

"Gasification. For the purpose of complying with 40 CFR 261.4(a)(12)(i), gasification is a process, conducted in an enclosed device or system, designed and operated to process petroleum feedstock, including oil-bearing hazardous secondary materials through a series of highly controlled steps utilizing thermal decomposition, limited oxidation, and gas cleaning to yield a synthesis gas composed primarily of hydrogen and carbon monoxide gas."

The technology referred to as incineration in the document is "plasma arc," which is a completely different technology than gasification.

Costs & Financial Viability

Myth:
The U.S. Energy Information Administration comparison of Waste-to-Energy Plants to coal and nuclear plants shows that WTE incinerators bear capital costs ($8,232 per kw/hr) that are double the cost of pulverized coal plants and 60% higher than nuclear energy.

Fact: Part of this statement is false and the other part is misleading.
This WTE project is not incineration based. Secondly, cost is only a part of the picture. While the costs associated with building and maintaining waste-to-energy plants might be higher than the costs of coal and nuclear plants, the U.S. EPA states that Waste-to-Energy plants avoid "nearly 1 ton of Carbon Dioxide equivalent emissions," because of the following:

Avoided methane emissions from landfills: When a ton of solid municipal waste is delivered to a waste-to-energy facility, the methane that would have been generated if it were sent to a landfill is avoided.

Avoided CO2 emissions from fossil fuels combustion (e.g. coal): When a megawatt of electricity is generated by a waste-to-energy facility, an increase in carbon dioxide emissions that would have been generated by a fossil-fuel fired power plant is avoided.

Finally, facility developers must decide for themselves and their businesses if the financial cost is worth the investment. OSGC believes it is worthwhile from both a financial and environmental standpoint.

Even more importantly, OSGC would not build, nor would it be allowed to operate, a facility that did not meet or exceed current health and safety standards.
Source: http://www.energyrecoverycouncil.org/userfiles/file/ERC_2010_Directory.pdf

Myth:
Incineration is a poor economic investment.

Fact: This statement is false.
Again, this is not an incinerator. The money being invested by OSGC is for pyrolysis and gasification equipment, including gensets and gasifiers, not incinerators. This investment is being made by a private corporation (OSGC) which has decided that it is a good investment from a financial, environmental and community perspective.

Jobs

Myth:
Very few jobs will be created for a very large capital investment

Fact: This statement is false.
The facility will create numerous engineering and construction jobs during construction in addition to creating up to 30 local positions when the facility becomes operational. This is not a small number. And, once again this is a corporate business decision.

Myth:
WTE facilities cost community recycling jobs.

Fact: This statement is false.
Communities' nationwide with waste-to-energy facilities have an aggregate recycling rate at least 5 percentage points above the national average. According to BioCycle / Columbia University data, the national recycling rate is 28.5% while the average recycling rate for WTE communities in the U.S. is 33.3%

Waste-to-energy is part of an integrated approach to solid waste management that includes recycling as a core component.
Source: http://www.energyrecoverycouncil.org/userfiles/file/2009%20Berenyi%20recycling%20update.pdf

Myth: :
No jobs will be created for county residents; the 22 jobs will be for tribal members only.

Fact: This statement is false.
As of November 2010, the Oneida Nation employs 3,015 people; 50.5% Oneida and 49.5% others. OSGC will provide numerous engineering and construction jobs during the construction timeframe and will offer 22 full-time positions for experienced and qualified individuals when the facility opens. These jobs are not restricted to tribal members. In addition, it's important to remember that Oneida Tribal members live in Brown County, whether they live on or off the reservation.

To be continued February 24, 2011

Are you comfortable with no local control over a "first of its kind" Biomass Gasification plant?

- ✔ Do you want a clean environment?
- ✔ Do you want your property values to drop?
- ✔ Do you want your taxes to increase?
- ✔ Do you want increased heavy truck traffic on Ashwaubenon streets?
- ✔ Do you want decreased business development in Ashwaubenon?

Dear Residents of… Ashwaubenon, DePere, Green Bay, Hobart, Howard, Lawrence, Oneida, Oneida Nation Trust Lands and Suamico

This is to inform you about a controversial Waste to Energy facility (Biomass Pyrolysis Gasification) being constructed by Oneida Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) on Packerland Drive just south of Waube Lane (across from Schneider National on the west side of Packerland Dr.). This facility uses pyrolysis gasification to incinerate trash which is converted into power that is intended to be sold to Wisconsin Public Service. Just as lead couldn't be converted into gold, incineration cannot transform the composition of garbage into benign matter.

ENVIRONMENTAL EFFECTS:
Local residents and businesses have lived and worked in harmony with our Oneida neighbors to grow the shared local economy while respecting and securing the environment. This incinerator scheme brings the following environmental impacts for everyone:

1. Fly-ash contamination of air, soil and water from toxic dioxins, mercury, lead, heavy metals, carbon dioxide and other pollutants will be introduced into the surrounding environment
2. Up to 1330 pounds of toxic fly ash discharged every day creating an extensive fall out hot zone well beyond Lambeau Field
3. Four tons of incinerated trash leaves ONE TON of remaining TOXINS

HEALTH EFFECTS:
This incinerator scheme brings the following health impacts for everyone:

1. Harmful substances in garbage "fly-ash" can be lethal, causing cancer, heart attacks, strokes, birth defects, asthma and pulmonary disease
2. Fly ash toxins enter the food supply and concentrate up through the food chain
3. Incinerator workers and people living within 20 miles of incinerators are at particularly high risk

ECONOMIC EFFECTS:
Contamination from this incinerator will force relocation of new and existing businesses and residents and reduce the tax base. More of your tax dollars will be needed to replace these lost tax dollars. Incineration is a very expensive means of destroying valuable resources, burning much-needed recycling jobs, and producing minimal electricity. This incinerator scheme brings the following economic impacts for everyone:

1. Plummeting property values = higher taxes for everyone else
2. Capital intensive and high risk operations, high clean up costs, low profit margins
3. Wasteful misallocation of unspent state and federal stimulus money

This incinerator does not need to follow any local or state building, zoning, or health codes. OSGC is under no obligation to assist neighboring governments with increased road services, utilities or governmental services (police and fire protection) must be provided to this facility. Everyone's tax dollars will be used to cover these additional costs. All jurisdiction and control will be with OSGC and the Oneida Tribal government.

Cleaner and more cost effective, truly 'green' alternatives exist. The Oneida Nation would do better for themselves and the region if they invested their funds differently. For example, creating a recycling and composting infrastructure may permanently employ hundreds more than the projected 30 for the incinerator, as well as generating materials and products worth $10-$20 million annually. The capital investment for this scenario could be as little as $10 million to employ between 1/6 and 1/3 of the entire Oneida Nation. In the spirit of protecting the Earth, this alternative to incineration will win the Oneida Nation acclaim both internally and externally from neighboring communities because more than 90% of landfill waste can be reused, recycled and composted.

It's not too late – Together we can stop or move this Pyrolysis Gasification Incinerator!

USDA and HHS Announce New Dietary Guidelines to Help Americans Make Healthier Food Choices and Confront Obesity Epidemic

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31, 2011 — Agriculture Secretary TomVilsack and Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Kathleen Sebelius today announced the release of the 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans, the federal government's evidence-based nutritional guidance to promote health, reduce the risk of chronic diseases, and reduce the prevalence of overweight and obesity through improved nutrition and physical activity.

Because more than one-third of children and more than two-thirds of adults in the United States are overweight or obese, the 7th edition of Dietary Guidelines for Americans places stronger emphasis on reducing calorie consumption and increasing physical activity.

"The 2010 Dietary Guidelines are being released at a time when the majority of adults and one in three children is overweight or obese and this is a crisis that we can no longer ignore," said Secretary Vilsack. "These new and improved dietary recommendations give individuals the information to make thoughtful choices of healthier foods in the right portions and to complement those choices with physical activity. The bottom line is that most Americans need to trim our waistlines to reduce the risk of developing diet-related chronic disease. Improving our eating habits is not only good for every individual and family, but also for our country."

The new 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans focus on balancing calories with physical activity, and encourage Americans to consume more healthy foods like vegetables, fruits, whole grains, fat-free and low-fat dairy products, and seafood, and to consume lesssodium, saturated and trans fats, added sugars, and refined grains.

"Helping Americans incorporate these guidelines into their everyday lives is important to improving the overall health of the American people," said HHS Secretary Sebelius. "The new Dietary Guidelines provide concrete action steps to help people live healthier, more physically active and longer lives."

The 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans include 23 Key Recommendations for the general population and six additional Key Recommendations for specific population groups, such as women who are pregnant. Key Recommendations are the most important messages within the Guidelines in terms of their implications for improving public health. The recommendations are intended as an integrated set of advice to achieve an overall healthy eating pattern. To get the full benefit, all Americans should carry out the Dietary Guidelines recommendations in their entirety.

More consumer-friendly advice and tools, including a next generation Food Pyramid, will be released by USDA and HHS in the coming months. Below is a preview of some of the tips that will be provided to help consumers translate the Dietary Guidelines into their everyday lives:

- Enjoy your food, but eat less.
- Avoid oversized portions.
- Make half your plate fruits and vegetables.
- Switch to fat-free or low-fat (1%) milk.
- Compare sodium in foods like soup, bread, and frozen meals – and choose the foods with lower numbers.
- Drink water instead of sugary drinks.

This edition of the Dietary Guidelines comes at a critical juncture for America's health and prosperity. By adopting the recommendations in the Dietary Guidelines, Americans can live healthier lives and contribute to a lowering of health-care costs, helping to strengthen America's long-term economic competitiveness and overall productivity.

USDA and HHS have conducted this latest review of the scientific literature, and have developed and issued the 7th edition of the Dietary Guidelines for Americans in a joint effort that is mandated by Congress. The Guidelines form the basis of nutrition education programs, Federal nutrition assistance programs such as school meals programs and Meals on Wheels programs for seniors, and dietary advice provided by health professionals.

The Dietary Guidelines, based on the most sound scientific information, provide authoritative advice for people 2 years and older about how proper dietary habits can promote health and reduce risk for major chronic diseases.

The Dietary Guidelines aid policymakers in designing and implementing nutrition-related programs. They also provide education and health professionals, such as nutritionists, dietitians, and health educators with a compilation of the latest science-based recommendations. A table with key consumer behaviors and potential strategies for professionals to use in implementing the Dietary Guidelines is included in the appendix.

College of Menominee Nation Offers New Training for Health Care Career

Students of the Home Health Aide training program hosted by the College of the Menominee Nation in Keshena, Wisc. CMN is considering adding off-site training.

Forty-six area residents have helped launch a new training program for those interested in work in the home health field. Additional participants are invited to apply for day and evening sessions starting on March 7, April 25 and June 1 at the College of Menominee Nation. Prospective students may call the CMN Technical Education Department at 715-799-5600 or toll free 800-567-2344.

The program is offered by the College through a grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The Home Health Aide curriculum includes training in six modules on topics such as the roles and ethics of those who work in the field, interpersonal skills, personal care, nutrition, first aid and CPR. All sessions are taught by registered nurses who have experience in long-term care.

To be eligible to attend the class, students must be at least sixteen years old and must pass the Wisconsin Caregiver Background Check. With the exception of a $5 application fee, student costs for the Home Health Aide training program are funded through the grant. Upon completion of the training, each student receives a certificate of completion, a set of scrubs, a watch, a gait belt and a voucher for a pair of soft-soled shoes. Students also keep the workbook and an on-the-job reference guide.

The first classes in the new program were held at Visions of Oconto County in Lena, and on the College of Menominee Nation campus in Keshena. Because of positive feedback regarding training at the Lena location, the College will consider doing additional off-site training. Facility managers who would like this 90-hour workshop delivered at their site should can get details and learn program requirements from Sadie Boucher or Barbara LaMarche of the CMN Technical Education department at 715-799-5600.

This series replaces a Personal Care Worker workshop that was previously offered at CMN.

Support and Encouragement are Key to Overcome Fear

By Kip Miller
Oneida Adventures

The Oneida Experiential and Adventure program works with the 5th through 8th grade once a week throughout the school year. Every year the 5th and 6th graders from the Oneida Turtle School have a chance to take a field trip to climb at the Civic Center on the indoor climbing wall. The students have an opportunity to challenge themselves in a safe environment and encourage others to do their best. During the 2 hour climbing experience the students learned about supporting and encouraging others. They overcame fear by trusting others and themselves.

Climbing can be a very challenging activity. We foster an environment where students feel safe to push themselves and support others to reach beyond their goals. When the students apply this lesson to their daily lives the real power of Experiential learning takes hold.

Survival Skills & Overnight Camping

Get Out… Explore!

Who's This For? Parents with their children or any interested individual (Adults and Ages 12-up)

Dates/Times? 3 Week Session… April 5, 12, 19 • 5 PM – 7 PM
Survival Overnight… April 30 • 10 AM – 10 PM

Class Location: 2640 West Point Rd., Green Bay, WI 54304

Cost? $40.00 for Tribal Members/Employees/Fitness Members
$60.00 for Non-Members (cost for overnight trip included)

Often times our life experience and education will determine how we respond to a survival situation. In a wilderness setting this holds true and you can enjoy the outdoors even more if you have the confidence to stretch your comfort zone. Wilderness survival skills are essential when exploring the great outdoors and the skills taught in this class will help you develop the confidence you need to get out and explore.

Modern and Primitive techniques will be taught during the course. Three main rules of survival will be focused on during the sessions: (fire, shelter & water) Participants will learn several ways to start a fire (Flint and steel, bow drills along with artificial and natural fire starters.) Building a shelter is a great skill to learn. Several examples of shelters will be shared during the course and you will have a chance to sleep in your own during the overnight. The survival overnight will be a hands on learning experience using the new survival skills you've developed during the course. This class could be a great activity for a parent and child or any interested individual. A survival game and quiz will be used to help bring out a real survival situation.

Instruction will be provided on the following priorities:

Fire: A fire is an essential survival skill to have; learn some fire building basics along with some natural fire starting materials. Use flint and steel or a bow drill to start a fire
Shelter: Learn how to build a survival shelter using the surrounding resources.
Water: Treating and collecting water are essential skills to have in any outdoor adventure activity. It can be a critical survival skill.

Adults and ages 12 and up are invited to register.
Space is limited so be sure you register in advance.

Honoring the Youth 2011

It was a busy day on Saturday, February 5th in the Oneida community with multiple activities going on simultaneously. The Winter Fest on the Cultural Heritage grounds, Honor the Youth Powwow at the Turtle School, and the GTC meeting at the Norbert Hill Center. With all of the activities going on, the 1pm grand entry for the Honor the Youth Powwow was sparse in attendance. Top, left, the Oneida Royalty were on hand for the first grand entry; At top, two fancy dancers get busy, while immediately below are two young female traditional dancers. At right, are the head female and male dancers, Lollana Hill and Jacob Johnson respectively. Ten drums were set up and ready to go in the afternoon. There were thirteen drums overall. Above, left, are the Blackfoot Confederacy drum from Montana. The youth host drum was Young Firekeepers, Crandon. Above, center were Color Guard members Leander Danforth and John Dennison kick off the 1pm grand entry. Emcee for the day long event was Mark Stevens while Anthony Guiterrez took care of Arena Director duties.

Benefits of Stretching

Part one

As you age, your muscles tighten and range of motion in the joints can be minimized. This can put a damper on active lifestyles and even hinder day-to-day, normal motions. Tasks that used to be simple, such as zipping up a dress or reaching for a can off of the top shelf, now become extremely difficult. A regular stretching program can help lengthen your muscles and make daily living activities easier.

It does not have to involve a huge time commitment, but stretching can end up giving you huge results! Here are just a few of the benefits you can expect from a regular stretching program:

- Reduced muscle tension
- Increased range of movement in the joints
- Enhanced muscular coordination
- Increased circulation of the blood to various parts of the body
- Increased energy levels (resulting from increased circulation)

If you would like to experience the benefits of stretching first hand in a controlled setting why not participate in one of our Oneida Family Fitness Ease Those Aches Water classes. They are conducted by trained staff members and offer socialization as well as gentle exercise. They are held three times during the week; Mondays and Wednesdays at 10:15 AM and Tuesdays at 6:15 PM.

Core training strengthens center

By Brad Sosinsky
Fitness Specialist

bsosinsk@oneidanation.org

Are you aware that the core of your body is the originating center of all your movements? And yet, core strengthening exercises is one of the most neglected areas of a workout routine, even amongst people who exercise regularly. Your core comprises of the muscles of your trunk and pelvis, which include the abdominal muscles, the oblique muscles, the muscles in your pelvic area such as your hip-flexors, and the muscles of your lower and upper back. A weak core makes you vulnerable to injury, pain in the lower back, poor balance and posture. Hence, core strengthening exercises are vital for the overall conditioning of your body, since the core is the area of your center of gravity. By core strength training you will get the following benefits:

- Provides protection for your back due to the bracing effect of strengthening the core muscles
- Provides core stability because of your trunk becoming stronger
- Stabilizes your center of gravity
- Improves your posture, balance and shape
- Improves your performance during exercise and sports activities
- Makes you less susceptible to back pain and injuries

Here are some example core exercises to perform. Perform all exercises with10-15 repetitions, 3 times per week.

CRUNCHES: Lie down flat on the floor with your knees bent and your hands either behind your head or crossed on top of your chest. First take a few deep breaths, then, contracting your abdominal muscles, lift your head and shoulders up, bringing your chest towards your raised thighs. Lower your head and shoulders back slowly to the floor.

REVERSE CRUNCHES: Lie flat on your back, your hands behind your head. Lift both your legs up, bending your knees so that the lower portion of your legs are parallel to the floor. Now, contracting your abdominal muscles, lift your pelvis off the floor, bringing your knees towards your chest. Then, without relaxing the contraction in your abs, lower feet to the floor.

BALL CRUNCHES: The exercise ball is one of the best tools for performing core strength exercises. Lie on the ball, with your lower back resting on it, with your hands behind your head and your feet resting on the floor. Contracting your abs, curl your upper body towards your hips. Return back into the previous position.

OBLIQUE CROSSING OVER CRUNCHES: Lie flat on your back, with your right hand behind your head, and your left hand stretched out on the floor for support. Your right knee should be bent, with the foot on the floor. Put your left foot on the right knee. Now lift the upper part of your body off the floor, twisting toward the left, crunching your right elbow and shoulder in the direction of your left knee. Return back to the starting position and then switch sides.

AIR BICYCLING: Lie on your back, with your hands behind your head, and your knees bent with your feet flat on the floor. Lift the upper part of your body, while straightening out your right leg and bringing your left knee towards your chin, while simultaneously taking your right elbow towards your bent left knee. Then, switch sides. All these actions should be performed in a smooth, seamless fashion. Continue to alternate sides as if you are bicycling in the air.

OSGC again selects new location for plant

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Oneida Seven Generations Corporation's (OSGC) renewable energy project is once again on the move as a new location has been selected within the boundaries of the City of Green Bay.

The plant, to be located at 1230 Hurlbut Street on the city's northwest side, will take municipal solid waste otherwise placed in local landfills through a gasification process generating power that will be sold to Wisconsin Public Service.

"This renewable energy project will now have 150 tons less of garbage coming on the reservation," said OSGC's Chief Executive Officer Kevin Cornelius. "The project will also create 22 full-time jobs and eight part time jobs."

The new location, which is zoned general industry, is surrounded by a power plant, cement company, construction company and city dump.

Construction is expected to be swift as many necessary utilities are nearby. "The parcel location is adjacent to major transportation routes as well as electric transmission lines, which will make operations much easier. It's already on a truck route and creates

Members of the Coordinated Community Response (CCR) team stand in front of a banner that will hang at the Norbert Hill Center to remind the community that options are available for victims of domestic abuse.
The CCR team consists of area agencies from Brown and Outagamie Counties developed to protect victims of domestic abuse on the reservation and hold abusers accountable for their actions.
The group promotes training and cultural understanding for surrounding agencies to help them understand the Oneida community. The CCR was established in 1994 and is considered as a model program by the United States Justice Department.

Oneida Food Distribution serves up nutrition

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Kalihwisaks will be focusing on the effects of the economic downturn and sharing stories of Oneidas struggling in these financially hard times. This is the third story of the series.

Don't use the term "comods" around Oneida Food Distribution Manager Don Miller.

"I can't say commodities anymore – it's USDA foods," he said. "They want to take away that stigma."

Oneida Food Distribution was started in 1983 by Nori Damrow under the federally funded Food Distribution Programs on Indian Reservation (FDPIR) program.

"This was because of complaints that were received from potentially eligible clients who had no transportation, no phones and oftentimes they suffered discrimination or mistreatment when they visited the government run food stamp offices," said Miller.

The program distributes food packages to any eligible people living within the reservation boundaries and to eligible Native American households in rural Brown, Outagamie, Door and Kewaunee Counties. A rural area is considered a town of 10,000 people or less, however, Oneida Food Distribution has a waiver so

Wis. Senate committee passes voter ID requirement

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ A Wisconsin state Senate committee passed a bill Tuesday that would require voters to show photo identification at the polls, approving it over the objection of a Democratic state senator who wasn't allowed to vote.

Sen. Jon Erpenbach, one of the 14 Senate Democrats who skipped town last week rather than vote on a bill taking away collective bargaining rights for public employees, joined the committee meeting by phone. He and other Democrats have been participating and voting in committee meetings by phone ever since they left on Thursday.

Republican Sen. Mary Lazich, chairwoman of the Elections Committee, refused to let Erpenbach ask questions or vote on the voter ID proposal.

"Seriously? I'm not going to be able to ask my questions?" a surprised Erpenbach said over the speakerphone set up for the meeting.

Lazich repeatedly asked Erpenbach where he was and whether he was on his way to the Capitol.

"You can come in at any moment," she said. "We want you present. We want you to have a full discussion."

She accused Erpenbach of an ethical violation for not being in Madison to take up the union bill that has led to eight straight days of protests in which demonstrators have filled the halls of the Capitol, noisily banging on drums, chanting and displaying signs calling for the proposal to be killed.

The meeting on the voter ID bill was held under the watch of four state patrol officers in the parlor of the state Senate chamber. A limited number of members of the public were escorted in to watch.

Erpenbach called in and asked a couple questions early in the meeting, but was later cut off by Lazich.

"I answered the roll call. I'm here," Erpenbach said.

"I'm not going to allow you to participate," Lazich said. "You are not here."

She argued that because the Senate was under a call of the house for consideration of the union bill, and Erpenbach was ignoring that, she was under no obligation to allow him to take part in the meeting. His name was not called as the three Republicans present for the meeting voted to pass the bill.

"I vote no," Erpenbach said. "Erpenbach votes no. I vote no."

Erpenbach and Democrats have opposed the voter ID bill for years, arguing that it will make it more difficult for college students, senior citizens and minorities to vote. Republicans argue it's needed to combat voter fraud.

Wisconsin voters currently are not required to show any form of ID before casting a ballot.

The new requirement would be in effect for the April election, but voters who don't have IDs would still be allowed to cast their ballots and would be given information about the new law that would fully take effect in 2012.

The committee voted to expand the number of acceptable IDs to include U.S. passports and tribal IDs. Also allowed is a driver's license, a military identification card or a state identification card or certificate issued by the Wisconsin Department of Transportation.

The proposal comes with a cost, which means the Senate couldn't take it up before at least one Democrat returns because at least 20 lawmakers have to be there to take up budget bills. But Sen. Joe Leibham, the Republican sponsor, said all the parts except those that cost money could be passed as soon as Thursday.

Republicans are forging ahead with other business in the Senate while Democrats stymie their efforts to pass the union bill.

Barton and Cornelius honored for work on bonding easy access for trucks," said OSGC's Project Manager Pete King.

With expressed public concern over the site on Packerland Drive in Ashwaubenon the city of Green Bay approached OSGC with multiple alternative sites last month.

"We had to do the due diligence on each site and see how they fit into our business model. We had to see what advantages did one site have compared to another. We had to look at it from a business standpoint to see if it made sense to change. We are here to create revenue streams for the tribe," said King.

Though OSGC acknowledges the public concern, it wasn't the main catalyst in the move.

"We certainly heard from a small but vocal group of people that they did not want to facility in Ashwaubenon," said King. "Many told us they don't oppose the technology, but do oppose the site."

OSGC feels the amount of individuals opposing the project will decrease but predict some pushback. "We expect a small group (of opposition) from folks who just don't support these types of technologies," King said.

The latest move is not expected to affect the project's lending agreements and completion date of December of this year. The project received a temporary permit from the city's Planning Commission on Monday, February 21. It will move to the City Council on March 1 for consideration.

> "We're here to develop economic revenue streams for the tribe, we have stay focused on that. Politics came into play and that is not why we moved, it made economic sense."
> –Pete King III, OSGC Project Manager

Though the plant will be categorized as tax exempt by Wisconsin tax regulations, OSGC is working with the city of Green Bay on a payment in lieu of taxes to compensate for the non-tax status. The land or facility cannot be placed into trust.

King hopes the latest move will ease the concerns community members have and lead to success of the project.

"It leads the way in renewable energy, it is safe and will meet all regulatory agency requirements for construction and operation," he said. "We're here to develop economic revenue streams for the tribe, we have stay focused on that. Politics came into play and that is not why we moved, it made economic sense. The most likely success we would have would be at this new site."

Stevens, Oneida; Craig "Pork" Stevens, Oneida; Glen "Stein" Stevens, Oneida; Raphael "Ray" Stevens, Oneida; Quinton "Caveman" Stevens, Oneida; Warren "Barn" Stevens, Oneida. Further survived by many, many nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Ned and Josephine; son, Jeffrey A. Shegonee; daughter, Danielle Josephine Daniels; and two grandchildren.

The Traveling Feast started at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 15, and the Native American Church Service was held at 1:30 p.m. with Mr. Geronimo Powless leading the services. Interment was in the Potawatomi Tribal Cemetery, Stone Lake.

Weber-Hill Funeral Home, Crandon, assisted the family with the services. Online condolences can be expressed at www.weberhillfuneralhome.com.

Powlas, Kenneth Harris
January 29, 1925 – December 12, 2010

Kenneth Harris Powlas died December 12, 2010 in Overbrook Ks. He was born January 29th, 1925 in Wauwatsa, Wisconsin to Grace Inez Weelock Harris and Ralph Harris. He was raised by his step-father Whitney Eli Powlas. He received his Oneida name in 1941, Lotshanit (good worker). He was an active organizer and officer of American Indian organizations in Milwaukee, WI, Lawrence, KS and metropolitan Kansas City, MO.

Ken enjoyed years of being captain of an undefeated lacrosse team in Milwaukee, WI, 1941 to 1949.

Ken was an American Indian dancer since 1938. He performed individual and group programs for children and adults. He was a member of the Eagle Talon American drum and singer.

He served in the Army-Air Force during World War II. He graduated from the University of Kansas in 1951. He was a lifelong Green Bay Packer fan.

He is preceded in death by his wife, Margaret Ann Powlas and sister Lois.

He is survived by brothers James Scofield of Wisconsin and Victor Scofield of California, sons Mitchell Powlas of Everett, WA, Wyatt Powlas of Seattle, WA, Rusty Powlas of Kansas City, MO and daughters Janice Woods of Lawrence, KS, Ramona Shull of Overland Park, KS and Tammy Powlas of Annandale, VA. He is also survived by grandchildren Kevin Downs of Olathe, KS, Eric Downs of Drexel, MO, Cpt. Timothy Powlas of Clarksville, TN, Kris Downs of Osage City, KS, Maggie Shull of Overland Park, KS, Eli and Luci Powlas of Kansas City, MO and several great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to WalkingShield.org, whose mission is to improve the quality of life for American Indian families by coordinating programs that provide shelter, healthcare, community development support, educational assistance, and humanitarian aid.

A private family service was held February 12 in Lawrence Kansas.

Obituaries...
There is no charge for obituary notices to be published in the Kalihwisaks for enrolled tribal members.

Smith, Geraldine M.
October 13, 1923 – February 20, 2011

Geraldine 'Gerry' Smith was born on October 13, 1923 to the union of Lillian and Lawrence John of Seymour, Wisconsin. She was a proud member of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin.

Gerry accepted Christ as her Savior early in life. She relocated to Milwaukee in 1940 and soon became a member of First United Methodist Church. Gerry gave her life, heart and soul to God.

Gerry was united in holy matrimony to Louis Smith on August 26, 1944 in Milwaukee, WI. To this union four children were born.

Gerry was employed by Wisconsin Electric for 12 years in food service and retired in 1986. She was an active member of Circle, Senior League and the Sunshine Committee chairperson at church where she was responsible for sending warm wishes to those in need of a little extra warmth and heartfelt support.

Gerry enjoyed preparing meals for her family, baking and doting on her grandchildren. The 'ultimate caregiver' she was at her best providing support for her three granddaughters who were raised in the home with her. Gerry was also an avid reader who had a special gift with words which might have been an extension of her love of word searches and playing Scrabble. She also enjoyed traveling and visited many locations across the United States through the Senior Adult Ministries. Gerry also loved participating in events organized by the Southeastern Oneida Tribal Service office and attending Powwows.

She leaves to cherish her memory: her children; Bruce Smith, LeaRae (Floyd) Carter, Jerrlyn (Juan) Muniz and Bonnie (Israel) Smith; her grandchildren, Rick (Hinu) Smith, Kachina Smith, Nelson Smith, Levi Smith, Kalonji Carter, Karen (Mark) Lyman, Luis Muniz, Carmen Muniz, Jean (Avery) Mallett, Sara Cordova, Naomi Cordova; 19 great grandchildren; three great great grandchildren; brother, Larry John; sister, Neva Mae John and a host of other loving relatives and friends.

Gerry was a devoted and loving mother and grandmother who will be deeply missed.

Services will be held Friday, February 25, 2011 at 12:00pm at First United Methodist Church, 7520 W. Lapham Street, West Allis Wisc. Rev. Susan Lockman officiating.

Waubano, Sr., Wayne "Little Bear" A.
November 6, 1975 – February 16, 2011

Wayne A. "Little Bear" Waubano Sr. age 35 passed away Wednesday February 16, 2011. Loving father to Desiree, Wayne, Riley, Quinton, Melanie, and Payton. Devoted son of Candy and Leroy. Special brother to Jennifer, Leroy, Jolene, and Anthony.

A service to honor Little Bear's life was held at 11am at the funeral home. The Oneida Hymn Singers sang at 10:30am. Please go to www.ryanfh.com to send online condolences.

In Loving Memory

Only the Best
In Loving Memory of
Angeline Brocker
Who passed away 1 year ago on February 26, 2010

We think about you often,
which is nothing new
We think about all the love you gave
And all the joy you brought into our lives
And everyone you knew.

We think about all the times we shared laughter
And good times.

But most of all, we think about the love we shared as Mother and Grandmother and how your smile could light up the room.

Rest in Peace until we meet again.

Love your Children and Grandchildren

Thank You!

Joshua Lambert Christjohn

We would like to give thanks to all who shared their kindness, their thoughts, prayers and assistance during the time of the lost of our Josh. Special thanks to Jennifer, Cornelius Singers, Bob, Sonny, Fire Keepers, Cooks, Ryan's Funeral Home, the anonymous and the beautiful poem and flute.

We express profound gratitude to those sharing their lives that were touched by our Son, Brother, Grandson, Uncle, Nephew, Cousin, and Friend: Joshua L. Christjohn, father of Lyla and Levi.

There were so many it would be too hard to recall and too overwhelming to personally address each and every one. I saw Love like I've never seen before. We were deeply moved by the number and the distance traveled, by the people that came to stand at our side as we sent Josh on his journey.

We were extremely honored that Joshua's friends expressed and reached out to include each and every one of us with their love and respect. The range of age was not without being surprisingly comfortable and with great understanding for anyone of us that knew Josh and his style, true leadership by friends.

I asked the young men that I knew were Josh's friends and those I felt were Josh's friends to walk behind Josh and in front of us and our families, as each one were Pall Bearer, and that even though they may not get to carry Josh it would be the same as they were all Josh' Pall Bearer. They honored our family with tremendous solidarity. I was told there were close to 40 young men standing tall and very respectful and waited to be the last at the gravesite. We give you Thanks, each and every one of you.

The personal request for permission to play his flute for Josh was heartfelt even after we learned the flute was broken, and yet another flute player came forward and shared his, and we were captivated with then the two flutists. We give you each our Thanks.

The many stories and experiences shared with us all will never be forgotten and will be of great help to keep moving forward knowing of Josh's experience of great friends, good family and many travels.

We are extremely thankful for that special and personal gift of kindness given by a truly rate and gifted Veteran Friend who at times may personify himself as a brother, uncle and father figure for many on his own life journey. We give Thanks to you and your family.

Josh had many extended brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts, nieces, nephews, grandmothers, grandfathers, mothers and fathers throughout his entire life. We will have fond memories forever.

It is said that it takes a community to raise a child and we were blessed with and unforgettable and continuously compassionate support of close friends, close family, close extended family and friends.

For those I may have failed to mention, it is not intentional, only out of overwhelming circumstances of our great loss.

We give you Thanks, Each and Every One, from our hearts to all, near and far and dearest of sister(s).

Frequently Asked Questions
Oneida Tribal General Election Primary

How will the election process be different for the 2011 General Election?

In 2011, a Primary Election will be held. In years past there was no primary election.

What is a primary?

Excerpts from Oneida Tribal Election Law:

2.12-2. There shall be a primary election for Business Committee positions whenever there are three (3) or more candidates for any officer positions or sixteen (16) or more candidates for the at-large council member positions.

(a) The two (2) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for each officer position shall be placed on the ballot.

(b) The fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for the at-large council member positions shall be placed on the ballot.

(c) Any position where a tie exists to determine the candidates to be placed on the ballot shall include all candidates where the tie exists.

2.12-3. The Election Board shall cancel the primary election if the Business Committee positions did not draw the requisite number of candidates for a primary by the petitioning deadline set for the primary.

2.12-4. In the event a candidate withdraws or is unable to run for office after being declared a winner in the primary, the Election Board shall declare the next highest primary vote recipient the primary winner. This procedure shall be repeated as necessary until the ballot is full or until there are no available candidates. If the ballot has already been printed, the procedures for notifying the Oneida public in section 2.5-11 and 2.5-12 shall be followed, including the requirement to print a notice in the Tribal newspaper if time lines allow.

Why have a primary?

To give members a chance to select from fewer candidates or the Business Committee positions in the General Election.

Will there be a primary for all vacancies?

No. The primary election is for Business Committee vacancies only.

When will the primary be held?

On Saturday, May 7, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

If there are only two candidates running for an officer position, will a primary still be held for that position?

No. The primary is designed to get the top two candidates for each officer position. If only two applicants run for that position, each applicant will automatically be placed on the General Election ballot as a candidate.

If a candidate didn't advance in the primary, can I write their name on my ballot at the General Election?

No. Write-in candidates are not allowed.

When will the Caucus be held?

On Saturday, March 12, 2011 at the Norbert Hill Center at 1:00 p.m.

Is the Caucus just for vacancies within the Business Committee?

No, the Caucus will be for ALL vacancies of all boards, committees, and commissions with elected positions to be filled at the 2011 General Election.

When can I submit application for candidacy?

Officially this is done at the Caucus by being nominated and submitting the required application by the deadline date to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

If I can't attend the Caucus, can I still submit my application to be a candidate?

Yes. You will need to complete a petition and submit the required application by the deadline date.

How long do I have to submit an application to become a candidate?

All applications are due by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, March 18, 2011 to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

When is the General Election?

On Saturday, July 16, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

When can I begin campaigning?

Whenever you wish.

Excerpt from Oneida Election Law: 2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:

(a) Placement of campaign signs:

(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's permission.

(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.

(3) No campaign sign shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.

(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.

(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.

(d) Enforcement. The Zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.

(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Can I vote by absentee ballot?

No. Article III Section 2 of the Constitution states "All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin who are 21 years of age or over shall be qualified voters provided they present themselves in person at the polls on the day of election."

Will the Milwaukee voting site be open for both the primary and general election?

Yes. Business Committee Resolution 03-13-2002-O states: "NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that an approved facility; compliance with the Oneida Election Law, 2.8-0, Section B, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is hereby designated as a second polling site for Oneida triennial elections, beginning with the July, 2002, election." The SEOTS Building is located at 6820 West Wedgewood Drive, Milwaukee, WI.

2010 Oneida Quality of Life Results

By Oneida Statistics Office

The Quality of Life survey gathers information from Oneida Tribal members regarding their views on various social, cultural, health, economic, educational, governmental and other Tribal related issues. The survey was mailed to all member households in Brown and Outagamie Counties. A total of 433 completed questionnaires were returned giving an overall response rate of 14% and a margin of error of +/- 4.3%.

The Quality of Life survey was extensive, so it will take many articles to present all of the results. This first article will just give an overview. The following are the key findings of the survey.

1. The top three goals for the Oneida Tribe as identified by respondents were Employment, Finance, and Healthcare.

2. Overall, the vast majority of respondents are satisfied with their lives.

3. The majority of respondents positively rated the Reservation overall as a place to live, place to retire, and place to raise a family.

4. Only 38% of respondents rated the health of the economy in their areas as excellent or good, while 55% rated it fair or poor. Although respondents did not rate the economy favorably, the majority are positive that they will be better off financially this time next year. The majority of respondents are satisfied with the income they have. The median family income reported by respondents was $33,452.

5. The majority of respondents are satisfied with their personal health, and a much higher percentage believe their mental health is excellent or good. The vast majority of respondents believe their access to health care services is excellent or good, and a similar percentage rated the quality of health care services available as excellent or good.

6. The majority of respondents agreed that Oneida provides good employment opportunities for members. 38% of respondents did not rate their current job, because they are retired, disabled, or unemployed. Of those who are employed, the vast majority are satisfied with their job.

7. The majority of respondents consider their current housing situation as excellent or good. More respondents are satisfied with the variety of housing options on the Reservation than those who are dissatisfied. The majority of respondents own their current place of residence. The average household size is 2.8 with an average of 2.0 enrolled Oneida members in each household.

8. Of the educational programs, respondents were most satisfied with the Oneida Community Education Center, followed by the Oneida Head Start Program, then the Oneida Higher Education Program. The Oneida Nation High School had the same percentage of respondents who were satisfied as those who were dissatisfied. The majority of respondents rated the quality of education where their child/children attend schools as excellent or good.

9. The majority of respondents believe that Oneida is fair in the amount of services and benefits offered to members. The majority also feel supported and cared for by the Oneida Tribe in times of need. The vast majority of respondents believe that the Oneida Tribe is making improvements to enhance the quality of life of Tribal Members. When asked specifically about the quality of social services available from the Oneida Tribe, the majority rated them excellent or good.

10. The majority of respondents feel very connected to the culture of Oneida, but only slightly more are aware of Tsi? niyukwalihó·tʌ than those who are not. Over three-quarters of the respondents believe that the Oneida Reservation provides a strong sense of place and identity. A higher percentage of respondents rated cultural events like art, theater, and music in their area as fair or poor. The majority of respondents were satisfied with the Oneida Nation Museum.

11. The majority of respondents rated the water quality of the Reservation's surface waters as fair or poor. Overall, though, respondents rated the quality of the natural environment on the Reservation positively.

12. A higher percentage of respondents rated the availability of trails and bike paths in their neighborhood negatively than positively. For those who rated the condition of trails and bike paths, a slightly higher percentage rated them positively than negatively.

13. The majority of respondents rated the condition of roads in their neighborhoods positively. Positive ratings were also given to transit in their area. Over half of the respondents do not have sidewalks in their neighborhoods. Of those who do, they are split over positive and negative ratings.

14. The vast majority of respondents rated garbage collection at their homes positively. Wastewater sewer services were also rated positively. Drinking water quality was also rated positively, but not by as high of a margin.

15. Fire protection, law enforcement, and emergency medical response were rated positively by the majority of respondents. Half of all respondents rated community patrolling positively. The vast majority of respondents feel safe being alone in their neighborhoods at night, and the majority of respondents do not think gang activity is a problem in their neighborhood. The majority of respondents believe that the Oneida Reservation is a safe place for children.

16. The vast majority of respondents believe that it is important to attend General Tribal Council (GTC) meetings, and the majority also think they receive enough information to make good decisions at GTC meetings. Just over half of the respondents believe they can have an impact on decisions made by community leaders in Oneida. A slightly higher percentage trust Oneida community leaders to do what is best for Oneida. Of those who responded, the majority do not believe that the Oneida government is open and honest.

17. The majority of respondents, 65%, have a personal computer in their homes. Of those who have computers, 87% have internet access in their homes. Almost all respondents use the Kalihwisaks to receive information about the Oneida Nation. The next most common method is word of mouth followed by direct mail.

Upcoming articles will go into detail for each of the key findings. Future plans to address the issues in the survey will be included in those articles. If you have any questions or would like a complete copy of the results of the Quality of Life survey, please contact the Oneida Statistics Office at 920-869-4564 or stats@oneidanation.org.

BayBank Green Bay, Wisconsin

An old proverb goes like this: "The best time to plant a tree is ten years ago. The second best time is today." That not only holds true for tree planting, but for making changes in how you deal with credit card debt as well. Too often consumers who are dealing with significant levels of debt feel overwhelmed by their situation, unsure if they can ever get control again. Regret and guilt are common feelings, too - "How could I have let this happen? Will anything I do make a difference now?"

To paraphrase another wise saying, "A long journey starts with a single step." What seems impossible can become manageable when you break things down to make small but effective changes in your financial life. Here are some practical steps to shake off that debt paralysis and get started on your journey to a debt-free life today:

- Think this is happening to you? Start by reviewing your financial situation (with help from a trusted source, if you need it) and set reducing debt as a goal.
- Look for ways to free up more money to pay down your debt. Track your spending and write out your monthly expenses. Create a spending plan (otherwise known as a budget) which includes your debt-reduction goal. Prioritize your expenses now and see if you can cut back on some of the less important items. Involve the whole family in making changes.
- Identify how you are using credit and make changes. Don't use credit to supplement your income. Establish an emergency fund. People who have a rainy day fund are less likely to rely on credit when the unexpected happens. Don't carry your credit card when you shop. You'll be less likely to make impulse purchases.
- Make more than the minimum credit card payment. Credit card statements now tell you how long it will take to pay off your balance if you only make the minimum. That can be a real eye-opener. Even an extra $10 can reduce pay off time by months.
- Create your own debt repayment program. Try to pay a set amount each month on your credit cards and stick to it. As one card gets paid off, put that payment onto the next card with the highest balance or highest interest rate. Keep going until you are putting the entire payment on the last remaining card.
- Look for automatic and easy ways to pay. Once you've identified how much you can pay each month, consider setting up on-line bill paying or direct account withdrawal to make the payments automatic.
- Work with your creditors. If you encounter any problems repaying your debts, contact the creditor immediately and explain the situation. Creditors often will work with you to come up with an alternate payment arrangement for a short period of time.
- Seek help from a credit counselor. If you have been unable to resolve your finances on your own, consider working with a nonprofit credit counseling agency.

Since the beginning of this term, the LOC has paid particular attention to legislation that renews and revitalizes our nation-building process. Along with the Judiciary, we have placed high priority on legislative efforts to amend the Tribal Constitution and to overhaul our Indian Preference laws - the next few months will tell us whether our efforts on those fronts have been successful. These laws reaffirm our sovereign status and support our identity as a People, and we must be vigilant about maintaining and updating them to best reflect our present needs and abilities.

Trish King
Councilwoman

I wish I could say that if these three proposals are passed, we have successfully reached the finish line. However, that isn't accurate. Nation-building is a continuous process, and we must strive every day – always - to build and expand upon a foundation that will best benefit not only who we are today, but also the seventh generation. As our nation grows and evolves, we must make sure our governing documents have grown and evolved alongside us. I am proud of the progress we have made so far, and I am excited to see what will happen in the future.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank all of the GTC members who shared their views with us at the February 5 GTC meeting regarding specific options that were presented for the Judiciary. It was very clear that generally there is support to make adjustments to our current judicial system, and that the details need to be worked out a bit.

Per the direction of the GTC, the LOC is developing a volunteer work group to develop a more precise recommendation utilizing the discussion from that GTC meeting. To keep this as simple of a process as possible, a series of meetings have been scheduled to take place every Thursday night during the month of March, from 6:00-8:00 p.m. in the Executive Conference Room - second floor of Norbert Hill Center. I encourage any interested GTC members to join us at these meetings. The work group will be focusing on developing specific recommendations for judge qualifications and disciplinary panels. I hope this effort will provide good dialogue and that we can develop language to resolve these issues.

Also, a petition has been submitted asking to lift the six-month deferral of the Judiciary, and to adopt specific language for qualifications and disciplinary panels for that law. This petition should also be taken into consideration by the workgroup. Once all these processes are complete, the law will be ready to be adopted and implemented.

Speaking of petitions, we are all going to be very busy from now through September, both in the operations of the Tribe and in the forum of the General Tribal Council. Four separate petitions have been submitted by GTC members, totaling 11 issues to be addressed and decided upon by GTC. All of the petitions are available in the Tribal Secretary's office. The impact statements from legal, financial, legislative and operational perspectives are currently being developed for each resolution and petition. We hope to have all this information available on the member's only website in the very near future.

Guest Editorial...

What is this, the 1800s?

Wisconsin's new approach to addressing the culture, heritage, history and future of the State's Native American population here in 2011 makes me think they all stopped reading and/or acknowledging us after the 1800's. Think about this; all of a sudden we have no existence in their eyes. SB250, passed in the State of Wisconsin in May of 2010 was landmark legislation not only in the State, but across the United States. Now the Republican control of our State is braced to eliminate us. Or, as was done to our Nation, the Menominee, back in the 1960's, to, "Terminate" us, our cultures and more importantly our actual existence as a living culture.

The Republicans say SB250 gives too much power to individuals of this great State for a process of challenge. That challenge, of course, is using my name, image and culture as a school name, mascot or logo. I was raised Menominee Indian. Not far from here in Green Bay there are a lot of people who were raised, "Mishicot Indians". Do these Republicans know the legal difference between a Menominee Indian and a Mishicot Indian? I do. According to the United States Federal government, in order to be considered, "Indian" in America, we need to be able to show documentation proving we are ¼ bloodline of any particular Tribe. Once that is done, we are issued a number on a card. I carry my card with me every day because that is what the Law dictates. I have met several, "Mishicot Indians", asked them to show me their cards, but I haven't seen one yet. But our new Republican leadership, trying to repeal SB250 are telling me, as a Menominee Indian, I may never be able to question or file a complaint on anyone else who identifies their communities and/or schools as, "Indian".

Many of us in the State of Wisconsin have been fighting for over forty years for legislation that would give us a sense of being able to teach our children that, "The system works". SB250 did just that. Native Americans in Wisconsin account for less than 2% of the total population. There were no Native Americans in the State Legislature when SB250 was passed. We had great and honorable support across the State, and as they say in the media, "Across the aisle" in getting this Bill passed. Plus, Jeff Ryan and his students from Prescott High School, none of whom are Native American, took on this cause and helped educate our State's leadership on the importance and significance of this Bill. Now, after last year's election, the Republicans are saying everyone's work, lives, education and honor don't count. I, for one, will not stand for it.

Treaties, the Termination Policy, removal, out-right killing and sending our forefathers and mothers to government schools didn't work. Here in the 21st century retaining, educating and supporting our children and elders is key to our culture. Listening to our Fathers, Mothers, Uncles, Aunties and Grandparents who were sent to government schools, who were removed from their and our homelands to urban settings teach us one valuable lesson that is in no history book; we are a living culture. We are human beings and deserve to be treated as such. SB250 gave us all the process to make our voices heard. Now the Republicans want to silence us, again. I for one will not stand for it.

I just looked at my calendar. It reads, "February 13, 2011". What amazes me is that the new Republican leadership has not gone past 1800. How can I say this? I've read some of the history books in America. I've seen far too many schools in Wisconsin using my name and image as their name, mascot or logo. I do not look like that. I do not dress like that. I do not act like that. And I, for one, will not stand for that.

Land Tenure

Open commentary to the GTC and the world.....While the world is in the midst of change, evolution and revolution where is Indian Country in the USA in this matrix? The issue of land tenure and the Indigenous Diaspora looms in the larger equation of change....after over 25 years since the Oneida Nation won its land tenure case in the highest court in the United States land ...there is still no justice...perhaps it is time to go to the streets of public opinion as much as the courts??? What does the world know of the Indigenous land tenure issues since discovery by the present occupation forces in the USA? Perhaps this time of awakening will reach the soil of the Americas....we shall see....as the unfinished business with Indigenous Peoples seems to tether the full progress of the Americas to a dark part of world history...

Budget Thoughts

This article will address just a few issues as they relate to our budget. Please note, there's a 500 word limitation here and I have been told that I cannot reveal budget numbers here, so go to my blog to see the un-edited version of this letter. The blog site is located at: www.oneida2011.blogspot.com

Here are just a few of my concerns: 1.) Why are there no pay raises available for employees? And; 2.) There is a serious lack of programming, including homeless housing assistance. There are a number of homeless and unemployed Oneida people out here.

Upon a thorough review of the budget it seems we can afford raises and progressive programming to help tribal members, but a lot of our money is tied-up in very high salaries for a few. Honestly, why are all the top salaries in the tribe a secret? After looking at the budget I cannot understand why Oneida employees cannot get pay raises.

If you look at the budget packet for the last budget meeting, the Treasurer revealed in a letter to the GTC that the tribe is facing "extreme difficulty in keeping operational cost in line with FY2011-2013 revenue projections." The Treasurer went on to essentially say that we are going to experience record deficits over the next two years. If you go on to read the entire budget packet and sift through the budget, you must ask yourself, where are our priorities and who's running the tribe? Why can't the OBC keep operational cost in line with revenue projections?

For example, in this same budget packet, the OBC asked the GTC to support a bird farm proposal (Page 96) while a majority of the OBC did not support a pay raise (Page 60) for the employees. How is this even a logical choice: Birds vs. Employees? When was the last time the employees had a pay raise? Luckily the bird idea lost, but so did the employees, no raises this year.

Obviously our finances need a serious level of attention during the next budget cycle. Clearly a shift in priorities needs to be considered. In the next year or so we need to address the very real needs of the people and re-look at wage issues.

Now, when I say needs, I'm not talking about charity, I am talking about assistance to tribal members. There is a difference between charity and assistance, when the people of this nation need help that is not charity, that's providing for our needs! In summary, many wages are very depressed and there are homeless and unemployed Oneida people. We simply cannot tell people to go to the Salvation Army. Likewise, we cannot keep telling the employees there is no money for raises, something has to give. The true measure of our nation is how we treat all our people. Likewise, many Oneida's are hurting, whether they're working or not. Think about it.

Respectfully,
Vince DelaRosa

Quarterly Summaries for Oct. - Dec. 2010

Initial Review

Rule 9(D) – Criteria for Acceptance:

The Initial Review Body shall accept an appeal for appellate review if one or more of the following elements are sufficiently alleged to exist in the original hearing body decision by the Appellant in the Notice of Appeal:

(1) A violation of constitutional provisions;
(2) The decision is outside the scope of the authority or otherwise unlawful;
(3) The decision is clearly erroneous and is against the weight of the evidence presented at the hearing level;
(4) The decision is arbitrary and/or capricious;
(5) There is exhibited a procedural irregularity which would be considered a harmful error that may have contributed to the final decision, which if the error had not occurred, would have altered the final decision;
(6) There is a presentation or introduction of new evidence that was not available at the hearing level which, if available, may have altered the final decision.

To conserve time and space provided, the Oneida Tribal Judicial System will only put into print the Initial Review Decisions which have been denied. The cases that have been accepted at Initial Review will be published when the final adjudication has been entered.

Denied Initial Review Decisions

Veronica Hanson vs. Oneida Bingo & Casino. . Docket No. 10-AC-021, October 12, 2010. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless, Winnifred L. Thomas presiding. Denied according to Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 9(E) Failure of Allegations. Appellant failed to sufficiently allege one of the criteria of Rule 9(D). This case denied.

Matthew W. Denny vs. Oneida Bingo & Casino, Frank Cornelius. Docket No. 10-AC-023, October 22, 2010. Judicial Officers Winnifred L. Thomas, Janice L. McLester, Jennifer Webster presiding. Denied in accordance with Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 6(1) Interlocutory Appeal Time: A party aggrieved of an intermediate ruling judgment or order during an original hearing, who wishes to seek intermediate relief, may file an interlocutory appeal…within five (5) days of the receipt of the ruling… Denied this case was filed untimely.

Ana Ramirez-Barton vs. Oneida Housing Authority, Dale Wheelock. Docket No. 10-AC-026, October 26, 2010. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless, Winnifred Thomas presiding. Denied according to Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 9(E) Failure of Allegations. Appellant failed to sufficiently allege one of the criteria of Rule 9(D). This case denied.

Susan Danforth vs. Oneida Housing Authority. Docket No. 10-AC-025, November 9, 2010. Judicial Officers Winnifred L. Thomas, Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless presiding. Motion to join additional cases denied. Cases listed in Appellant's brief are not eligible for appeal at this time because they are either past the 10 business days to file a Notice of Appeal or are still in litigation.

Kenneth Stevens vs. Division of Land Management. Docket No. 10-AC-024, November 29, 2010. Judicial Officers Stanley R. Webster, Linda Cornelius, Lois Powless presiding. Appellant has failed to allege one or more of the required elements for acceptance under Rule 9(D) and (E). Denied.

Joleen Kaquatosh vs. Oneida Bingo & Casino, Table Games, Jill Jordan. Docket No. 10-AC-031, December 3, 2011. Judicial Officers Winnifred L. Thomas, Janice L. McLester, Stanley R. Webster presiding. Denied according to Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 2(G). Untimely.

Ana Ramirez-Barton vs. Oneida Housing Authority, Dale Wheelock. Docket No. 10-AC-026, December 15, 2010 – Reconsideration. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless, Winnifred L. Thomas. Denied in accordance to Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 24(B) Reconsideration will only be granted under the circumstances where the moving party proves by a substantial weight of the evidence presented in the motion that there is new evidence in existence which was not considered by the appellate court and which is likely to have altered the final decision if this evidence had be (sic) introduced.

Appellate Court Decisions

Shannon King vs. Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin, Oneida Housing Authority. Docket No. 10-AC-013, November 18, 2010. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Linda Cornelius, Lois Powless, Winnifred L. Thomas and Jennifer Webster presiding. This case involved the default judgment issued on June 24, 2010 to Appellant, Shannon King, Trial Court Docket No. 10-TC-131 and affirmed on July 1, 2010 for failure to appear at a pre-trial hearing on June 17, 2010. Ms. King appealed, asserting she was not formally noticed of the hearing date.

Evidence presented indicated on May 20, 2010 Ms. King signed for Certified notice of summons to appear. Trial Court default judgment upheld.

Department of Public Works, Kevin Rentmeester vs. Patrick Madrid. Docket No. 10-AC-007, November 23, 2010. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Anita F. Barber, Lois Powless, Winnifred L. Thomas and Jennifer Webster presiding. This case was an appeal of an Oneida Personnel Commission decision which had reversed the termination of Respondent, Patrick Madrid based on procedural irregularities and the employer's failure to address the violation in a timely manner. Mr. Madrid was terminated for being in violation of Oneida's Vehicle Driver Certification Policy after his driver's license was revoked after receiving a citation for Operating While Intoxicated, 3rd Offense. Mr. Madrid appealed asserting while hired as an Electrician, he had been re-assigned into the HVAC area which did not require a valid drivers license. It was determined this "re-assignment" had not been formally completed thru the Human Resources Department and was normal practice within the DPW department. It was determined the Disciplinary Action form did not list the time, date or specific policy section under which action was taken or lack of notice to Mr, Madrid. Mr. Madrid was out of compliance with the Tribe's Vehicle Drivers Certification Policy. The Personnel Commission decision overturned, termination upheld.

Oneida Tribal School, Sharon Mousseau, Superintendent vs. John Beaulieu. Docket No. 10-AC-022, December 9, 2010. Judicial Officers Winnifred L. Thomas, Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless, Jennifer Webster and Stanley R. Webster presiding. This case was an appeal by Sharon Mousseau, Superintendent of the Oneida Tribal School, of an employment decision issued by the Oneida Tribal School MOA Appeal Panel. Ms. Mousseau filed a timely appeal on October 5, 2010. On October 26, 2010, the Oneida Nation School Board moved to intervene and filed a Memorandum in Support. On November 4, 2010, Ms Mousseau's attorney filed the Appellant's Brief. On November 5, 2010, Ms. Mousseau filed a letter stating she wished to withdraw from the appeal and does not wish to proceed. Motion to Dismiss granted.

O-Tech Solutions, LLC, Mr. Curtis Danforth vs. Oneida Bingo & Casino, Oneida Indian Preference Department. Docket No. 10-AC-017, December 10, 2010. Judicial Officers Winnifred L. Thomas, Pro Tem, Linda Cornelius, Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless and Stanley R. Webster presiding. This is an appeal of a dismissal of Oneida Tribal Judicial System, Trial Court, Docket No. 10-TC-168 which involved an alleged violation of the Oneida Indian Preference Law. Appellant, O-Tech Solutions, LCC, contends Respondent, Oneida Bingo & Casino and the Oneida Indian Preference Department erroneously denied Appellant's opportunity to bid for a surveillance system contract at the Casino. The Oneida Trial Court dismissed this case on August 16, 2010. The Appellant failed to persuade the Appellate Court. The Appellate Court upheld the Trial Court's decision.

Trial Court Decisions

Ana Ramirez-Barton vs. Dale Wheelock, Oneida Housing Authority. . Docket No. 10-TC-192, October 6, 2010. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Sandra Skenadore and Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This case involved a request for Temporary Restraining Order for an Eviction. Petitioner argued according to the NAHASDA rules, a person cannot be evicted before the end of the lease without "good cause". This means you cannot be evicted from tribal housing in the middle of the lease unless there are serious or repeated violations of the terms or conditions of the lease, such as continued failure to pay your rent. Respondent claims according to the OHA Admissions and Occupancy eligibility, "I. Enrollment Qualification: A minimum of one person in the household must be an enrolled, or eligible to be enrolled, member of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin". Respondent contends according to his Exhibit #1, Ana Barton signed an acknowledgement that she is not an enrolled Oneida Tribal Member and, in the event that the enrolled tribal member departs the premises for whatever reason, she must vacate the premises within (30) days after said tribal member's departure. The Court upheld Respondent's eviction notice to Petitioner to vacate premises by October 31, 2010.

Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin, Oneida Housing Authority vs. Evelyn Elm Docket No. 10-TC-101, October 29, 2010. Judicial Officers Stanley R. Webster, Sandra L. Skenadore and Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This case arose as a result of the Bain Petition GTC meeting held in December of 2006 and correspondence from Kevin Fitzgibbons, HUD/ONAP questioning information contained in the FY2006 Audit of the Oneida Housing Authority.

The Oneida Housing Authority claimed Ms. Elm committed violations of OHA travel policies and procedures during her term as a member of the OHA Board of Commissioners from 2005-2007 and is seeking to recover alleged overpayments of travel and per diem reimbursement made to Respondent Evelyn Elm in the amount of $4,776.93. The court found that while Ms. Elm may not have been directly at fault for the excessive overpayment, she did receive and accept the overpayment an incurred personal expenses above that allowed by OHA travel regulations. The court finds the Respondent owes the Oneida Housing Authority $3,592.62.

Debra Danforth vs. Oneida Tribe of Indians of WI, et al, Lloyd Powless, Assistant General Manager, Deborah Thundercloud, General Manager, Barbara Kolitsch, Interim Area Manager Human Resources, Oneida Business Committee, Initiative One Consultant, Tracy Felmer, COO, Initiative One Consultant, Dr. Fred Johnson, CEO. Docket No. 10-TC-195, October 26, 2010. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Pro Tem Gerald Cornelius, Pro Tem Robert Miller presiding. Petitioner was requesting a temporary restraining order against Respondents to cease and desist her termination until a full investigation can be conducted. Petitioner's case failed to meet the standard for a temporary restraining order in accordance with Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 31(B). Petitioner's facts must be specific and show that if a temporary restraining order is not given it will then result in immediate and irreparable harm, loss or damage will result. This Court has never intervened in an employment case in these circumstances. If Petitioner is terminated, there is a well-established process for adjudicating the validity and legality of the employer's action. At this point, Petitioner's case can not be accepted for review and it was dismissed. The court cited 04-TC-097 Metoxen v Oneida Health Center, 01-11-2005.

Oneida Housing Authority vs. Jennifer Hill. Docket No. 09-TC-135, November 8, 2010. Judicial Officers Leland Wigg-Ninham, Sandra Skenadore and Stanley R. Webster presiding. This was a case out of the Oneida Housing Authority seeking to recover alleged overpayments of travel and per diem reimbursement made to Respondent Jennifer Hill. Respondent claimed that all her trainings were approved by the Oneida Housing Authority and claims there were no personnel policies for the travel for Oneida housing Authority Board Members. Furthermore, the Respondent does not agree with the accounting records submitted by the Petitioner. The Court found, the Oneida Housing Authority Tribal Travel Ordinance, does apply to the Respondent. The court found that the preponderance of the evidence favored the Petitioner. The court finds the Respondent owes the Petitioner, $5,185.83.

Oneida Housing Authority vs. Kathleen Stevens. Docket No. 10-TC-027, November 10, 2010. Judicial Officers Leland Wigg-Ninham, Sandra Skenadore and Stanley R. Webster presiding. This case arose out of the Oneida Housing Authority seeking to recover alleged overpayments of travel and per diem reimbursement made to Respondent Kathleen Stevens.

Respondent claims she does not agree with the accounting records submitted by the Petitioner. Respondent further claims that she was told by an Oneida Housing Authority Staff person that she did not have to keep her receipts for her travel, hotel and per diem. Finally, the Respondent claims she is not responsible for the charges on the Oneida Housing Authority credit cards. The court found in favor of the Petitioner by the preponderance of the evidence submitted by the Petitioner and that the Oneida Tribal Housing Authority Travel Ordinance does apply to the Respondent. The court finds the Respondent owes the Oneida Housing Authority $1,513.54.

Division of Land Management vs. Matthew Ellis. Docket No. 10-TC-140, November 12, 2010. Judicial Officers Jean M. Webster, Mary Adams and Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This case arose as a request for a money judgment based on contractual obligations arising from an Agricultural Lease between the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin, Division of Land Management and Respondent, Matthew Ellis. The Tribe alleged Respondent failed to make lease payments as required under the lease. Petitioner requested a money judgment against the Respondent in the amount of $8,936.40 for unpaid rental payment. Respondent's representative presented the following issues; how trust land impacts the leasing practices; not being afforded the opportunity to present a business plan; a payment plan; and only given a one year lease at a time. As outlined in the Division of Land Management Standard Operating Procedures for Due Process, the Respondent was provided three certified written notices regarding the Respondent's failure to make rental payments. The third and final notice provided notice to the Respondent that the lease would be forward to the Land Commission meeting on April 12, 2010 requesting the Division of Land Management be authorized to terminate the lease and provide a 30-day notice to vacate the premises. Furthermore, the Law Office be authorized to pursue a money judgment. The options were to make payment bringing the account current (paid in full) or make payment arrangements which included signing a Lease Agreement to Cure Default. Respondent failed to bring the account current and signing the Lease Agreement. Petitioner's request for a Money Judgment was granted and this case was dismissed with prejudice.

Oscar S. Schuyler vs. Deanna Lee Stevens. Docket No. 10-DI-001, December 23, 2010. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Jean M. Webster and Stanley R. Webster presiding. This is a divorce action. All of the requirements for the Court to grant a divorce under Sec. 72.8-2(b) have been met. The Court found the marriage as irretrievably broken. The 120-day waiting period has expired. The Court granted the divorce and that it is effective immediately. Pursuant to Sec. 72.9-5(d), neither party may re-marry for six months.

Neither side budging in Wisconsin union fight

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

MADISON, Wisconsin (AP) ~ Republican backers of the Wisconsin governor's plan to eliminate collective bargaining rights for most public employees are trying to move the explosive proposal closer to reality, even as Democratic lawmakers remained on the run and protesters filled the halls of the Capitol for a second week.

The dispute in the Midwestern state is being watched across America because if Republican Gov. Scott Walker prevails in Wisconsin, other conservative Republican governors may try to go after powerful public employee unions as part of their budget-cutting policies.

The Republican-controlled Assembly planned to debate and possibly vote on the measure Tuesday, but Democrats said they would offer more than 100 amendments in an attempt to improve the bill or at least drag it out in the hopes concessions will be made.

Things are even more chaotic in the Senate, where Democrats have halted the measure with a dramatic decision not to show up since Thursday. That has left Republicans, who control the chamber, one vote shy of the quorum needed to take up the plan.

Republicans planned to forge ahead with other business Tuesday, including a resolution honoring local football team the Green Bay Packers for winning the Super Bowl and a bill extending tax breaks to dairy farmers. Those bills have bipartisan support, but Senate Majority Leader Scott Fitzgerald has tried to put pressure on Democrats by threatening to take up more controversial matters.

Defeating the Wisconsin bill and others like it is crucial for public-sector unions, an important part of the Democratic Party base. President Barack Obama and other Democrats will need the strong support of unions in the 2012 elections - especially in key swing states like Wisconsin - to counter a huge influx of corporate funds allowed under a Supreme Court decision last year.

The high-stakes showdown in Wisconsin has riveted the nation and led to ongoing public protests that drew a high of 68,000 people on Saturday. Neither Republicans nor Democrats are budging: Walker says he won't negotiate, and the 14 missing Senate Democrats say they won't return until he does.

Public employees have said they would agree to concessions Walker wants that would amount to an 8 percent pay cut on average, but they want to retain their collective bargaining rights. One Republican senator also has floated an alternative that would make the elimination of those rights temporary.

Walker has repeatedly rejected both offers, saying local governments and school districts can't be hamstrung by the often lengthy collective bargaining process. He says they need to have more flexibility to deal with up to $1 billion in cuts he will propose in his budget next week and into the future.

On Tuesday, Walker warned that state employees could start receiving layoff notices as early as next week if the bill isn't passed soon. Walker said in a statement to The Associated Press that the layoffs wouldn't take effect immediately. He didn't say which workers would be targeted but he has repeatedly warned that up to 1,500 workers could lose their jobs by July if his proposal isn't passed.

"Hopefully we don't get to that point," Walker said.

As the Senate Democrats have stayed away, Republicans have accused them of sidestepping their jobs. Fitzgerald said he may move ahead Tuesday with some contentious issues, such as a Republican-backed proposal requiring voters to show photo identification at the polls.

"You have shut down the people's government, and that is not acceptable," Fitzgerald said to Democrats during a brief meeting Monday setting the Senate's agenda for Tuesday. Two Democratic senators participated in the meeting by phone.

Democrats counter that Walker could compromise and put an end to the stalemate.

"It's right in front of the governor," Miller said. "He just needs to pick it up and allow us to move on. ... This is a no-brainer."

As Walker spoke under heavy guard at a late Monday afternoon news conference inside his conference room, thousands of protesters could be heard through the doors blowing whistles, banging on drums and chanting "Scott Walker has got to go!"

Oneida citizen Sylvia Cornelius traveled to Madison, Wisc. with fellow students in her University of Wisconsin-Green Bay masters class to check out the ongoing demonstration taking place to protest Gov. Scott Walker's plan to end collective bargaining for most public employees.

"We didn't know how big it was going to be," said Cornelius who joined a crowd of approximately 70,000 on Saturday, February 19. "My first concern was 'are we going to get trampled?'"

However, Cornelius stated she was amazed at how calm most of the protesters were.

"Even though they were there for their livelihood, they weren't angry ... It was a very peaceful protest, that really struck me," she said.

Cornelius was neutral before going to the capital, but then sided with the public workers.

"They're not willing to give up their collective bargaining rights. They're making a concession, it's money out of their pockets, and the governor won't listen," she said.

Oneida Seven Generations Corporation

P O Box 257, Oneida, WI 54155 • Phone: 920-347-0500 Fax: 920-347-0504

Dear Oneida Tribal member,
Over the past few months, Oneida Seven Generations Corporation has strived to provide the public, both tribal and non-tribal, with accurate information about the proposed renewable energy project. While we were awaiting a Department of Energy environmental assessment of the Ashwaubenon site to be completed, we were made aware of a number of different parcels of land in other locations that might be even better suited for the project. As a result, we have decided to pursue locating the facility on a site in the City of Green Bay. This is a business decision based on several factors:

- It makes economic sense
- It is a good location
- We have a positive working relationship with the City of Green Bay

While we respectfully listened to those who did not want the facility located in Ashwaubenon, it was not a major factor in our decision. OSGC has to do what makes business sense and generates revenues for the Oneida Nation. This new site offers us the best opportunity to be successful.

The site is on the city's far northwest side in a remote area; removed from residential neighborhoods. It is surrounded by a city dump site, a dredge material dump site, several construction firms and I-43. It is also close to transmission lines, which is an important consideration. The site, which does not need rezoning, will require a conditional use permit from the City, which we are in the process of obtaining. We have had great cooperation and support from the City, and it is good to be working positively and cooperatively with an entity that understands the many benefits of a renewable energy facility.

As we move forward, we will continue to keep you informed through the Kalihwisaks. More than 100 elders, parents, children uprooted after fire ravages homes on Yakama Indian Reservation

By Darla C. Leslie
Yakama Nation Review

Community seeks support for survivors

The Yakama Nation is seeking help and support to aid the survivors of a wildfire that destroyed 20 homes, burned parts of several more, and displaced over one hundred people from the small town of White Swan, Wash., in the heart of the reservation in central Washington state.

In an open letter dated Wednesday, Feb. 16, Yakama Tribal Council Chairman Harry Smiskin wrote of the need for outside assistance from the United States and other governments to help in the care for the displaced and the immediate cleanup in White Swan. The Yakama Nation has been in a state of emergency since the fire began in the afternoon on Saturday, Feb. 12. The Yakama Nation estimates the cost of rebuilding is at least $4 million, and with other emerging environmental concerns, that sum will only increase.

"We are grateful for the miracle that everyone got out alive, including the people who ran into the street on bare feet as their homes went up in flames, and the babies, the elders and three people with profound disabilities who all survived because the community pulled together," Chairman Smiskin said. "We cannot overlook that blessing as we turn to the difficult work ahead of getting people securely housed for as long as it takes to clean up and rebuild a beautiful White Swan."

A chimney fire is believed to have started in one home and quickly spread by wind and 50-mph gusts that carried the fire from house to house, down a dry, wooded creek bed and then to more distant homes. The vibrant town of White Swan is devastated by the damage to a total of 24 homes, including some multi-family residences, and destruction of other property including cars, bicycles and all personal belongings, for many. Now members of this tight-knit Yakama community are scattered across the large reservation, some staying with family and others housed in motels.

Few of those whose houses burned could afford homeowner's insurance, and few have savings to fall back upon, making recovery of families and housing in this tribe of 10,000 even more challenging, said Chairman Smiskin. In his letter, Chairman Smiskin states a request for the following kinds of help:

Skilled volunteers who can assist in cleanup, including certified asbestos remediation experts, heavy equipment operators and home builders;

Donations of money, clothes, food and other household goods, including diapers and supplies for babies and children;

Temporary housing for displaced people, and assistance with rebuilding the destroyed houses, a responsibility that the Yakama Nation has undertaken for the victims of the fire.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency is expected to bring 10 or 12 trailers to the reservation, which is about half the number of the Yakama Nation's 22 displaced households. It and other governments, including Washington state, have committed to building strong and lasting relationships with Yakama, and now in the face of disaster the Yakama Nation calls on these relations for help.

Chairman Smiskin states: "These are lands that the United State government holds in trust for Indian people and we hope that the Federal government in the form of the U.S. Congress and the various agencies will respond as they have to other disasters. We believe that more homes have been destroyed by this fire than on any Indian reservation in the history of this country."

Complicating the cleanup, many of the homes were built in the era when asbestos was commonly used in insulation, drywall and floors. Now, Chairman Smiskin said, "the mere potential presence of asbestos among the ashes and debris now littering White Swan presents a serious, time-consuming and expensive environmental dilemma."

In the immediate term, the Nation is worried about getting safe housing and collecting money, food, clothing and other essentials for those who lost their homes or are displaced until cleanup and repair can occur. One of the most pressing needs is for diapers, formula, bottles, baby food, clothing, bedding and other baby supplies. The Indian Health Service opened after the weekend fire to replace medicines for survivors, but it will take far more to help the displaced people for the months or years that it takes to rebuild White Swan.

Ten-year-old Loralei Eli stands with her siblings surveying the damage to her aunt Georgi Ike's house that burned in a wildland fire that swept through White Swan, Wash. on Feb. 12, 2011.

While the Yakama Nation, its people and its neighbors have responded over the past few days with open hands and hearts, the needs in the short term and the long term are great. The Yakama Nation looks to the United States to uphold its trust responsibility, and to the generosity of the American people to support those affected by this disaster on Yakama lands.

In addition to the local businesses and centers that are accepting donations, the Yakama Nation has set up the following ways for people across the country to contribute to the community's recovery:

The White Swan Fire Relief Fund at Bank of America, with donations accepted at branches nationwide.

Donations also can be made at the Toppenish Armory, 326 S. Division St., Toppenish, WA 98948.

Donations can be mailed to Yakama Nation CFO Henry Roy, P.O. Box 151, Toppenish, WA 98948.

Feds kill Catskill casino proposal by Indian tribe

By Micheal Gormley
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) ~ The U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs on Friday rejected a proposal to build a Native American casino within driving distance of New York City in the storied Catskill mountains.

The decision ends the effort by the Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohican Indians in Wisconsin to open a casino in the long economically depressed area, once a destination for top celebrities at world-class resorts in what was known as the Borscht Belt.

The proposal was made in the waning days of former New York Gov. David Paterson's administration last year as a way to bring much-needed jobs to the area and revenue to the state. But state and federal officials gave it long odds in recent weeks. The effort sought to combine two complex and usually separate issues - a casino application and settlement of ancestral land claims - in a novel legal approach.

"It is disheartening that the U.S. Department of the Interior has done an 11th-hour about-face by failing to support and finalize these agreements," said Kimberly Vele, president of the Stockbridge-Munsee Band. "While we believe the department's rationale is weak, we are committed to resolving the issues."

She tribe said the project would have generated $925 million a year in economic activity and ``removed a cloud over thousands of acres'' in central New York state while creating a world-class casino creating thousands of jobs and millions of dollars in annual payments to the local county.

"This project would have created jobs and economic development in a region that desperately needs it, but it's not the end of the line," said U.S. Sen. Charles Schumer, a New York Democrat who supported the effort. "I will continue to work with local leaders and the state to pursue all available options."

The Oneida Indian Nation, which is based in the central New York region where the Stockbridge-Munsee claimed territory, applauded the decision.

"The Stockbridge-Munsee have no legitimate claims to the lands of New York," said Oneida Nation Representative Ray Halbritter. "The process was always destined to fail.

"The elected officials that tried to push this deal through did a disservice to all people in New York by attempting to rewrite history to fit their narrow political interests," Halbritter said in a clear jab at Paterson, the former Democratic governor.

Officials in the Catskills turned to Indian tribes after efforts aimed at amending the state constitution to legalize casino gambling failed. Those efforts suffered a major blow in 2008 when the Bush administration's Department of Interior rejected plans for separate Catskill casinos involving the St. Regis Mohawks of northern New York and the Stockbridge-Munsee. The federal government cited the great distance between the two tribes' reservations and the casino sites.

So the Stockbridge-Munsee tried to merge its land claim and the casino effort, but it was met with great opposition by the Oneidas, who have a world-class casino in central New York, and by racetracks that operate video slot machine centers, which also provide the state with a cut of the proceeds.

"This is a battle for everybody," said Bennett Liebman, executive director of the Government Law Center at Albany Law School, "and part of it is to block and part of it is to put yourself in a position where you can become fully operative commercial casinos."

that it can help eligible Native Americans living in Green Bay.

The food packages consist of a variety of fresh and packaged vegetables, fruits, meats, pasta, and other staples.

"I believe we have a very good food package; they're nutritional, they're healthy, they're fresh."

Oneida Food Distribution helps approximately 400 clients a month. Lately, many people have been choosing the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) over food distribution because it issues an Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) card that can be used at grocery stores. However, Miller believes Oneida Food Distribution has a few advantages over SNAP.

"A lot of elderly, a lot of disabled that we service benefit from our program because we offer delivery services to those individuals who qualify for it," said Miller. "In the winter they can't get out, and you don't want them out in the weather."

Another advantage is that Oneida Food Distribution attempts to have a one day turn around for applying and receiving services.

"If you come in here and you have an emergency and you qualify, we'll get you done in the same day. We'll get you groceries and get you on your way," he said.

Finally, while some people may think of the limited food selection as a disadvantage, Miller sees an opportunity for individuals to make better choices.

"Our program is geared primarily towards (nutrition). They heavily feature the food pyramid," he said.

Oneida Food Distribution also offers nutritional education classes and recipes.

"We're trying to make inroads with the younger generation to get them to understand the importance of a longer life, healthy living and values that make their life much easier, because if you've got your health, you've got pretty much a lot of good things going for you," he said.

As part of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) disaster assistance, Oneida Food Distribution warehouses a 90 day supply of food in case of emergencies such as storms or floods.

March Lectures at College of Menominee Nation

Featuring… Robert W. Wheeler, Biographer of Olympian Jim Thorpe

Special to Kalihwisaks

The College of Menominee Nation is presenting a series of lectures at the Green Bay and Keshena campuses by Jim Thorpe biographer, Robert W. Wheeler. The public is invited to hear the author discussing Thorpe's life and sports accomplishments at these sessions:

- Green Bay Campus – Tuesday, March 15 from 1:30 to 2:50 P.M. and from 6 to 7 P.M. at the College of Menominee Nation campus, 2733 S. Ridge Road, Green Bay (parking off Allied Street cul de sac)
- Keshena Campus – Wednesday, March 16 – from 6 to 7 P.M. at the Cultural Learning Center. State Hwy 47/55 seven miles north of Shawano (first right after reservation boundary)

Wheeler hitchhiked over 12,000 miles to interview Jim Thorpe's contemporaries for his book which was dubbed the "definitive volume on Thorpe" by NFL's Pro Magazine. The book, Jim Thorpe: World Greatest Athlete, was first published in 1975 and is now in its 21st edition. Wheeler interviewed Dwight D. Eisenhower, Jack Dempsey, Burt Lancaster, Thorpe's children and his teammates from the Carlisle Indian School. The author, who will share wonderful stories about the athlete and many of his contemporaries, is to this day the only author allowed access to Thorpe's private papers.

Reviews of the book over the years have praised the meticulous research and Wheeler's sympathetic and understanding approach to Thorpe's life. Rose Robinson, Hopi, (The Exchange: a Journal of Native American Philanthropic News) has noted that, "The importance of Wheeler's work is that he was able, before their deaths, to talk to people who had known Thorpe from childhood to the end of his life. Biographies of this depth are practically nonexistent." LaVonna Ann Weller, Caddo, and formerly of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said: "Jim Thorpe: World's Greatest Athlete deserves the accolade as Thorpe's best biography. In my estimation, it should be required reading for every American student." And the late Dick Schaap, author and ABC-TV and Radio sports commentator, called Wheeler "Jim Thorpe's Boswell."

In 1982, Wheeler and his wife, Dr. Florence Ridlon, co-founded the Jim Thorpe Foundation. Armed with the information gathered for the Jim Thorpe biography and additional research findings from the Library of Congress, they set out to achieve the restoration of Jim Thorpe's Olympic honors, a goal which eluded others for 70 years. In 1982, the Executive Board of the International Olympic Committee voted unanimously to return Thorpe's awards. In January, 1983, Thorpe's children were presented with duplicate gold medals by the President of the International Olympic Committee. This reversal of their 70-year position was credited to the efforts of the Jim Thorpe Foundation.

In a 1982 issue of Sports Illustrated's Jack McCallum wrote: "Two people deserve primary credit for restoring Jim Thorpe's amateur status: author-historian Robert W. Wheeler and arm twister William E. Simon, President of the United States Olympic Committee." Another writer, Richard Levin of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner noted in 1982 that Thorpe's children might never have been awarded their father's medals had it not been for the detective work of Florence Ridlon since it was she who uncovered a technicality in the rules of the 1912 Olympics that rendered Thorpe's disqualification invalid and illegal. Levin wrote, "Compassion, a sense of justice, a change of heart or whatever you want to call it, probably had little bearing on the International Olympic Committee's decision to give the medals back to what is left of Jim Thorpe."

The visit by Wheeler is sponsored by the CMN library.

Scholarships... & Internships...

American Indian Journalism Institute

An academic, scholarship and newsroom internship program of the Freedom Forum

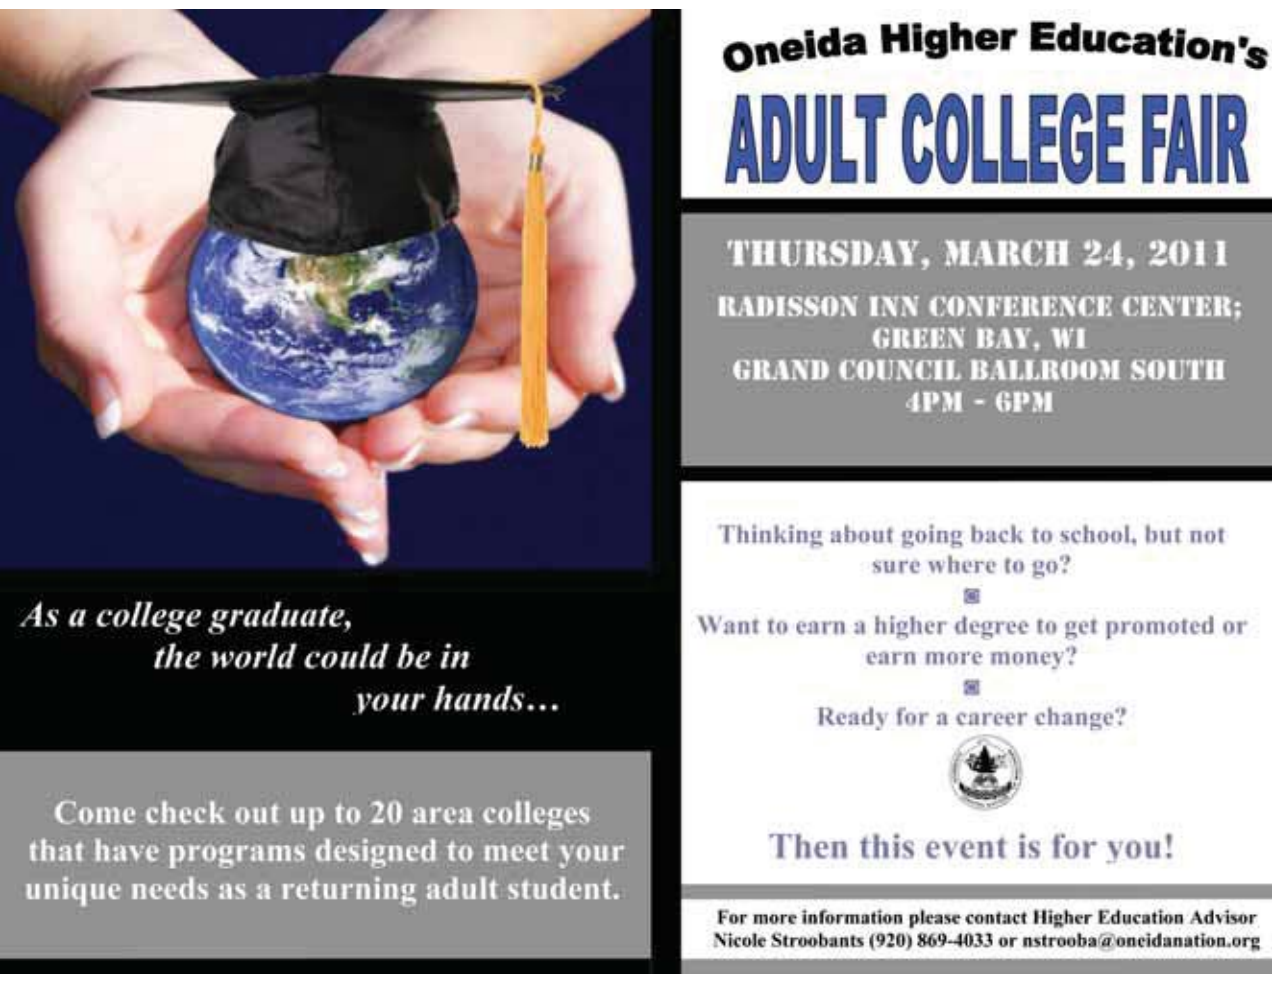
Submit by postmark deadline March 1, 2011

The American Indian Journalism Institute offers a concentrated 10-day journalism course and paid summer internships for college students. The institute is funded by the Freedom Forum, an organization promoting employment diversity in America's newsrooms. AIJI students may be eligible to earn three hours of college credit if they successfully complete the class, which is taught at the Freedom Forum's Al Neuharth Media Center on The University of South Dakota's Vermillion campus.

Students attend AIJI for free and receive other financial assistance. Applications are welcome from any Native American college student hoping to become a journalist.

In its first 10 years, more than 170 students have completed the program.

Application forms are available at www.freedomforumdiversity.org. Preference will be given to those applicants interested in journalism careers and who show the greatest potential.



AIJI graduates compete for six-week paid internships as reporters, copy editors, photographers and multimedia journalists in daily newsrooms and with The Associated Press. The internships begin about July 1.

Applicants must submit a signed application and:

- A written essay (at least 500 words). The essay will be read for content and to determine ability to think and to express thoughts and ideas cogently. The essay should be autobiographical, with an emphasis on interest in journalism and what the applicant hopes to accomplish through AIJI.
- A color headshot photo in JPEG format e-mailed to jharris@freedomforum.org
- Two letters of recommendation, preferably from teachers, work supervisors, former employers and members of the journalism community. (No letters from relatives.)
- A copy of a current college transcript.
- A resume or year-by-year listing of education and work history.
- Four to six work samples of any writing/editing/photography/Web experience or classroom assignments.

For more information and to download the application, please visit the following page:

Finish GED this year

The GED (General Educational Development Testing Service) will be introducing a new series of exams on January 1, 2012. GED candidate candidates who have begun testing under the current series are being urged to try to pass all five tests by December 31, 2011, otherwise, they will be required to re-take the entire new exam series.

If you or someone you know has begun GED tests now is the time to complete. It would be a good idea to review before testing if you have not tested or studied in a while. The ONCEC is open to help you. Our hours are 8 to 8 Monday through Thursday; 8 to 4:30 Friday; and 8 to 3 Saturday. Occasionally we have a day off so check our monthly calendar.

Notice of Availablity

Purpose:
The Oneida Tribe of Indians (Tribe) is proposing to construct an approximately 18,000 square foot addition to the existing casino located at 2020 Airport Road. The expansion will include a sports bar, food court, poker room, smoke shop, combined with other renovations. The project will be funded by the Tribe. The intent is to improve the economy of the Tribe and increase short and long term employment opportunities.

No federal involvement or action has been identified for this project.

An Environmental Assessment (EA) was prepared by the Oneida Tribe (Tribe) in 1992 for the construction of a gaming facility at 2020 Airport Road. A finding of no significant impact (FONSI) was made by the Bureau of Indian Affairs in March 1993. This addendum for the proposed expansion of the existing casino is in compliance with the Oneida Environmental Policy Act (2-13-93B) and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). The EA and addendum contain project information, affected environment, project alternatives, consequences, and consultation.

Location: The proposed expansion is planned to connect on the east end of the existing casino located at 2020 Airport Drive, on the Oneida Reservation, located in Township 23 North, Range 20 East, Section 6, Brown County, WI.

Alternatives: Preferred Alternative: The preferred alternative is for the Tribe to construct an addition of approximately 18,000 square feet on the east side of the existing. It will include a sports bar, food court, poker room, smoke shop, and other renovations. The addition will be located on what is currently a flat paved valet parking area; approximately 24 parking spaces will be removed. The valet parking will be moved to the south side of the building. No additional parking areas will be added with this proposal. Construction will occur on previously disturbed areas. The area of impervious surface is not expected to increase. Construction is planned for Summer 2012.
The applicant expects 20-25 short term jobs during the construction activities and 25-30 full time jobs resulting from the expanded services.

No Action Alternative: To not construct the proposed expansion to the existing Oneida Main Casino location. This will not assist in the goal of expanding gaming operations and improving the economy of the Oneida Nation.

Comments were requested from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service regarding possible impacts to threatened and endangered species, Oneida Cultural Heritage Department for possible impacts to culturally significant areas, and the Environmental Protection Agency for possible permitting needs regarding in-stream development

Comments and Availability: Interested parties may obtain copies of these documents from the address below. Comments regarding the proposed action may be submitted within 14 days of the date of this NOA. Notice of Availablity

Project Description:
The Oneida Tribe is proposing to remove some 1.75 million cubic yards of sand, silt, and clay from a 59.83 acre, tribally owned surface mine. Once the surface materials have been removed, the site will be reworked to form a fishing lake and recreation area for tribal members. The property is located in Outagamie County, north of Crook Road, west of County Highway U, in Township 23 North, Range 19 East, Section 16, in the Town of Oneida. It is two miles south of Central Oneida.

A draft environmental assessment (EA) has been prepared regarding this proposed action in compliance with the Oneida Environmental Policy (2-13-93B) and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). The draft EA contains project information, affected environment, project alternatives, and consultation letters.

Comments were requested from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service regarding possible impacts to threatened and endangered species, Oneida Cultural Heritage Department for possible impacts to historic properties, the Army Corps of Engineers for wetland concerns, the United States Environmental Protection Agency for permitting, and the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Air Management for diesel emissions. Recommendations from the above contacts will be followed, but no significant resource impacts are anticipated.

Need for Project: The Oneida community has requested improved fishing opportunities on the Oneida Reservation. Some funding has been provided for restoration of a fishery through compensation for the ecological damages caused by polychlorinated biphenyls (PCB) contamination of the Fox River and Bay of Green Bay. The former 59.83 acre Binkowski sand and gravel mine was chosen as the potential lake site. The site was mined for sand in the past and provides an opportunity for additional mining. Once the surface material has been removed, the site will be developed for a warm-water lake fishery and recreation area.

Alternatives: The PREFERRED alternative will be to remove approximately 1.75 million cubic yards of sand, silt, and clay from the site. The Mining Plan details suggest removal strategies and recommend the appropriate equipment for the operation. A plan for stockpiling is being developed to minimize material handling. Once a sufficient amount of surface material has been removed, the area will be developed as a warm-water fishing lake and recreation area. A local construction firm has received a 5-year contract for mining, dredging, and shaping of the site.

The NO-ACTION alternative does not move the tribe forward with the goal of providing recreational fishing opportunities. No further mining or reclamation of the site would pose a safety hazard and potential for illegal dumping.

Comments & Availability: Interested parties may obtain copies of these documents from the above address. Comments regarding the proposed action may also be submitted within 30 days of the date of this NOA. Contact Bill Koonz at (920) 869-4569 or write Oneida Environmental, Health & Safety Division, PO Box 365, Oneida, WI 54155 for additional information.

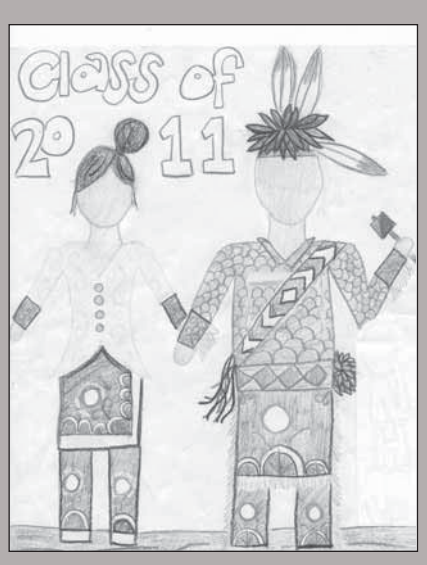
ONHS yearbook cover winners announced

Winners of the Annual ONHS Yearbook Cover Contest were announced by Art Teacher Becky Anderson.

All art students had to submit a cover and the covers were voted on by ONHS staff.

The winners were: First – Kalene Beechtree, $75. Second – Shanna Jourdan, $50. Third – Kanani Nunies, $25.



Anderson said that the covers this year were "so good, that all of them will be displayed somewhere in the yearbook."

Press skip on Paramore's Brand New Eyes

By Jade Doxtater and Thunderhawk Times Staff

Thunderhawk Times

Paramore is an American rock and roll band from Tennessee. The band was formed in 2004 and is made up of lead vocalist Hayley Williams, bassist Jeremy Davis, and guitarist Taylor York.

The group's 2005 debut album was All We Know is Falling. It's second album was Riot! Released in 2007, it went Platinum in the U.S. and Gold in 4 other countries.

The band's third album, Brand New Eyes, was released in 2009 and has exceeded sales of the other albums. This album is new music. It doesn't sound like anyone else. It's unique. Original.

I am not recommending that you listen to the band Paramore. I like the idea that I'm the only one who seems to listens to it.

What's happening at ONHS

By Joelle Thomas and Thunderhawk Times Staff

Thunderhawk Times

There has been a lot going on at ONHS this month.

Classes are having a competition for a pizza party, based on overall attendance. Something else exciting is happening: Andrew Bogut of the Milwaukee Bucks is supporting good attendance by giving away tickets for every student with perfect attendance for the month. If you qualify, you will actually get two tickets for free. One for the student and the other, paid for by the ONHS student council, for an adult.

All you need to do is be at school, and be on time. For those who aren't at school and those who are late, you are automatically disqualified.

On February 22, teachers Becky Nutt and Lynn Adrian took four students on a trip to Madison for the Junior Science Engineering and Humanities Symposium. Earlier in the month students also went to Lakeland College for the next step in the Science Fair.

On Monday, February 28, Lynn Adrian and Denis Gullickson will be taking twenty students skiing to Pine Mountain as an incentive for good work during the first semester.

We also had Parent-Teacher Conferences in early February.

It may be the shortest month, but there has been a lot happening.

Biodiesel project underway

By Jason Skenandore and Thunderhawks Times Staff

Thunderhawk Times

The use of vegetable oil as fuel in diesel engines is just about as old as the diesel engine. It's only recently that there has been an emphasis on using plant oils and animal fats as biodiesel fuel.

Biodiesel fuel is quickly becoming popular among people who are trying to replace the highly expensive petrol fuel. They are hoping to save money in gas as well as save the world from the pollution that is pushed into the air.

Through research they are finding many things that show biodiesel to be more useful than just saving money.

The ONHS science class has a project underway involving biodiesel fuels. Watch for the next few issues of Thunderhawk Times for updates on this project.

Our take on snow days and school closing

By Jo Jo Santiago and Thunderhawk Times Staff

On Monday, February 21, we had a snow day, just as most area schools did. With a big snowstorm on the way, many schools had already announced that Monday classes were canceled on Sunday night.

According to our handbook, the school is "closed during inclement weather by the School Administration, by their discretion if the weather conditions are such that it endangers the students' well being and safety."

The handbook outlines a plan of action put into effect "when it is necessary to call school off due to inclement weather or other justifiable conditions." 1. The decision to close will be made at the earliest possible time, utilizing all available information regarding conditions." 2. Advance notices will be given via the radio whereby parents will be informed so that they many make necessary measures.

The radio stations that are contacted are the most-listened to in the area. All areas TV stations are contacted. Usually, the school informs the radio and TV stations by 6:30 on the day of inclement weather. These days, a lot of people find out via the internet, even over their cell phones.

These same radio and TV stations are contacted if school is closed during the course of the school day.

With a foot of snow on Monday, most ONHS students said they slept in. Others said they had to get out and shovel, so they were up earlier than they wanted to be.

Junior Shanna Jourdan said she likes snow days because "We work hard and deserve a break once in awhile."

Freshman Billie John said, "On snow-days I usually sleep until noon to catch up on my sleep. I look forward to them by staying up late the day before."

Making up snow days is always a concern for students because it makes the school year longer. Usually making up snow days depends on how many there are in a year.

Billie said, "I don't think we will make this one up in June because the past one on February 21 was the first one we had this year."

Usually a certain number of snow days are "built into the calendar" said Principal Bob Ganka. So, if there aren't too many or any more, it shouldn't be a problem.for Thursday, January 10.

48th Annual Junior Science, Engineering and Humanities Symposium

By Thunderhaw Times Staff

Thunderhawk Times

It's a mouthful, but it is also a sign that exciting things are happening in the ONHS science department.

After school on Tuesday, February 22, ONHS teachers Becky Nutt and Lynn Adrian took four young ladies from school to the 48th Annual Junior Science, Engineering and Humanities Symposium at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Students going on the trip were Noelle Metoxen, Rachel Ninham, Allie Spruce, and Evyanna Ortega.

Nutt was excited about the trip because, she said, "For the first time we will have students presenting their science research in a poster session."

It looks like an action-packed two days with Student Visits to various science, engineering, and humanities sites scheduled already for Wednesday morning.

Wednesday afternoon was set aside for student presentations. In between, students got some recreation time and the chance to hear several key speakers, including science and engineering students from the university. There was also some time for recreational activities such as swimming at Madison's Lowell Center.

The ONHS group will return to school on Friday morning.

Myths vs. Facts: Renewable Energy Facilty: Part II

Oneida Seven Generations Corporation
P O Box 257, Oneida, WI 54155
Phone: 920-347-0500 Fax: 920-347-0504
www.osgc.net

There continues to be a considerable amount of misinformation circulating about the Oneida Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) Renewable Energy Facility. It's intended to scare and mislead people. We live here too and would not undertake a project that would be harmful to people or the environment. Our business philosophy maintains an eye toward the future, focused on sustainable growth for both our tribal economy and that of the surrounding area.

It's important to have a thorough understanding of what the project is and isn't. We hope you will find the following information helpful as you learn more about the facility. We have grouped the myths and responses to make it easier to find answers to your questions.

Transportation and Operations

Myth:
There will be 40 trucks per day coming into the facility

Fact: This is misleading.
There will be a maximum of 20 trucks coming to the facility every day. Yes, they do need to leave the facility as well, but it is inaccurate and misleading to say it's 40 loaded trucks per day. Currently, the proposed site has a daily traffic count of 10,000 vehicles.
Source: http://www.dot.wisconsin.gov/travel/counts/docs/brown/ashwaubenon2009.pdf

Myth:
There will be daily transportation of 150 tons of bio-waste though a dense population center. This waste will be sorted by hand, by one person in a biohazard suit, to search for toxic material.

Fact: This statement is false.
The waste that will come to the facility is Municipal Solid Waste (MSW); typical household waste. This is the same waste that goes to our landfills and is not a hazardous waste. Yes, the waste will be sorted to eliminate inappropriate materials (such as household paint, etc. that residents sometime throw into the garbage). Plant employees will not need to wear biohazard suits since there will be no toxic material brought to the plant.

Additionally, the plant will increase the rate of recycling by removing #1 and #2 plastics, aluminum and various other metals. Approximately, 8% of all MSW is still recyclable.

Myth:
Leaching of toxic metals cadmium, lead, and mercury occurs more rapidly at low pH, and contaminates groundwater.

Fact: This is false and misleading.
The proposed Pyrolysis System is a completely closed loop system so all gases are contained. Likewise, all wastewater will be contained. It will also be filtered to a level that it can be disposed in a public sewer, just like dish, shower and sink water.

Myth:
The facility will generate toxic ash (one ton of ash for every four tons of waste).

Fact: This is false.
The fact is, for every 10 tons of waste, one ton of a byproduct called carbon ash (not toxic ash) will be produced. The byproduct is completely inert and the remainder can be, and is used in numerous industries.

Myth:
The process is very inflexible and stifles innovation

Fact: This is false.
Pyrolysis gasification is an alternative to incineration, a better and cleaner method of creating renewable energy; therefore it stimulates innovation and opens the door to advancing current waste-to-energy technologies.

Myth:
The number of inbound trucks is will range from 25-48 trucks during business hours Monday through Thursday, and 75-144 trucks during Friday business hours to stock up for weekends.

Fact: This is false.
The maximum number of inbound trucks will be 25 per day. The claim that there will be 75 to144 trucks on Fridays is false and based on no data or actual information.
Simple Math:

- The facility will process 150/tons of MSW per day x 7 days a week = 1,050 tons/week.
- Maximum 20 trucks per day (Monday through Friday) x 13 ton average capacity = 260 tons/day x 5 days (Monday through Friday) = 1,300 tons/week
- Maximum of 20 trucks per day can supply more than enough MSW for the week in five days (Monday through Friday).

Myth:
The number of outbound trucks carrying the plant's toxic nano-particulate byproduct may range from 7 to 12 per day, Tuesday through Friday, and 21 to 36 trucks on Mondays to remove each weekend's accumulated byproduct.

The remainder is blown by prevailing winds over a distribution area that includes most of Brown County.

Fact: Both statements are false.
Again, this is speculation and conjecture which is not based on any factual information. The byproduct, Carbon Char (not toxic ash), will be shipped in sealed containers at an anticipated rate of one, to a maximum of three, trucks per day. The byproduct is completely inert and can be used in numerous industries.
Source:
"Yes, waste-to-energy ash is safe" (http://www.energyrecoverycouncil.org/faq)

The statement that the rest of the byproduct will be "blown away by prevailing winds," is false. It would be impossible considering the byproduct, as well as the waste and everything else in the plant, will be in a closed loop system at all times.

Community & Public

Myth:
Incineration is extremely unpopular with the public; so much so that the industry uses misleading terminology and names.

Fact: This is false and misleading.
Gasification is not incineration. Incineration is the burning of fuels in an oxygen-rich environment, where the waste material combusts and produces heat and carbon dioxide, along with a variety of other pollutants.
Gasification is the conversion of feedstocks into their simplest molecules: carbon monoxide, hydrogen and methane forming a syngas which then can be used for generating electricity or producing valuable products.
Source: http://www.gasification.org/page_1.asp?a=79

Pyrolysis is not incineration. Pyrolysis technology is different from conventional incineration. There are a number of noteworthy, additional differences between pyrolysis technology and conventional incineration.

First, pyrolysis technology is an endothermic reaction (absorbs heat) while combustion is an exothermic reaction (releases heat).

Secondly, pyrolysis occurs in the presence of an insignificant amount of oxygen."
Source: http://yosemite.epa.gov/r5/r5ard.nsf/2134f82000aa062c86257577004df4d7/7ea207b44e70abab862574c8006e223c/$FILE/kulp3.pdf

As for the assertion that the public is opposed to it; that is a generalized statement that cannot be factually supported. Arguments can be made to the contrary. Many believe, and science supports it, that this type of facility is safe and beneficial to the environment and community.

Myth
The facility won't get rid of landfills.

Fact: It has never been stated that the facility will eliminate landfills.
Oneida's renewable energy facility will be able to dispose of as much as 80% of local municipal solid waste that would otherwise be landfilled. The project's purpose is to extend life of current landfills so communities do not need to build new landfills in the future.

Myth:
It wastes valuable time (25 yrs. or more) to pay off massive capital investment costs involved with building an incinerator.

Fact: This statement is false.
Once again, OSGC is building a Pyrolysis System, not an incinerator, which solves two problems at once:
1. Producing electricity
2. Diverting waste from landfills and reducing emissions

Again, it is up to the private corporation (OSGC) to decide if the investment is worth it or not. OSGC believes it is a worthwhile investment from many perspectives.

Twenty-five years of disposing of waste, while generating electricity, is not a waste of time. According to the EPA, "A total of 230 million tons of MSW was generated in 1999." Most of this waste was land filled.

Sources: http://www.epa.gov/reg3wcmd/solidwastesummary.htm#waste
Waste-to-Energy Plants avoid methane emissions generated from Landfills:
"When a ton of solid municipal waste is delivered to a waste-to-energy facility, the methane that would have been generated if it were sent to a landfill is avoided

http://www.energyrecoverycouncil.org/userfiles/file/ERC_2010_Directory.pdf

Myth:
It is reckless to place a large, untried incinerator gasification demonstration project, that's the first system of its kind next to a large number of residential homes, churches and schools.

Fact: This opinion is not based on factual information.
This WTE project is not incineration based nor is it a first of its kind. The Pyrolysis Gasification units have been used successfully in the U.S. and around the world.

"Demonstration Project" means the project will serve as an example to be followed by other communities willing to reduce methane emissions from landfills and CO2 emissions from coal burning plants.

Myth:
WTE facilities are a burden in many ways:
- Plummeting property values
- Widespread air, soil & water contamination
- Adverse health impact
- Tax increases upon neighborhoods further from the facility to make up for tax revenues lost from properties rendered valueless
- Economic domino effect from chasing away business and residents due to the above.

Fact: These statements are false.
- There is no data indicating property values decreasing because of light manufacturing/industry nearby. This is clearly being used as a scare tactic.
- There will be no widespread air, soil or water contamination. All EPA regulations will be strictly followed. Any wastewater (the same as residents' sink and bath water) will be threaded and properly disposed.. This is clearly being used as a scare tactic. Please see the health and safety section of this document.
- There is no adverse health impact data found at any other Pyrolysis operating facilities throughout the US or the rest of the world. This is clearly being used as a scare tactic. Please see the health and safety section of this document.
- No data indicates there will be tax increases in the Village of Ashwaubenon because of this facility. This is clearly being used as a scare tactic.
- No business has identified its intent to vacate their properties, because of this facility. Once again, the Ashwaubenon Business Park includes Light Manufacturing. The land is zoned light industrial by Oneida. This is clearly being used as a scare tactic.

From 7B/Myths vs. Facts

Construction

Myth:
The builder has only built one other building; this is the second one.

Fact: This statement is false and unsupported..
Alliance Construction and Design is comprised of more than 20 building professionals with an average of 23 years of experience each; completing more than 100 projects in the past year and a half alone.

This is the first facility Alliance is building in partnership with a highly experienced engineering firm (ACTI: American Combustion Technologies Inc.) from California; a firm that has constructed other similar facilities. The building itself is a simple commercial structure which will look much like other offices on Packerland Drive. The technology will be installed and monitored by engineers from both ACTI and Alliance.

Regulatory & Legal

Myth:
OSGC has chosen to ignore the illegality of incinerators in the surrounding zoning by wrongly suggesting its incineration gasification scheme somehow fits with the clean corporate enterprises flourishing in Ashwaubenon corporate business park.

Fact: This statement is false.
OSGC is not building incineration facility. Gasification is not incineration.
Incineration is the burning of fuels in an oxygen-rich environment, where the waste material combusts and produces heat and carbon dioxide, along with a variety of other pollutants. Gasification is the conversion of feedstocks into their simplest molecules - carbon monoxide, hydrogen and methane forming a syngas which then can be used for generating electricity or producing valuable products.

Myth:
There is no identified agency currently guarantying oversight and enforcement of Clean Air Act and Clean Water Act violations of this site.

Fact: This is false.
This project is, and will continue to be, subject to EPA, DOE (Department of Energy) and BIA oversight as appropriate and as outlined in those organizations /agencies rules and regulations.

The EPA has regulatory jurisdiction for pre-construction air permitting of facilities that are considered 'major sources' – that is with potential air emissions greater than 250 tons per year (each pollutant) for facilities located on tribal lands. The current OSGC project includes equipment and process capacity that would result in air emissions lower than the 'major source' level. Because the project is not a major source, no pre-construction permit is required.

As for an environmental assessment (EA): An environmental assessment was conducted by an independent third party for OSGC and submitted to the BIA, which is currently reviewing the EA. In addition, the DOE is currently preparing its own EA as part of the NEPA process.

A permit for operation, called the Operating Permit, will be required by the EPA for the facility once it becomes operational. The permit application will be prepared and submitted prior to the start of operation. This ensures all Clean Air Act requirements are met.

In fact, in a December letter to the Village of Hobart, the EPA stated:
"The EPA is currently in the process of gathering information regarding this facility. Any permit issued by the EPA for such a project must ensure that the public health and welfare is protected pursuant to all Clean Air Act requirements."

ND House says UND must keep Fighting Sioux name

By Dale Wetzel
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) ~ Setting up a potential clash with the NCAA, the North Dakota House on Monday approved a bill that requires the University of North Dakota to keep its Fighting Sioux athletics nickname.

The university has been preparing to drop the nickname and its American Indian head logo this summer as part of a negotiated lawsuit settlement with the NCAA, which considers both to be hostile and abusive to American Indians.

House members voted 65-28 to approve legislation Monday that requires UND to keep the nickname and logo, and directs Attorney General Wayne Stenehjem to consider an antitrust lawsuit against the NCAA if any penalties result.

The bill now goes to the North Dakota Senate for its review. An NCAA spokeswoman, Gail Dent, declined to comment on the House vote.

Supporters of the measure argued that North Dakota's Board of Higher Education, in deciding to discard the nickname and logo, ignored strong public sentiment in favor of both. Opponents of the nickname and logo say they are racist and demeaning.

"Overwhelmingly, Native Americans and regular North Dakota citizens ... they said, we don't want the name to go away," said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Al Carlson, R-Fargo, the House majority leader. "Are we supposed to ignore it, and say, we don't have the authority to do that?"

Separately, representatives voted down two related bills that required UND to keep the nickname unless the members of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe voted to revoke permission for using it. Neither bill got more than eight votes in favor.

The tribe's governing council has approved several resolutions opposing the nickname, but it has never been the subject of a reservation vote. North Dakota's other major Sioux tribe, the Spirit Lake Sioux, endorsed the nickname and logo in an April 2009 referendum.

"If we keep the nickname, you get respect. If you change, you get ridicule," said Rep. Mike Schatz, R-New England. "A new nickname will make you the laughingstock of the conference, because you will have no will to stick to your tradition."

Opponents of Carlson's proposal said it would ignore years of review of the issue by the Board of Higher Education and UND that resulted in the decision to discard the nickname and logo.

"We will have decided that after five years of work on the part of the University of North Dakota's faculty, their staff, their students ...the higher education board and the attorney general, to name some – they're all wrong. They didn't get it," said Rep. Phillip Mueller, D-Valley City.

The NCAA declared the American Indian nicknames of more than a dozen colleges, including UND, to be "hostile and abusive" in 2005.

The state sued, and the two sides settled out of court in October 2007, with UND agreeing to retire the nickname if the school could not get the consent of the Spirit Lake and Standing Rock Sioux tribes to continue using it. If UND keeps the Fighting Sioux nickname, the school may be barred from hosting NCAA postseason tournaments.

Rep. Eliot Glassheim, D-Grand Forks, said the "dominant feeling" at UND was that "we do not want two more years of legal battles. We do not want a divided campus."

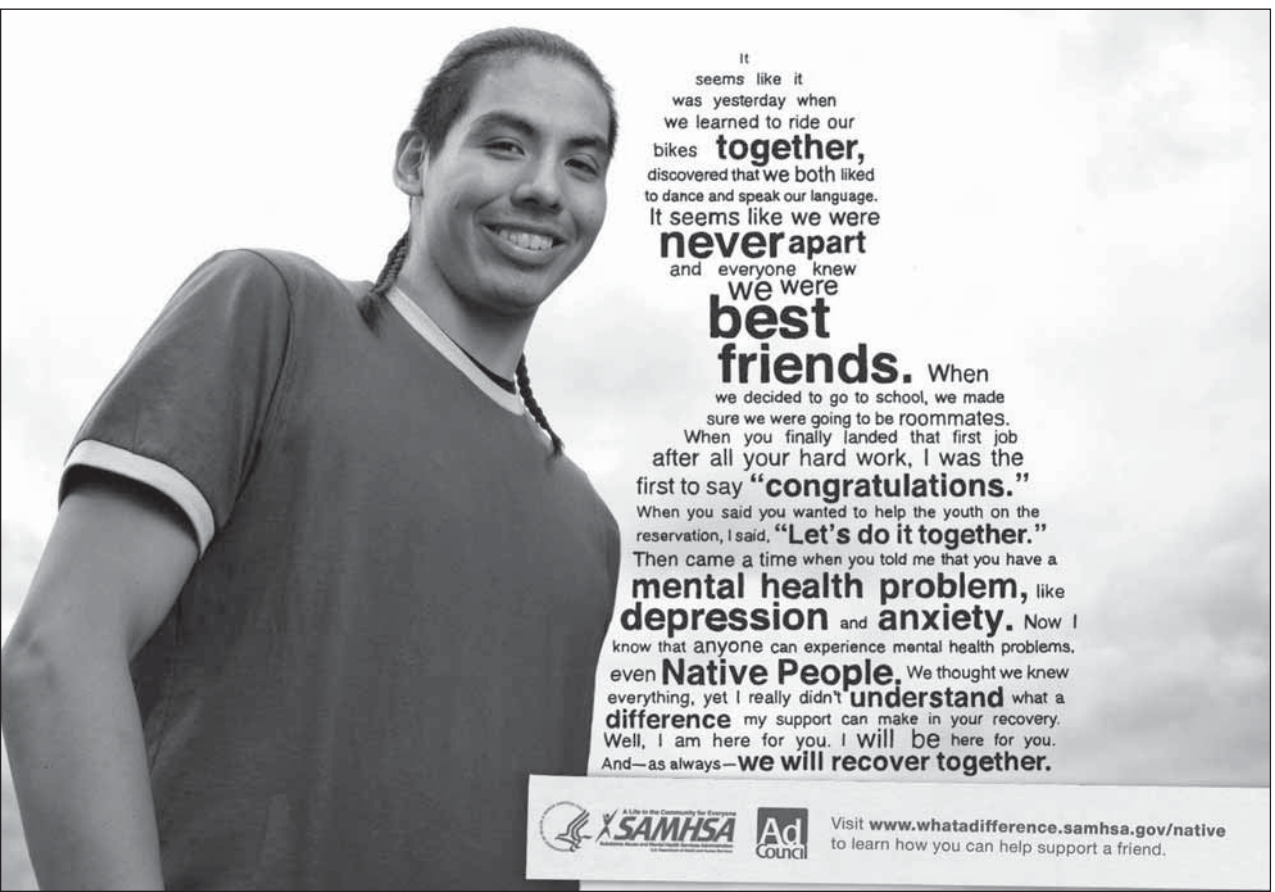
"I certainly wish we could keep the name and logo. They are strong and meaningful," Glassheim continued. "But we cannot keep the name and logo without dooming the University of North Dakota to never-ending controversy."

Echo Hawk Announces the BIE's Participation with PALA Challenge

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs Larry Echo Hawk announced today that the Bureau of Indian Education (BIE) schools will participate in the Presidential Active Lifestyle Award (PALA) Challenge inspired by the First Lady's Let's Move! initiative and commemorating the Let's Move! one year anniversary. PALA is a six-week long physical fitness challenge managed by the President's Council on Physical Fitness, Sports, & Nutrition (PCFSN) and is part of the First Lady's Let's Move! campaign to end childhood obesity within a generation. Levi Horn, a professional football player with the Chicago Bears, member of the Northern Cheyenne Tribe and representative of Nike's programs for Native American and Aboriginal communities, called Nike N7, will be the face of this program.

"I want to challenge every BIE school to join First Lady Michelle Obama in combating childhood obesity through the Presidential Active Lifestyle Award (PALA) and help meet the million PALA challenge goal," Echo Hawk said. "Obesity and related diseases affect our communities and children in disproportionate ways that need to be addressed immediately, and this challenge is a great step in the right direction to help change the health and quality of life for our children in Indian Country."

"As a Native American, with most of my family coming from the Northern Cheyenne Tribe, I've personally witnessed the effects of childhood obesity on my community," said Levi Horn. "I am encouraged by the efforts of the Bureau of Indian Education in fostering healthy lifestyles through the Presidential Active Lifestyle Award, and hope that my story will be an inspiration to native students around the country."



Today, obesity rates in Indian Country are higher than those of any other racial or ethnic group studied. Obesity is twice as common among four year old American Indian and Alaska Native children (31 percent) than among white (16 percent) or Asian (13 percent) children. This is a health and quality of life issue that cannot continue to go unaddressed.

The goals of the challenge are:
- Every person commits to participating in some form of physical activity five days a week, for six out of eight weeks.
- Youth, ages 18 and under, have to complete 60 minutes of activity and adults have to complete 30 minutes of activity.
- At the end of eight weeks, anyone who successfully accomplishes the challenge will receive a special presidential award.

BIE schools will have 8 weeks to complete the challenge with incentives of special awards given to both students and schools. The goal is to get 25,000 people across Indian Country and to support the President's 1 million participants PALA challenge by August 2012.

"This is a tremendous opportunity for our schools to participate in a positive and inspirational event," said Director of the Bureau of Indian

10 warning signs of Alzheimer's disease

Have you noticed any of these warning signs?
1. Memory Changes that disrupt daily life
2. Challenges in planning or solving problems
3. Difficulty completing familiar tasks at home, at work or at leisure
4. Confusion with time or place
5. Trouble understanding visual images and shapes
6. New problems with words in speaking or writing
7. Misplacing things and losing the ability to retrace steps
8. Decreased or poor judgment
9. Withdrawal from work or social activities
10. Changes in mood and personality

Fact: Alzheimer's Disease is the most common neurodegenerative disorder for individuals aged 65 years or older currently affecting 6.5 million individuals in the United States.

Delicious, Healthy Meat Options from Oneida Farms and Tsyunhehkw^

By Alyssa Mannering
UW-Green Bay Dietetic Intern

There's something about fresh, local products that gets a dietetic intern excited! Oneida Farms and tsyunhehkw^ raise and offer excellent products, including grass-fed and free-range livestock. There are plenty of health benefits from consuming meat and poultry that are organic, grass-fed or free-range. Not to mention, buying locally from Oneida helps put money back into the tribe. It's like buying from your neighbor; you know the source of the meat and can feel safe and healthy eating it.

The certified organic 83-acre farm, tsyunhehkw^, has been certified since 2001/2002. For livestock, certified organic means that there has to be access to the outdoors when seasonally appropriate; access to pasture; no antibiotics, synthetic growth hormones, slaughter byproducts, or genetically modified organisms (GMOs); and 100% organic feed. Basically, these animals are treated as if they were out in nature, plus some extra pampering.

Studies have shown that grass-fed cattle have a higher percentage of omega-3 fatty acids than corn-fed cattle (the primary feed for non-organic cattle). Omega-3 fatty acids are heart healthy fats that are considered anti-inflammatory molecules that do not contribute to atherosclerosis, or the narrowing of blood vessels that can cause heart disease. On the other hand, corn-fed cattle have a higher percentage of omega-6 fatty acids that are pro-inflammatory—that is, they are "sticky" fats that can accumulate in artery walls leading to heart disease.

Tsyunhehkw^ also raises free-range poultry and sells farm fresh eggs. Free-range chickens have access to plants and seeds so they can eat as nature intended them to. Eating natural plants increases omega-3 content in poultry as well. Furthermore, free-range chickens lay eggs that have yolks that are brighter yellow than chickens that do not have access to eat plants in the farmyard. The bright yellow of the yolks illustrate that there is a high content of carotenoids, which are the antioxidants found in yellow-orange vegetables such as carrots.

The Oneida Farm raises cattle that, too, are not fed steroids, hormones, or antibiotics. It is a calf/cow operation where the cattle spend much time in grassy pastures, though the calves get fed corn, grains and other nutritious foods as well. On typical large farms, steroids and hormones are injections used to make animals grow large quickly and can lead to an overall fattier meat. Additionally, antibiotics are used to prevent animals from getting sick. These harmful products that can be found in the meat of livestock affect those who consume this meat. Humans are building up a resistance to antibiotics because of all the meat consumed that was injected with antibiotics. This means that when we get sick, our bodies require intense antibiotics to wipe out the bacteria causing illness, as well as the healthy bacteria our bodies need. The Oneida Farm does not use these products, so you can feel safe eating their beef.

Oneida Farm also raises grass-fed buffalo. Some say that buffalo is the "better red meat" because it contains a high proportion of protein, with tons of essential nutrients such as iron, zinc, selenium, niacin, and vitamins B6 and B12. What's more, buffalo is an incredibly lean meat, containing very little fat.

To sum it up, Oneida Farm and tsyunhehkw^ offer some fantastic, fresh, local, delicious, and healthy products. Where else can you find foods that have all that? Not only are you making a great choice for your body and health, it helps support the tribe by purchasing from a local place you can count on.

Food Assessment Survey Results
(Issue 4 of 6)

This is the fourth in a series of articles on the Oneida Community Food Assessment (OCFA) and the community survey information we gathered. We will be providing charts & data from the Community Survey that will show what we are learning in our final articles.

What is Food Security:
When all people at all times have access to sufficient, safe, nutritious food to maintain a healthy and active life.

What is Food Sovereignty:
The right of peoples, communities and countries to define their own agricultural, labor, fishing, food and land policies which are ecologically, socially, economically and culturally appropriate to their unique circumstances.

Introduction of the Oneidas to Episcopalianism

By Thelma Cornelius McLester

This Series briefly describes historical facts portraying the early settlement of the Oneidas in today's Northeastern Wisconsin. Looking at their past will include religion, land and leadership. This first effort today will explore the religion of Episcopalianism as it relates to a group of the Oneida populace.

The very first introduction to the Anglican Episcopal religion was in 1702 when the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel from England sent missionaries to minister to the Six Nations in New York. In mid-century, records show that most of the Nations were receptive to Christianity. Progress was made following Anglican Episcopal Minister Reverend J. Ogilvie ministering to the Six Nations at Niagara. After this The Reverend Bishop John Henry Hobart of the Anglican Episcopal religion visited the Oneida and from that point on ministrations continued. Bishop Hobart appointed Eleazer Williams to continue to teach and preach to the Oneidas. In 1816, a small church was built on Oneida lands.

The Hobart Church On The Oneida Duck Creek Area

In 1825, three years after the Oneidas moved to Northeastern Wisconsin, then known as Michigan Territory, the Oneidas built a log church and named it "The Hobart Church". This group of Oneida's was known as the First Christian Party, made up of Anglican Episcopalians who had already accepted Christianity while living on their lands in New York. They traveled under the leadership of Chief Shenandoah, (grandson of famed Shenandoah of the Revolutionary War) and Missionary Eleazer Williams, (whose true character came out after 1947). He was appointed Missionary to the Oneida as both a teacher and catechist of the Anglican Episcopal church . Another leader in New York at that time was Chief Daniel Bread (grandson of Chief Shenandoah) who remained behind in the first movement of the Oneidas, nevertheless he played an important role in all of the negotiations that took place prior to and including Oneida's travel. In 1829, Bread arrived in Oneida and became a prominent leader for the Oneidas. (For more information about the life of Daniel Bread, a recent book came out in 2009, published by Oklahoma Press).

The earliest known history of Missionary Eleazer Williams traveling with the Oneidas is now well documented, however, during this time period this did not appear to be known, that is there were several facts that need to be said about this period. In about 1811 when Williams, a Mohawk from the St. Regis Mohawk area in New York first arrived among the Oneidas, he was following a long line of missionaries who had already visited and preached among the Oneidas. Williams was well versed in both the Mohawk and English languages, therefore he was accepted by the Oneidas. Of all of the Iroquois, the Oneida and the Mohawk had a close relationship in language and customs. As part of the Iroquois League, there is more history related to this subject which will come out in later issues.

Williams was appointed by the Anglican Episcopalian Reverend Bishop John Henry Hobart of New York after Williams was shown to have had the background of Indian heritage which was thought to be helpful in working with the Oneidas. Also, William was successful in working with the Oneida due in part because the Oneida had already accepted Christianity under the Presbyterian Missionary Reverend Samuel Kirkland in earlier years. In addition, the Oneidas who accepted Christianity at this time, did not include all of the Oneidas. A second group called the Pagan Party/Orchard Party arrived this area in 1832 made up of the Methodist religion. All of the Oneidas were forced out of their homelands.

This period of time in the early 1800's was one of greatest upheavals in the lives of the Oneida. With greater migrations of Europeans arriving in this Country, Oneida homelands were being lost and the result was that the Oneidas could no longer carry on their previous way of life. The social networks were factionalized by outsiders and poverty was everywhere. They had lost many leaders during the Revolutionary and the War of 1812 that they were becoming leaderless and landless.

Williams was knowledgeable about Oneida's status with regard to the talk of removing them from New York . He was in contact with the Ogden Land Company who had pre-emptive rights of purchase of Oneida lands and so were anxious to have the Oneidas leave their homelands. He was also in touch with the governmental agency, The War Department, (which is where all Indians were placed). Both agencies were in agreement that the Oneidas should move out of New York.

Finally, Williams saw himself as the head of an Indian Empire in the West where other Indians could be placed. It was he who traveled with the members of the first Christian Party, Stockbridge and Brotherton Leaders, along with several other Tribal leaders in 1821 attempting to purchase lands for this movement. Traveling by ship they reached Detroit, Michigan when they learned that the lands they were seeking were already sold to the Indian Agent located at Green Bay. Returning to New York, they learned this was not true and left again the following year. This time, agreements were made with the Menominee and at first the then Winnebago (Ho chunk) Tribes. However, history tells us that the Ho Chunk left the area and the final agreement was made only with the Menominee where the Oneidas were to live in a certain section of the entire Menominee lands. In addition, the Oneidas promised to make payment of money and goods.

Previously, Chief Daniel Bread had fought to keep the Oneidas on their lands in New York and even contacted the Governor of the State, but no help was provided. This last effort by Bread was due to the promises made to the Oneidas for their support in helping the Americans win the Revolutionary War. That is, the Oneidas were promised that they could retain their lands.

Even though Eleazer Williams supposedly was to serve the Oneidas, he lived in the Green Bay area since he arrived in 1822, and spent most of his time preaching and teaching the few citizens in Green Bay, as well as his frequent travels to and from the East, particularly New York. On occasion, he did provide church services at the Hobart Church in Oneida. On other occasions, traveling missionaries offered their services of preaching in the log church.

Since the Hobart Church remained under the Diocese of New York, the Oneida leaders eventually notified Bishop Hobart in New York about the lack of Williams's presence at Hobart church. By 1830, Williams no longer had jurisdiction over the Church. Shortly thereafter Williams left the area returned to the East. His wife, Madelyn Jourdan whose ancestry was part Menominee and French remained behind living in Lost Dauphin Park in Depere.

Health Scholarship Grants

HEALTH SCHOLARSHIP GRANTS

The Indian Health Service opens competition for FY 2011 health professional scholarships. The programs are designed to financially help Native American students pursue health care careers, with an eye towards ensuring there are sufficient Indian health professionals to service Native American communities.

DEADLINE: Applications: Feb. 28 for continuing students; March 28 for new students.

Individual programs include:

- The Indian Health Professions Preparatory Scholarship: Awards are for a maximum of 4 years, and go to Indians or Alaskan Natives who have completed high school (or equivalency) a compensatory, pre-professional general education course or curriculum.
- The Indian Health Professions Pre-graduate Scholarship: Funds go to Indian or Alaskan Natives who have been accepted for enrollment or are enrolled in an accredited pre-graduate program leading to a baccalaureate degree in pre-medicine, pre-dentistry, pre-podiatry or pre-optometry.
- The Indian Health Professions Scholarship: Grants go only to members of a federally- recognized Indian tribes member who is enrolled in an appropriately accredited school and pursuing a course of study in a health profession field.

Overall, $14 million is estimated to be available, though changes in the FY 2011 budget can reduce that amount. Up to 50 preparatory and pre-graduate awards are expected, which are only for tuition and fees; the average award for the full-time student $10,191. An estimated 241 awards will be made under the Indian Health Professions Scholarship Program, covering tuition, fees and other costs, and averaging $49,642.81 for a full-time student.

IHS is increasing the number of health professions scholarships (with a slight decrease in other awards) to better meet the needs of the IHS and its tribal and urban Indian health care system partners

VA Expands Outreach to American Indians, Hawaiians, Alaska Natives

New Office to Serve as Advocates for Tribal Veterans

WASHINGTON – The Department of Veterans Affairs has announced the creation of a new Office of Tribal Government Relations to ensure the more than 200,000 Veterans who are American Indians, Alaska Natives, Hawaiian Natives or are part of the Alaska Native Corporations receive the VA benefits they have earned.

"There is a long, distinguished tradition of military service among tribal peoples," said Secretary of Veterans Affairs Eric K. Shinseki. "VA is committed to providing these Veterans with the full range of VA programs, as befits their service to our nation."

About 200,000 Veterans are represented by the 800 tribal governments officially recognized by the United States. Although VA has long provided benefits to Veterans in tribal lands, the new office will further strengthen and expand that relationship.

Stephanie Elaine Birdwell, an enrolled member of the Cherokee Nation from Oklahoma, has been selected as the office's first director. A former social worker, she has spent nearly 15 years working on tribal issues with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and, most recently, the Bureau of Indian Education.

She will oversee a six-person office responsible for "establishing, maintaining and coordinating a nation-to-nation, federal-tribal relationship," according to a VA briefing.

The office has a charter that officially extends to Veterans who are American Indians, Alaska Natives, Native Hawaiians and Alaska Native Corporations.

BIE is also engaging in Let's Move Outside!, the outdoor activity component of the First Lady's Let's Move! initiative to end childhood obesity. Led by the Departments of Interior and Agriculture, Let's Move Outside! is working with government agencies and other organizations to help America's kids and families get moving in the great outdoors. Traditional outdoor activities such as archery, canoeing, and lacrosse, allow Native youth to improve their health, while connecting with their heritage.

Nike and BIE signed a Memorandum of Understanding in May 2010 to work together in creative and inspirational ways to address health and social-lifestyle choices in American Indian and Alaska Native communities that contribute to disease and other medical conditions. Nike began its program for Native American communities in the U.S. and Aboriginal communities in Canada, more than 10 years ago with a commitment to bring sport and all of its benefits to members of these communities, with a focus on youth. The program allows Native American and Aboriginal health programs to purchase Nike products, including the specially designed Air Native N7, at reduced prices via nike.net as incentives for health promotion and disease prevention. The N7 fund provides grants to fund youth sports and physical fitness programs, and the N7 collection raises awareness for the N7 fund. For more information, visit www.niken7.com.

The Assistant Secretary-Indian Affairs has responsibility for helping the Secretary of the Interior to fulfill his trust responsibilities to tribal and individual trust beneficiaries and promoting self-determination and self-governance for the nation's 565 federally recognized American Indian and Alaska Native tribes. The Assistant Secretary-Indian Affairs oversees the Bureau of Indian Education which operates the federal school system for American Indian and Alaska Native children from the federally recognized tribes.

The BIE also serves post secondary students through higher education scholarships and support funding to 26 tribal colleges and universities. It directly operates two post secondary institutions: Haskell Indian Nations University in Lawrence, Kan., and the Southwestern Indian Polytechnic Institute in Albuquerque, N.M. Hobart Board tables cemetery tax discussion

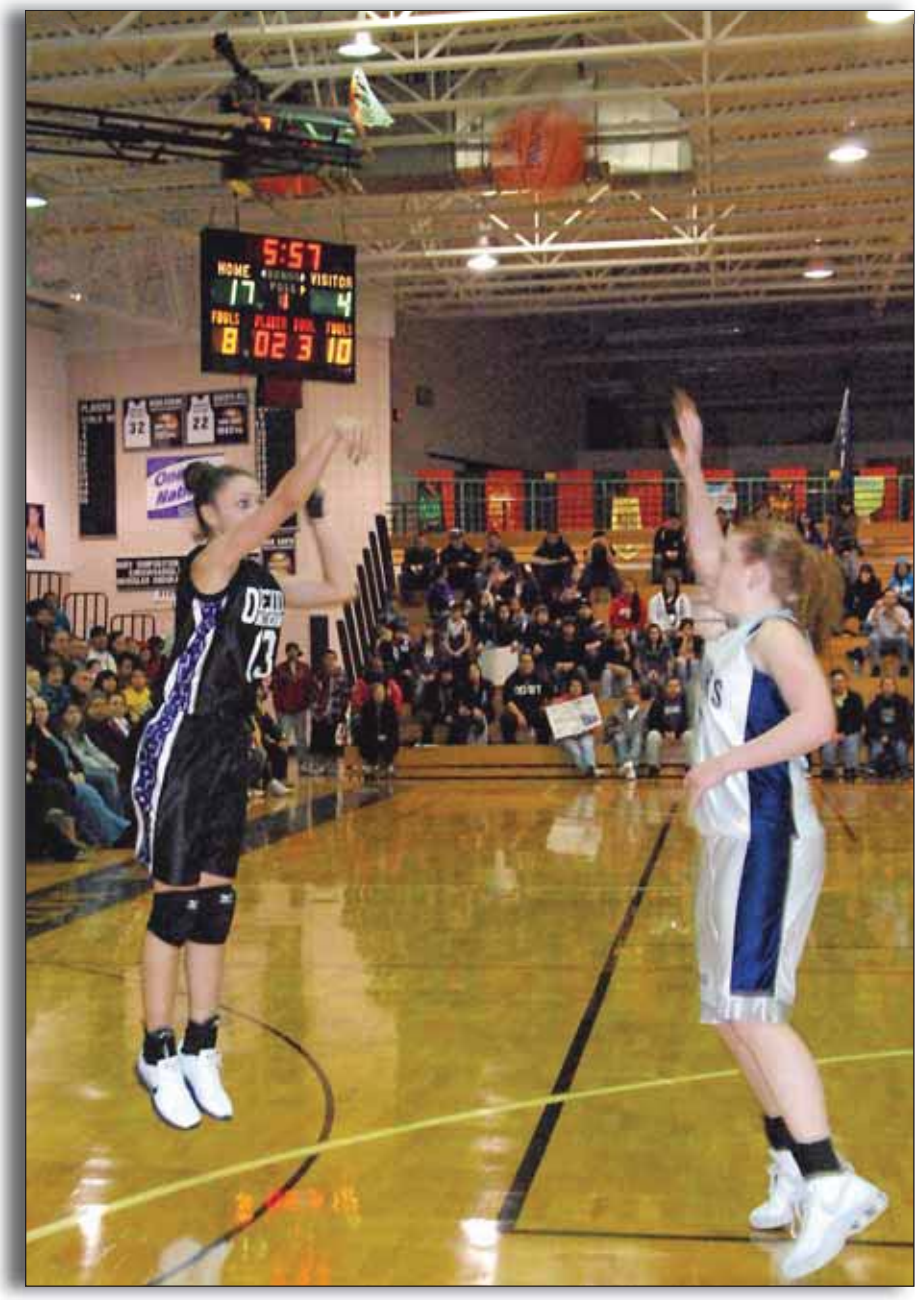
By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Village of Hobart tabled a decision to place 23 acres of cemetery land back into tax exempt status at a Village Board Meeting Tuesday, March 7.

The debate concerns a determination by Tax Assessor Mike Denor that changed the tax status of parcel HB 1304 in 2008 which is owned by the Holy Apostles Cemetery Authority. Denor states that the wooded lot is not currently being used as a cemetery and therefore is taxable.

"If it was part of the cemetery, it would be exempt, but what I'm looking here is that it really isn't, it's just a vacant, empty woods," said Denor. The land is currently taxed at a value of $23,700.

Lay Canon for the Administration Dioceses for Fond du Lac Matthew Payne argued that Wisconsin state law allows for a cemetery authority to hold up to 80 acres of land tax free for future cemetery expansion.



"State Statute 70.11(13) legally establishes a cemetery as burial plots and land adjoining burial plots with a cemetery purpose and equipment used to care.

Redhail working to end Domestic Violence

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Violence against American Indian women occurs at epidemic rates. One in three American Indian women are raped during their lifetimes, and American Indian women are nearly three times more likely to be battered in their lifetimes than Caucasian women.

Gene Redhail, Domestic Abuse Services Coordinator, is well aware of those stats and has been reforming men with his re-education program.

Redhail knew the usual tactics of treating abusive men with shame and confrontation would not be effective for Native Americans. "When I first started, that is what I would do. Their ears would close and they would get angry. Then I started learning. I took our values and started treating our men in that manner," Redhail said. "It sets the tone for how they want to live and someone was making sense to them on who we are as native men."

Many that experience Redhail's mandatory 25-week program speak of the sensibility he brings to the table.

Greg Jacobs, 48, a Menominee tribal member, was charged with domestic violence nine years ago and self-enrolled in Redhail's program.

"I beat the judge to the punch and signed up for Gene's program. (Gene) had a way about himself, it drew me. I started listening to what he was saying in group and it made sense," Jacobs said.

Jacobs was sober for a few years before Redhail's program but lived in fear of his temper. "I struggled with anger. Like my dad's (anger) it escalated from yelling to pushing, hitting and kicking. There were blackouts with no alcohol involved and I was scared."

Quinton Schuyler, 30, an Oneida tribal member, was court ordered to participate in Redhail's program. Schuyler was charged with domestic violence six years ago after pushing his ex-fiance into a wall. Schuyler points to Redhail's cultural teachings as sticking points that kept drawing his interest during group sessions.

"I guess I never knew who I was until Gene started talking about what happened to our people hundreds of years ago. Finding my traditional values has brought me to be the man I am today," Schulyer said.

One of Redhail's program points is the fact that abusive behavior is learned and was not present in early Native American culture.

"I am not teaching them anything new," he said. "It's re-education and re-learning. We need to re-learn how to live as native men."

Keeping the beat with Kalihwiyo'se

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Once a week for the last 15 years the sounds of Native American drumming and vocals can be heard from Port Washington to Door County.

The Kalihwiyo'se radio show airs Thursday nights on Wisconsin Public Radio in Green Bay on 89.3 fm and in Sister Bay on 89.7 fm. The program is hosted by Chris Powless, an Oneida tribal member, and Richie Plass, a Menominee tribal member, and plays traditional Native American music along with contemporary varieties such as rock, country, folk and even the occasional rap.

Kalihwiyo'se, Oneida for good message, has had the good fortune of consistency. The show, with the support of the Oneida Nation Arts Program, functions with the assistance of volunteer radio hosts and has had only four hosts over 15 years.

Powless, who has been with the show since the first year, says the dedication comes easy.

"It's just a lot of fun and I really enjoy it," he said. "We have some really interesting people call in."

Over Powless' tenure the show, at its core, has changed very little. It started as a one-hour show on Wednesday nights to the current two-hour format on Thursdays from 10 p.m. to midnight.

Chris Powless introduces the next song during Kalihwiyo'se. Powless has hosted the show for 15 years.

As expected, a show with a 15-year track record does have a loyal following.

"We have our Thirsty Thursday crew from Keshena, a group from South Branch, Green Bay and all over," said Powless. "We even get letters from prisoners thanking us for taking them home for two hours every week."

The show's two-hour playlist fills up quick as requests start coming in an hour before the show starts and are turned away around 11 p.m.

The show has had two hosts that alternate weeks the last five years. "I was doing it every week and I asked Richie Plass if he wanted to do it. We have a large audience and the Menominees were calling and calling a lot," said Powless.

Though the show has changed little over 15 years Powless has a larger vision for what it can lead to.

"I'm trying to take the show in a more cultural (direction). I would like to produce a show on the Oneida Hymn Singers and talk about their history and bring them in to sing," he said.

Powless would also like to see the power of radio harnessed to benefit the tribe. Powless envisions a radio station on the reservation. "Everyone listens to the radio. We could teach the language, have history hour, and talk politics. We could keep people informed and I know they would listen," he said.

Powless, along with the programs original host Sara Begay-Hopkins, know the importance of the program as it serves as a bridge between culture gaps in the Green Bay community.

"The show really gives Oneida visibility and a voice," said Begay-Hopkins. "We built an understanding between non-Indian people and us."

"Main objective for the program is to give everyone a cultural awareness of native people and culture," added Powless. "I want to educate people who we are, what kind of humor we have. Right now, with some of the political stuff in the area I want people to know that we may look different, but we have the same goals. We want good education for our kids and we want our children to make it in the world."

OSGC project gets OK from city of Green Bay

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Green Bay City Council approved a conditional use permit for garbage-to-electricity plant proposed by Oneida Seven Generations Corp. (OSGC) to be located at 1230 Hurlbut St. at a council meeting held Tuesday, March1.

The item initially got caught up in discussion over its potential effect on a tri-county agreement concerning waste disposal and tipping fees.

"The less they have people bringing garbage in, the higher the tipping fees would have to go," said Alderman Guy Zima.

However, it was determined that the proposed gasification plant would use 39,000 tons of waste a year and wouldn't make much of a dent on the 600,000 Brown County generates.

There was also confusion over the possibility that the plant could be tax exempt.

"The Oneida Tribe never submits to any kind of a comparison to assessed value or anything else," Zima.

"They don't recognize assessments or the obligation to pay taxes on assessments," said Zima.

It was explained that the plant could be tax exempt because it will be a recycler, and that OSGC will voluntarily make a payment in lieu of taxes to the city. The property could be valued at $2.5 million and payments to the city could be between $20,000 and $25,000.

"This is a non-tribal property; it would not be eligible to be put into trust. This would be taxed just as if it were owned by any private entity," said Green Bay Clerk Lauri Marenger

OSGC Chief Executive Officer Kevin Cornelius gave a presentation to the council explaining the gasification process and potential benefits. The plant would take in approximately 25 truckloads of garbage a day. The waste would be heated between 800 to 1200 degrees which will break it down to a gas that will be used to power a generator that will create 5 megawatts of energy.

"The gasification technology is not new, it's not experimental. We've actually went around the country and looked at a lot of different systems," said Cornelius.

The gasification plant could create 40 to 50 jobs during its construction and then between 22 to 30 jobs starting at $20 an hour, according to Cornelius.

"I'm always for putting the green in Green Bay," said Alderman Brian Danzinger.

The proposed plant now has to undergo approvals from the Department of Energy, Environmental Protection Agency, Bureau of Indian Affairs and Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

Passing On...

Cornelius, Ira P.
September 1, 1940 – March 5, 2011

Ira P. Cornelius, 70, Oneida, died Saturday morning, March 5, 2011, at home.

The son of the late Raymond and Lydia (Summers) Cornelius was born Sept. 1, 1940.

He married the former Cheryl Williams on May 6, 1993.

Ira worked for IBM for many years and then worked at Oneida Casino as a slot tech supervisor. After retirement, he enjoyed fishing and hunting and his cabin up north.

He enjoyed serving in many positions in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. He enjoyed his hours spent with his grandchildren and his dog, Beans.

Survivors include his wife, Cheryl; children, Linn Cornelius, Kim (Ian) Nishimoto, Laura (Todd) Larkin, Kevin (Sheri) Cornelius, Kerry (Kimberly) Cornelius, Lee Cornelius; stepdaughter, Heidi (Mike) Schwiner; as well as the mother of his children, Amelia Cornelius. Further survived by his 21 grandchildren, one great-grandson; two sisters, June (James) Begay and Donna (Jim) Lake.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Raymond Cornelius and Lydia Denny; and one brother, Gene.

Family and friends may call at RYAN FUNERAL HOME, 305 N. Tenth Street, De Pere, from 6 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, March 10, 2011. Oneida Hymn Singers will sing after 6:30 p.m. Visitation will continue after 9 a.m. Friday at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Freedom Road, Oneida, until time of service.

Funeral service will be held at 10 a.m. Friday with Branch President Andy Summers officiating.

Burial to follow in the Oneida Tribal Cemetery.

Please visit www.ryanfh.com to send online condolences to the Cornelius Family.

Wallenfang, Frederick "Fred"
February 23, 1959 – February 23, 2011

Frederick "Fred" Wallenfang, 52, Neenah, died peacefully on his birthday surrounded by his family. Frederick was born February 23, 1959 in Green Bay, a son of the late Wenzel and Lorena (Nicholas) Wallenfang. Fred was a veteran of the US Navy. He worked at Neenah Foundry and United Van Lines.

Fred is survived by his son Jeremy Wallenfang; daughter Sonya Wallenfang; best friend Chriss Weiland and her children Carl and Kyle: three brothers: Wenzel and Edwin Wallenfang and Gary Dean Pitman; four sisters: Ina Gail Bain, Mary Jane Pittman, Amy Wallenfang, and Carol Stevens; uncle Eldred (Becky) Nicholas, aunt Elizabeth Nicholas, numerous nieces, nephews, and cousins.

Fred was preceded in death by his grandparents, parents, and aunts, and uncles.

Visitation for Fred was held Saturday, February 26, 2011 at RYAN FUNERAL HOME. 305 N. Tenth St, De Pere from 9:00 AM until time of service. Funeral service followed at 11:00 AM with Pastor Earl L. Smith officiating. Veteran services followed. Burial was held in Oneida United Methodist Cemetery, Oneida. Please visit www.ryanfh.com to send online condolences to the Wallenfang family.

The family would like to thank St. Vincent ICU, Unity Hospice staff, and Marlee his massage therapist.

Webster, Cletus L.
September 28, 1942 – February 23, 2011

Cletus L. Webster, 68, of New Franken, died Wednesday, February 23, 2011, at a local nursing home. Cletus was born on September 28, 1942, in Green Bay, to the late Levi and Amanda Servilla "Dell" (Skenandore) Webster.

Cletus served his country in the United States Navy from 1962 to 1964. In July of 1980 he married Kathleen Craanen. Cletus worked as an engineer for the U.S. Railroad for approximately 32 years and retired in 1997.

Cletus enjoyed playing cards, watching football, gambling at various casinos, family cook outs, and always made his religion and attending church a priority. But most of all, he cherished spending time with his granddaughters, Abigail and Alayna. They will miss their "papa" very much.

Survivors include his wife, Kathleen, his children, John Webster of Green Bay, Jennifer Hansen of Appleton, Joseph Webster of Green Bay, Julie (Jason) Schweiner of New Franken, Benjamin Webster of New Franken, and ten grandchildren. Cletus is further survived by six sisters, Alice Smith of Kansas, Charlotte (Mark) Walschinski of Oneida, Mary (Duane) Prescott of Indiana, Genevieve (William) Gollnick of Oneida, Catherine Webster of Tennessee, Debra (Weston) Cornelius of Tennessee, one brother, Kenneth Webster of Milwaukee, and many nieces, nephews and other relatives.

Cletus was preceded in death by his parents, his son James Webster, his brothers Laverne, Thomas, Victor, Adam, Gerald, and one sister Evangeline Delgado.

Visitation was held at Ryan Funeral Home on Sunday, February 27, 2011, from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. The Oneida Singers began at 6:30 p.m. and the VFW Memorial Service began at 7:00 p.m. Funeral services commenced at 11:00 a.m. with Pastor Michael Baucom officiating.

The family would like to send a special thank you to Bornemann Nursing Home and to Lucy Schuler, a valued friend of Cletus' in his final days.

With Sincere Gratitude

The Family of Carl D. Parker…

…would like to take this time to extend our sincere appreciation to all who supported us during such a great loss. We would like to thank The Oneida United Methodist Church, Muehl Boettcher Funeral Home, Unity Hopsice Staff, St. Vincent Oncology Staff including Dr. Bayer, Dr. Vir and Staff at the Oneida Community Health Center, The Oneida Veterans, Deacon Debra Heckel, Michelle (Todd) Hill, Karla (Rod) Hill, Little Man Webster, Teddy Christjohn, all the firekeepers and all who helped and supported us during this difficult time.

We appreciate all the donations and time everyone gave to help prepare our dad for his journey. Carl will be greatly missed, especially that smile when walking into the Oneida Health Center or seeing him out and about, he always lit up the room just with his presence. He had such a great outlook on life even with his illness.

All the acts of kindness were a great blessing to us. Our deepest gratitude to all who stood by our Dad's side and supported him through his illness for his faith and love from his family carried him through such a courageous battle.

Sincerely, Michelle Sawyer, Jolene Parker, Robert Parker, William Parker and Terry Pamanet

The Sweetness of Peace

In tears we saw you sinking, and watched you fade away
Our hearts were sadly broken, we wanted you to stay.
But when we saw you sleeping,
So peaceful from the pain
How could we wish you back,
To suffer that again?
It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone.
For part of us went with you,
The day God took you home.
What happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memories still
For death has left loneliness that
This world can never fill.

Our thoughts are ever with you,
Though you have passed away;
And those who loved you dearly,
Are thinking of you today.

Joshua Lambert Christjohn

5/8/1987 – 10/10/2010

We would like to give thanks to all who shared their kindness, their thoughts, prayers and assistance during the time of the loss of our Josh. Special thanks to Jennifer, Cornelius Singers, Bob, Sonny, Fire Keepers, Cooks, Ryan's Funeral Home, the anonymous and the beautiful POEM and FLUTE.

We express profound gratitude to those sharing their lives that were touched by our Son, Brother, Grandson, Uncle, Nephew, Cousin, and Friend: Joshua L. Christjohn, father of Lyla and Levi.

There were so many it would be too hard to recall and too overwhelming to personally address each and every one. I saw Love like I've never seen before. We were deeply moved by the number and the distance traveled, by the people that came to stand at our side as we sent Josh on his journey.

We were extremely honored that Joshua's friends expressed and reached out to include each and every one of us with their love and respect. The range of age was not without being surprisingly comfortable and with great understanding for anyone of us that knew Josh and his style, true leadership by friends.

I asked the young men that I knew were Josh's friends and those I felt were Josh's friends to walk behind Josh and in front of us and our families, as each one were Pall Bearer, and that even though they may not get to carry Josh it would be the same as they were all Josh' Pall Bearer. They honored our family with tremendous solidarity. I was told there were close to 40 young men standing tall and very respectful and waited to be the last at the gravesite. We give you Thanks, each and every one of you.

The personal request for permission to play his flute for Josh was heartfelt even after we learned the flute was broken, and yet another flute player came forward and shared his, and we were captivated with then the two flutists. We give you each our Thanks.

The many stories and experiences shared with us all will never be forgotten and will be of great help to keep moving forward knowing of Josh's experience of great friends, good family and many travels.

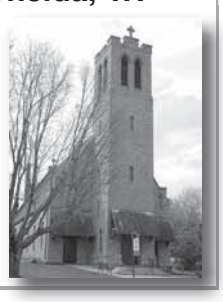
We are extremely thankful for that special and personal gift of kindness given by a truly rare and gifted Veteran Friend who at times may personify himself as a brother, uncle and father figure for many on his own life journey. We give Thanks to you and your family.

Josh had many extended brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts, nieces, nephews, grandmothers, grandfathers, mothers and fathers throughout his entire life. We will have fond memories forever.

It is said that it takes a community to raise a child and we were blessed with an unforgettable and continuously compassionate support of close friends, close family, close extended family and friends.

For those I may have failed to mention, it is not intentional, only out of overwhelming circumstances of our great loss.

We give you Thanks, Each and Every One, from our hearts to all, near and far and dearest of sister(s).



Cathy L. Metoxen, Dan, Kris, Carissa, Jacob, Mary, Andrew, Makenzie, Jolina, Lois and for Lyla and Levi

Frequently Asked Questions
Oneida Tribal General Election Primary

How will the election process be different for the 2011 General Election?

In 2011, a Primary Election will be held. In years past there was no primary election.

What is a primary?

Excerpts from Oneida Tribal Election Law:

2.12-2. There shall be a primary election for Business Committee positions whenever there are three (3) or more candidates for any officer positions or sixteen (16) or more candidates for the at-large council member positions.

(a) The two (2) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for each officer position shall be placed on the ballot.

(b) The fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for the at-large council member positions shall be placed on the ballot.

(c) Any position where a tie exists to determine the candidates to be placed on the ballot shall include all candidates where the tie exists.

2.12-3. The Election Board shall cancel the primary election if the Business Committee positions did not draw the requisite number of candidates for a primary by the petitioning deadline set for the primary.

2.12-4. In the event a candidate withdraws or is unable to run for office after being declared a winner in the primary, the Election Board shall declare the next highest primary vote recipient the primary winner. This procedure shall be repeated as necessary until the ballot is full or until there are no available candidates. If the ballot has already been printed, the procedures for notifying the Oneida public in section 2.5-11 and 2.5-12 shall be followed, including the requirement to print a notice in the Tribal newspaper if time lines allow.

Why have a primary?

To give members a chance to select from fewer candidates or the Business Committee positions in the General Election.

Will there be a primary for all vacancies?

No. The primary election is for Business Committee vacancies only.

When will the primary be held?

On Saturday, May 7, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

If there are only two candidates running for an officer position, will a primary still be held for that position?

No. The primary is designed to get the top two candidates for each officer position. If only two applicants run for that position, each applicant will automatically be placed on the General Election ballot as a candidate.

If a candidate didn't advance in the primary, can I write their name on my ballot at the General Election?

No. Write-in candidates are not allowed.

When will the Caucus be held?

On Saturday, March 12, 2011 at the Norbert Hill Center at 1:00 p.m.

Is the Caucus just for vacancies within the Business Committee?

No, the Caucus will be for ALL vacancies of all boards, committees, and commissions with elected positions to be filled at the 2011 General Election.

When can I submit application for candidacy?

Officially this is done at the Caucus by being nominated and submitting the required application by the deadline date to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

If I can't attend the Caucus, can I still submit my application to be a candidate?

Yes. You will need to complete a petition and submit the required application by the deadline date.

How long do I have to submit an application to become a candidate?

All applications are due by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, March 18, 2011 to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

When is the General Election?

On Saturday, July 16, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

When can I begin campaigning?

Whenever you wish.

Excerpt from Oneida Election Law: 2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:

(a) Placement of campaign signs:

(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's permission.

(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.

(3) No campaign sign shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.

(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.

(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.

(d) Enforcement. The Zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.

(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Can I vote by absentee ballot?

No. Article III Section 2 of the Constitution states "All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin who are 21 years of age or over shall be qualified voters provided they present themselves in person at the polls on the day of election."

Will the Milwaukee voting site be open for both the primary and general election?

Yes. Business Committee Resolution 03-13-2002-O states: "NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that an approved facility; compliance with the Oneida Election Law, 2.8-0, Section B, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is hereby designated as a second polling site for Oneida triennial elections, beginning with the July, 2002, election." The SEOTS Building is located at 6820 West Wedgewood Drive, Milwaukee, WI.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Doug Schmidt outside his Flower Co. store in Howard, Wisc. His location near a Walgreens has led to a lot of foot traffic since he opened in February of this year.

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Doug Schmidt stood near the front of his glass-walled Flower Co. store.

"See this car driving slow?" he asked. "There's more people rubbernecking."

Schmidt's new floral shop has benefited from a high traffic corner near a Walgreens.

"People just keep walking through my door, it's been non-stop," he said. "I haven't really advertised, and people are walking through my door because of that big store right next to me."

Schmidt offers floral arrangements for weddings or other special occasions, live plants, jewelry, gifts, lawn ornaments and items for sale through consignment.

"We're the one and only flower shop in the Howard-Suamico area and in this zip code. It's a fun, fresh place, there's a lot of gift items, novelties. There's one-of-a-kind arrangements, pictures," he said.

Schmidt had been out of the floral business from 2007 to this year, but training he received from Urban Home E-Hub in 2009 gave him the confidence to open the new store.

"I'm glad I took that course, because it helped me fulfill a business plan. It's a plan I follow, it's a little Bible I follow, to keep my day-to-day operations going," he said.

Schmidt has been doing a lot of networking with area churches, schools and banks to build business connections.

"I work with a lot of community leaders, and a lot of village people. Howard, the village, comes in and buys flowers from me. It's great, it's fun," he said.

Schmidt believes he's in a recession proof business.

"I never thought about the economy when I was opening this up … because everybody's got feelings; I love you, just because, thinking of you, birthdays, weddings, funerals," he said. "If you don't know what to get, get flowers."

Flower Co. is located at 2565 Riverview Drive, Suite A in Howard. Schmidt offers a discount to Oneida tribal citizens and welcomes purchase orders. His number is 920-434-9461.

Davis-Mallett listed as one of forty under 40 in business

By Kathy Bergstrom
Special to Kalihwisaks

Jean Davis-Mallett

Even as a child, Jean Davis-Mallett remembers questioning inequality.

"I wondered why certain neighborhoods had things and others didn't," said Davis-Mallett, who spent her childhood in Milwaukee. "That's an issue for me."

As community partnerships manager at Froedtert Hospital in Wauwatosa, Davis-Mallett has a chance to address inequalities in health care in the west side and Washington Park Milwaukee neighborhoods that she targets.

She wants to be a driver in improving the health of the neighborhood residents and their access to quality health care.

Colleagues say Davis-Mallett has had a quick impact in her job at Froedtert and they have high hopes for her future contributions.

Davis-Mallett earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from Clark Atlanta University in Atlanta. She returned to Milwaukee after graduation and began an eight-year career at Harley-Davidson Motor Co., where she held various roles in communications, investor relations, rider services and market research. In the meantime, she earned a master of business administration degree from Alverno College. She left Harley in 2009 and last year earned a professional certificate in nonprofit management from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Davis-Mallett also serves on the board of directors of the YWCA of Greater Milwaukee.

Her role at Froedtert is helping the hospital address community health needs through areas such as uncompensated and charity care, community health services and training the next generation of health care professionals.

She works both with Froedtert staff and other community agencies committed to health improvement.

"This was an ideal role for me and something I'm very excited about to know that I can have an impact and play a role in addressing health disparities," she said.

In her six months on the job, Davis-Mallett has worked hard to develop relationships.

"I have hit the pavement tirelessly to introduce myself, to make myself available and accessible," she said.

Clare Reardon, director of community affairs at Froedtert, earned her MBA alongside Davis-Mallett and later hired her at the hospital.

"She has great vision for someone of her age, for herself personally and for the community," Reardon said.

Her ability to easily switch gears from working at a motorcycle manufacturer to a health care provider is "just a reflection of how bright she is," Reardon said.

Vice-Chairwoman's Corner...

Kathy Hughes
Vice-Chairwoman

Oneida Seven Generations is continuing their efforts to develop the Biomass Project, which will represent the first new business for the Tribe in several years. This business will not only be good for the environment but will give us a new revenue base to support the increasing costs of doing business. We are anxiously awaiting an announcement for the groundbreaking to occur. The Tribe is no different than any other government in this country, in that our expenses continue to rise but unlike those governments that revert to increased taxes and fees to make up the difference, the Tribe needs to generate new revenues.

The Biomass Project has come under extra scrutiny because it is something that is new to this area and many of us know very little about the technical aspects of what will happen. It is always good to ask questions to try to get a better understanding. Holding back based solely on fear of the unknown will not create a better environment. But we are trying to get all the questions answered and going that extra measure to allay most reasonable fears. Additional meetings will be taking place to continue answering questions. And the results from the latest test being performed will also be made available and hopefully provide a better comfort level with what is taking place.

There are many challenges facing the Tribe and the current economy is not making it any easier. The budget discussions are taking place and it is anticipated that there will be a great a difficulty in coming up with a balanced budget this year as it was last year. We continue to say no cuts but reality may have to kick in. It simply is not possible to spend money that we do not have in the bank. And yet the petitions for wage increases are still needing to be addressed and the desire for expanded services remains a desire of many depending if they are in an elder category or a needy. None of the requests are wrong but the increased costs that go with them are going to mean we have to cut somewhere in order to pay for them. Where do you want to see cutbacks? Any ideas you may have would be greatly appreciated.

If you have seen the Press Gazette lately you know the issues with Hobart continue. The latest article seemed to indicate it is all over our differences with land going into Trust. The Tribe wants to put land into trust and Hobart wants to object. But what they fail to remember is that the Tribe has been unable to talk with Hobart about a service agreement to offset what they lose in revenue when the land goes into trust because Hobart continues to express it viewpoint that the Tribal government no longer exists. In their minds the reservation no longer exists, all this despite adjudicated decisions and State recognition through legislation.

In 2008 the Oneida Business Committee passed a resolution stating the Oneida Tribe "will not enter into service agreement negotiations with the Village of Hobart until such time as the Village Board formally recognizes the right of the Oneida Tribe to maintain its own government and exercise jurisdiction within it's Reservation, and the Village Board abandons assimilationist rhetoric and attempts to change federal Indian policy to the detriment of the Oneida Tribe." . Hobart has referred to Oneida as a government …" a single purpose, race-based foreign government" and at other times as a "culture…not a government". Recently the Village Administrator has stated that she recognizes the government of the Oneida Tribe. Now, if the Village Board would make this same statement in a formal manner then I believe we could begin negotiations to resolve the service agreement issue.

On the national front work continues to maintain the progress made with the reauthorization of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act. There are legislators trying to throw the baby out with the bathwater. Providing health care to the American Indian/Alaska Native population is a trust responsibility of the Federal government carrying out the Treaty obligations. The reauthorization recognized that need and provided the necessary legislation to provide services that are in the best practices of today's professional health care society. We are now able to upgrade the long term care services and behavorial health needs for our communities. The national argument on health care will go where it needs to go but we cannot allow the total destruction of the IHCIA at the same time. It has taken too long to get the Indian Health Service functions to where they can keep up with the 21st Century. Funding will continue to be a problem but at least with the current language we can prepare for providing services that are appropriate to the demands.

Waste to Energy Project

Congratulations to Oneida Seven Generations Corporation for finding a good partner who recognizes the importance and opportunities of the waste to energy project. As one of the nine Business Committee members, I wholeheartedly supported this project. As Oneida Seven Generations Corporation and the City of Green Bay move forward with this project, I felt compelled to let the Oneida community know the challenges we faced with this project. This is from my own personal perspective.

When politics were heavy both internally and externally, and public education on the waste to energy project was in full effect, I was one of the few Business Committee members who attended a public information meeting at the Village of Ashwaubenon hosted by Oneida Seven Generations Corporation. The purpose of the meeting was to inform the public about what the waste to energy project was and answer any questions. As I stood their amidst my "neighbors," the hate for the Oneida Tribe and our people was overwhelming. One gentleman told me that although he thought the project was great, he would not support it because Oneida was doing it. Two ladies approached me with fingers in my face telling me that Mother Earth would be mad at me because we were going to bring greater pollution to the people. I tried to correct the misinformation they were saying, but instead they continued to point their finger in my face and call me a Liar and said I wasn't a real Indian because I wasn't taking care of Mother Earth. I was able to calmly tell them that I came here to respectfully discuss this project and if they couldn't show the same respect I showed them, then we were done discussing the issue. Other individuals were saying, I like the project I just don't want it in my backyard. Once it was explained that the project was on the Oneida Tribe's property and in Oneida's backyard too, they would say, well why don't you move it in the heart of the reservation? I also noticed that all of the people who were truly there to learn had left quietly and some stopped briefly to let me know that they were appalled and embarrassed at the behavior of individuals. The Town of Hobart officials were there spreading misinformation and garnering support for their anti-Indian agenda, which means opposing anything that Oneida does. I even had a person say that one of our own Business Committee members were running around spreading misinformation about the project because they didn't support it, even though a resolution supported by all of the Business Committee was passed in support of the project.

Melinda Danforth
Councilwoman

As I sat there bewildered and exhausted at the end of that long evening, reflecting on what had just happened. I thought to myself…. Back in the day when our "neighbors" proposed to put the Sludge Ponds and Land Fills on our reservation, Oneida protested heavily and our "neighbors" did it anyway. Oneida's voice sure was heard, but ignored. Our "neighbors" didn't sit down and try to negotiate anything with the Oneida Indians, and they didn't have public hearings so we knew what the potential impacts were. So they went ahead and put the sludge ponds and land fills on our rez. Babies got sick, miscarriages were on the rise and yet no one cared about those affects. Now Oneida wants to clean up the land fills and reduce the toxic gases that come from the land fills, we want to use the garbage that would go to the landfill to create energy, ON OUR DIME, and ON OUR LAND and we are being called to the carpet to be a good "neighbor" and to hear their voices. But once again, Oneida was the good "neighbor" and found the win-win for everyone involved.

Constitutional Amendments

This article is a status update on the 5 constitutional amendments that General Tribal Council (GTC) approved in August 2010 to be forwarded to a Secretarial Election; 1) removal of the Department of Interior Secretary; 2) lower the voting age from 21 years-old to 18 years-old; 3) change the Tribe's official name from the "Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin" to the "Oneida Nation," and 4) formally embed a tribal court into our constitution.

Oneida OHA Regulations

For the past few years, Oneida Tribal members have asked: (1) Why does Oneida Housing Authority renters have to pay a rent of 30% of their adjusted income while OHA home owners pay a far lesser rate? and (2) Why are Oneida families being turned away from OHA because they are too poor or because the only income they have is student financial aide monies? I can now provide answers and solutions.

We can no longer turn away Oneida families who are too poor or because the family's only source of income is student financial aide. Federal housing authorities told us yesterday (March 7th) that our current policy of turning away our poorest and our students is wrong and that can't do it any longer. I encourage Oneidas who have been turned away by OHA in the past to re-apply. In regards to those Oneidas who want to know why OHA renters have to pay rent at a much higher rate than non-renters, the answer is, the 30% rate is the highest rate that is allowable. Tribes can rent at a lesser rate. The rate is a Business Committee decision. There are BC members who would support a lesser rental rate. I am one of them and will get on this issue promptly. It's unfortunate that this issue has taken so long. When I last inquired about possibly charging OHA renters at a lesser rate, the Tribal General Manager vehemently said that to do so would jeopardize our OHA funding. The General Manager was wrong.

Wage Petition Update

The approval of the 2011 Tribal budget had a plan for a 1.5% wage increase for 2012. Fifteen years of bad investments at $500 million in losses have left us with one primary source of revenue to fund our programs to our people and that's Gaming. Employees generate the money and employees deliver the services through programs that our people depend on. It is time to take care of employees who have not had raises for four years. Yet, leadership, at the Business Committee and management level, continues to plan risky investment ventures while we pay for bad/costly decisions. Protect and Prosper! It's time for a meaningful employee wage increase.

Currently, Tribal departments are developing the 2012 budget. The 1.5%. Plan will most likely result with the highest executive managers receiving raises of between $1500 and $2300 in 2012. At the same time, the average Oneida wage earner will receive an increase of about $550 for the year. That plan is not fair.

In February, Tribal elder Yvonne Metivier submitted a petition to increase employee wages by .75 cents per hour for all employees earning $60,000 and below. She says it's been years since Tribal employees have received a raise. She's right. To date, the Oneida Business Committee has not discussed any alternative. One this is for sure, without discussion, without compromise, without leadership, Yvonne's petition will be approved, and maybe that's a good thing.

Judiciary Qualifications

As the Tribe explores qualifications for judges in the proposed judiciary, the following is the undergraduate majors of current and most recent United States Supreme Court Justices. I know some would say, we are Oneidas, what do we care about the educational backgrounds of a non-Oneida court. There is nothing wrong with that kind of thinking. I kind of think that way at times, especially when reviewing some of the anti-Indian decisions made in those non-Indian courts. But on the other hand, I support education and I support a judicial body with a wide variety of educational backgrounds. Anyway, here's the list:

Justice Harry Blackmun - Math

Justice William Brennan Jr. - Economics

Justice Stephen Breyer - Economics

Justice Sandra Day O Connor - History, Economics

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg - Government

Justice Elena Kagan - History

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy - Economics

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist - Political science

Chief Justice John Roberts - History

Justice Antonin Scalia - History

Justice Sonia Sotomayor - History

Justice David Souter - Philosophy

Justice John Paul Stevens - English Literature

Justice Clarence Thomas - English literature

The Tribal Council is the ultimate decision maker when it comes to the qualifications for the judges that will sit on the Oneida Tribe's judicial bench.

Thanks for reading.

From 6A/OBC Forum

Many people have been asking about the Constitutional Amendments and whether or not the Constitution has been officially changed to reflect the amendments that the GTC supported in August 2010. The short answer is: NO.

The reason that the changes are not official is because our (Oneida) Constitution now requires that the 5 amendments must now go to a Secretarial Election process that is done by the U.S. Department of Interior. However, the request for Secretarial Election has gone to the U.S. Department of Interior and we are awaiting their response as to whether or not they will call the Secretarial Election on behalf of Oneida. So until the Secretarial Election occurs, our official name continues to be the Oneida Tribe of Indians of WI and you still have to be 21 years or older to vote at General Tribal Council meetings.

At the end of March, I will be hosting a series of community meetings to talk with the Oneida community about the Secretarial Election process. The Secretarial Election process is very complex and it is absolutely important for each of us to know what the next steps are and what we can expect going forward.

As always, if you have any questions or concerns about the proposed constitutional amendments or the Secretarial Election process, please feel free to contact me by phone at 920-869-4461 or via email at mdanforj@oneidantion.org, or Lisa Summers – Legislative Assistant, by phone at 920-869-4478 or via email at lsummer2@oneidanation.org.

These costs do not include the hundreds of staff-hours to review, research and develop the information, coordinate all the logistics, hold informational/community and public hearings, transcribe the meetings afterward, and begin taking action on any GTC directives or decisions.

Last September the GTC approved the annual budget that included a budget for GTC meetings. This budget included projections to hold the Annual and Semi-Annual meetings, the Annual Budget meeting, two special meetings requested by the Business Committee and three meetings to address GTC petitions.

However, it appears that we may have underestimated the total number of meetings we would need to hold. GTC action from the three meetings so far has resulted in having to bring two legislative issues back for reconsideration within a specific timeframe. In addition to these deferred items which we are required to bring back, we have also received three new petitions (one has seven resolutions) in recent weeks and we still have to address one petition from 2010.

Legal, financial, legislative and operational impact statements for each resolution and petition are currently being developed for all the petitions. Until the member's only website is available, you can request this information directly from the Tribal Secretary's Office.

The amount of meetings is only one logistic concern that has arisen - the need for additional space is also becoming a serious issue. In order to address this problem immediately, we may need to ask that only enrolled members age 21+ be allowed to attend, at least until a larger location is found. Also, the room generally used at the Radisson is booked out for every Saturday until late September, so these upcoming meetings will most likely take place on a Monday evening or on a Saturday at the Turtle School gymnasium. The schedule for these meetings is intended to be reviewed at the March 9TH regular OBC meeting.

Possible Improvements
Two additional improvements are being considered for improving some of the logistics of the GTC meeting. One is the use of hand-held voting machines for these meetings, and another is using Tribal ID cards for signing in and out. Both of these proposals are undergoing extensive review as part of the OBC's underlying fiscal responsibility to the Tribe, because it is important that we keep the cost – in terms of efficiency and financial expenditures - in line with any benefits we would enjoy.

The Exiting Process
Finally, we are hearing considerable complaints regarding the attendance during a meeting, and the exiting process being followed. These complaints are being reviewed to see where or how the current policy should be amended. However, it is up to all of us as GTC members to ensure the elders are treated with respect and helped out of the meeting as well as being responsible to fully attend these meetings.

So considering the costs and logistics to hold these meetings, we will have to try to keep the number of remaining meetings to four or five for this fiscal year. This means we will also have to try to put as many items on one agenda as possible. As you can see, we have our work cut out for us and I am asking for your attention, your patience, your participation, and your assistance to help with getting these issues addressed and decided on so that our we are being responsible in keeping the costs down as well as making good decisions.

Support Returning Service members with a Tax Refund Donation

(MADISON) – "There'd be absolutely no way that I could keep my house and provide for my family without this," says Operation Iraqi Freedom veteran Chas Dodge of Manitowoc about the veterans' benefits and services provided by the Veterans Trust Fund (VTF).

Sgt. Dodge served for four years in the U.S. Army and for one year in the Wisconsin National Guard. He was laid off from his civilian job and unable to collect unemployment benefits. In order to provide for his young family, Dodge used the Wisconsin Department of Veterans Affairs' Veteran Education (VetEd) program to enroll in the information technology network security and business management programs at Silver Lake College. Now in his third year of college, he says about the need for support of the VTF, "I hope that other people coming home will have the same opportunity."

The VetEd reimbursement grant for education is made possible by the VTF, which is the state's primary means of supporting veterans by providing valuable services and benefits for veterans and the immediate families of service members who have died in the line of duty or as a result of service-connected disability. The fund also supports retraining grants, claims assistance, subsistence aid, and state Veterans Cemeteries.

Wisconsinites can show their support for the service of Wisconsin veterans by giving a donation to the VTF.

Donating is simply completed by entering an amount to give next to the symbol on line 38d of the long form, 28d of the short form, and 64d of the nonresident/part-year resident form. Donations can also be made by mailing a check to:

From 1A/Domestic Violence... In past, no longer present

clear that his abusive behavior was learned and was quick to not blame his past drug and alcohol use.

"I have a long history of abuse. I didn't learn it from one place. I thought it was the norm and I came to believe I was better than women, children and the elderly," Stevens said.

Stevens also learned from society to believe his race was inferior and that lead to his discrimination towards other races. "I didn't know where I stood. I just know that I felt less and I wasn't proud of being an Oneida," he said.

Many of the successful men who participate in the program admit more work is needed and desired.

Tkaaunak Green, 26, an Oneida tribal member, was quick to realize that 25 weeks would not be enough to make the changes he desired to. "After the (initial 25 week) program I was scared and didn't know what was going to happen," Green said. He continued every week for three years before finally taking a break.

Green was charged with domestic violence and admits to beating, kicking and spitting on his girlfriend. He came away from the group with a new understanding of his relationship.

"We can get what we want without the violence. Now I get support and we parent together. I can be honest with her and be vulnerable," he said.

Most of the men in the program admit change has to be desired for success. Ralph Tucker, 49, a Menominee tribal member, wanted modification to his behavior but didn't know where to go. He would binge drink, which lead to verbal and physical abuse.

"I wanted to change really bad," he said. "You don't change right away, you learn from other men."

Along with the desire Tucker also recognizes the importance of re-centering himself with Redhail's program. "What keeps me out of prison are these programs and support we have. We have to find some sort of balance," he said.

Raymond Beans, 59, a Yupik Eskimo, was taught his culture's values and traditions but chose an alternate lifestyle. He re-discovered his spirituality in Redhail's program.

"When I was growing up I was told and taught native values but I never really followed them. I was selfish and had 37 years of drinking behind me," he said.

He was arrested six years ago for sexual assault and sentenced to six years in prison. He met Redhail during his prison term and started his re-connection with the values his parents taught him.

"His teachings were what I was being taught growing up. I really started looking forward to his visits while I was in prison," Beans said.

He began to see a change in his attitude in his life while working with Gene.

"It was self-pity at first. Poor me, I was in prison, I was blaming everyone except me and I wasn't taking ownership," he said. "After a while, I started taking accountability for what I did and the choices I made."

Many of the men who successfully complete Redhail's program swell with the newfound respect they have for themselves. They also are able to have positive relationships with the ones they hurt the most.

"I put my kids and family through a lot of pain. I kept my kids and wife in fear," said Stevens. "I was a broken man and I didn't want to step out of my house anymore because of all of the shame. I just wanted it to end.

Gene gave me direction. I've been told I am a warrior because I can now practice honesty, love, compassion and trust. I now know what my responsibilities are as a man."

"I've hurt a lot of people in the past with my anger," added Jacobs. "I want some of that honor and trust back. I am still friends with my ex-wife and we have a communication level I thought would never be able to have with a female. Gene has taught me this."

Redhail's program provided Schuyler with the confidence to offer a genuine apology to his victims and help mend their relationships.

"We can actually have a civil conversation now. Society teaches us that men are men and shouldn't take anything from a woman. It's a whole new life for me," he said. "I am a better father to my children and being a better friend to my children's' mothers."

Redhail has even reached out to some of the men to help lead groups and go into prison to show change is possible. Green will accompany Redhail on prison visits and Jacobs and Stevens will lead group when he is out of town.

"I see some of my friends from high school and I want to show them that they can change too. We grew up in the same conditions and I'm really sick of having men think they have to be violent," Green said.

ONEIDA NATION

The Oneida Communications Department, in cooperation with Oneida Enterprises and programs issues a challenge to all enrolled Oneida and Oneida employees to "Explore Oneida." Grand prize for adult category is valued at $1500 and grand prize in student category is valued at $1000.

This challenge is created to educate and promote a stronger sense of the Oneida culture and economy within the Oneida Community and to increase our reservation economy.

The Challenge:

Participants are challenged to complete the "Explore Oneida Challenge" form completely and correctly. The challenge form is comprised of a # questions about the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin.

Eligibility:

All enrolled Oneida and employees of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin, with an employee identification number are eligible to participate. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY.

How to enter:

Participants may take the entry form from the Kalihwisaks or go online to www.oneidanation.org and print off the form entitled, Explore Oneida Challenge. No online entries are available.

All entries must be received in the Oneida Communications Office no later than 4:30 pm or post marked by Friday, June 24. No exceptions. Each participant may qualify only once. Entries in excess of one by the same participant will be disqualified, the first entry reviewed will be the official entry. Only complete correct entries are eligible for the prize drawings.

Oneida Communications will not be responsible for mail or entries that are lost, stolen, late, incomplete, damaged, altered or with postage due.

Rules:

Participants must complete the entire entry and provide all necessary contact and verification information voluntarily.

Participants are subject to publicity via news releases and photographs in public and social media, through Oneida Communications Department.

By participating in the Explore Oneida Challenge, participants agree to be bound by these official rules and the decision of the Oneida Communications Department shall be final in all respects.

– Adult participants must be 18 years and older on or before July 4, 2011.
– Student participants must be under the age of 18 on or before July 4, 2011.
– All participants must be able to read and complete their own entry forms.

All participants must be enrolled or employed on the day of drawing, July 4, 2011.

How the winners will be selected:

The winners will be selected by a random drawing of all qualified entries placed in one of two drawing bins.

Oneida Communications Department staff will review all entries and reserve all correct entries for deposit into the drawing bin. Incorrect or incomplete entries will be saved in the Oneida Communications Department for 14 days. All entries will be destroyed after 14 days.

The categories are student and adult. Each category will yield one grand prize winner and four subsequent prize winners for a total of 5 in each category. The grand prize winner in each category will be selected first, followed by four consolation winners. A total of 10 prizes will be randomly selected.

When winners will be selected:

The drawing will take place before the Semi Annual General Tribal Council meeting on July 4, 2011 at 9:00 a.m. Winners need not be present to win. If the winner(s) are not present, Oneida Communications will notify them by phone or certified mail. Winners will be announced in the Kalihwisaks. Winners have 90 days to claim their prizes.

Condition of Entry:

By participating in the Explore Oneida Challenge the participant agrees to release the Oneida Tribe of Indians and it's agents, from any and all actions, claims, injury, loss or damage arising in any manner, directly or indirectly from participation in this challenge, and or acceptance or use of the prizes.

for it all. According to this law, all are exempt from taxation." said Payne.

Holy Apostles member Dan Hawk interjected that there are human remains on the 23 acres, but their exact locations can't be revealed due to the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act.

"If it can be established and proven and substantiated that there are graves, we're not in the business of taxing real estate in which bones are buried," said Village President Rich Heidel.

"I believe the only way that you can look at that documentation is in court," said Hawk.

However, Payne argues that the issue of human remains distracts from the Diocese's argument.

"You don't need that documentation. You have two mutually exclusive points of law, which would require you to have your lawyer review it, that clearly established in our opinion that the property should have never been levied for general taxes," said Payne. "This land was tax exempt from the beginning, for years and years and years, and the law says clearly if it's tax exempt in year one, it continues to be tax exempt in year two unless its' use, occupancy or ownership changes in a way to make it taxable. We have asked the assessor over and over again, what change was there that justified the assessing of taxes on this property."

Hobart's share of the $475.20 tax bill is $45. However, because the total amount is under $500, Hobart would have to refund the total amount for the 2010 taxes. The Fond du Lac Dioceses is also requesting a refund of $556.90 for 2009 and $1,247.60 for 2008.

The issue will come up again at the April 12 village meeting, Green said.

Letters & Opinions...

Sacred Ground Is In Our Keeping

To the General:

Hobart is taxing our family, friends and veterans who lie in Holy Apostles Cemetery. I would be ashamed of myself if I did nothing to stop it. There are some whose ignorance does not comprehend the seriousness of this situation. My dad, Lee Mc Lester II, his parents, five veteran brothers whom I grew up with, a matriarch from the DoDo Club, those too numerous to list are among those being taxed. Am I angry? You darn right I am.

Holy Apostles is charged with the upkeep and protection of those graves which are in our cemetery or, "in our keeping". This has always been a labor born out of love and yes it does cost money to maintain the cemetery. My husband Dan Hawk and I know that taxing our dead violates law and morality. We are fighting back the best way we know how by using our own judicial system.

We know that our Oneida Appeals Commission can rule on concurrent laws, we also know that our land falls under Federal jurisdiction – let us not forget that this is a Native American cemetery! And, we will not stand by and watch our cemetery be taxed in violation of the United States Constitution under the 14th Amendment.

Ignorance may be bliss for some people, even though they have the intelligence to understand this issue. So with that in mind I respectfully ask you to get out of or way when it comes to protecting those who rest in our cemetery, negative comments fuel my resolve. My roots go deep in this Sacred Ground and no one and I mean no one will stop us from trying to protect it.

Like some of the negative writers in the Kali I have to think about an old cliché; "We can choose our friends but not our relatives". Perhaps God sends us those people to test our Christian values?

Peace,
Judy Cornelius - Hawk

Post Traumatic Stress Disorder

On January 12, 2011 the Kalihwisaks reported on PTSD, however, they failed to mention the most prominent case in the news today. The case of Oneida Tribal member Deke Suri has made wide spread news reports including the Kalihwisaks.

It is sad that the paper did not do an investigative report. If they had, they could have reported that Deke Suri served in the war in Iraq. He experienced a road side bomb. Because of this he developed PTSD and Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI) and depression.

On December 21, 2010, being faced with the break up of his marriage, Deke attempted to take his own life. Also, he stated that he did not want his children to have to deal with his funeral. He gave his children two pills each. His mind was so confused that he thought he had given them three pills.

Than God he was able to realize that this was wrong and he called 911 to ask for help for the children. Now because of his actions he has lost all contact with his children.

Many Oneida Veterans have attended Deke's court hearings to support Deke. They know about the trauma of war.

If you have any family or friends who have PTSD and are going through stressful times, be sure they get help. Do a Google search on PTSD Veterans. One web site is www.ptsdmanual.com or contact the Veterans Office. The veteran with PTSD should see someone who specializes in PTSD. Please keep Deke and his family in your prayers.

Sincerely,
Madelyn Genskow

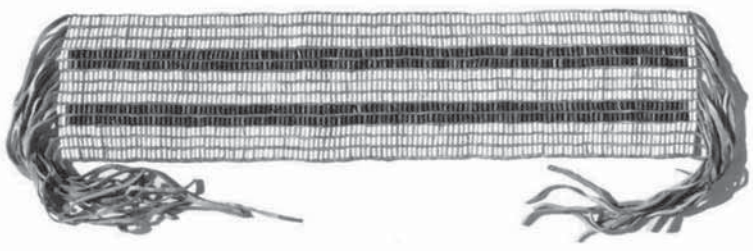
How can I help?

By Carole Liggins
Special to the Kalihwisaks

Late last year when it was bitterly cold, a young man from Lac du Flambeau came to the NHC seeking help. The previous night, his car had broken down and so he was stranded here. Not knowing anyone from our community, he decided to hitchhike home but because it was so cold he sought refuge and he spent the night in the Main Casino. After telling Casino Security of his problem, they said he could stay at the Casino as long as he did not fall asleep. At some point the next morning he was able to contact a family member in Lac du Flambeau who would be able to come down and get him the following day.

So here he was, stuck in Oneida - no family, no money, no friends, very tired and very hungry. He had contacted a church, shelters and other places and was given the "we can't help, but have you tried _____ here's their number" speech.

In an attempt to get him some help, I contacted Community Support and the Finance Committee. Community Support has gas cards, food vouchers, emergency housing funds, etc for just this sort of situation but . . . those benefits are only available to enrolled Oneida members. Sorry. The Finance Committee does not consider these types of requests. Sorry.



I was at a loss on how to get help for this young man when God (the Creator) put in my mind to call a gentleman in the community who is known for helping others. The call was placed, the situation relayed and the response was "Tell him, I'll be there in five minutes. Tell him to look for a silver truck."

My point in all of this is the Oneida Tribe, as a government, does not or maybe can not help out other Indian persons. But we as an Indian Community can. There are others in our community like the man I called who are willing to help out other Natives with money for gas or food, a place to spend the night or any number of things. However, we do not always know who you are or how to contact you. Pre Leverence, Community Economic Support Director, has graciously stated that she will keep the contact list of community members willing to assist other Natives who need some help when visiting us or just passing through.

You can contact Pre at the Social Services Building by calling 920/490-3700 to give her your name and contact information (example: home phone cell number, e-mail address). Those needing assistance can be referred to Social Services who will then give out the volunteer information. While the Oneida Tribe may not be able to provide assistance, the Tribe can help by being a contact resource referral. Please consider being part of our community resources to help others.

Two Menominee participants give it their best in the fancy dance team dancing competition. The powwow was held at the new conference center at the Menominee Casino Resort recently.

Keshena, WI – In commemoration of the unveiling of the Menominee Casino Resort Conference Center in Keshena, Wisconsin; a Welcome Pow-wow was held free of charge on Saturday, February 26th, 2011. Dancers, drummers, singers and spectators united in the remarkable Five Clans Ballroom to showcase the significance of the rich culture and traditions of Wisconsin's first people.

Jim Reiter, Menominee Casino Resort General Manager, expressed his sincere appreciation towards the success of the celebration. "It is incredibly gratifying to witness the fun and excitement our 1st Annual Welcome Pow-wow delivered to all of our guests in attendance. Not only are we commemorating our newest addition to the resort; today we honor our veterans and promote the preservation of our language and cultural identity."

With over 140 registered dancers, 17 registered veterans and 11 drum groups; the state-of-the-art Conference Center was the ideal venue to promote and maintain the strength of cultural preservation. The colorful display of regalia captivated audiences from wall to wall and coast to coast. Indiancountrytv.com assisted by providing live stream video to the world on the internet for those who were unable to attend.

The Head Dancers, Jerome and Rosanne Sanapaw led the way during two distinctive Grand Entry sessions at 1:00 pm and 7:00 pm. The highly recognized Host Drum was the Smokeytown Singers of Zoar, Wisconsin. In addition, the following drum groups were in attendance: Badger Singers, Picture Rock, Lake Delton Singers, Bear Heart, Strait Across, Iroquois Nation, Southern Sky, Young Fire Keepers, Chief Hill and Wolf River. The dancers originated from eleven separate nations including: Menominee, Potawatomi, Ho-Chunk, Oneida, Ojibwe, Stockbridge, Sioux, Blackfeet, Dine, Chippewa and Cherokee.

Throughout the course of the one-day celebration, those in attendance enjoyed listening to the high pitched vocals of the singers as they led the audience through two Grand Entries, exhibition songs, intertribals, honor songs and specials.

The Master of Ceremonies, Joey Besaw and Joey Awonohopay entertained the audience throughout the course of the pow-wow with storytelling and comical jokes. Gary Besaw maintained order as he did an exceptional job as the Arena Director."This powwow was a traditional way to welcome guests and relatives to our convention center. Not only is it a beautiful representation of our Menominee Woodland artistry and environment, it also displayed a critical component of our way of life, our Menominee hospitality. We thank all who attended and honored us by participating," said Mr. Besaw.

The food venue satisfied the dynamic group as they lined up to experience the fresh made-to-order Native American cuisine in the Bear room. Each dish was inspired by a wide range of intriguing food items such as Pow-wow Burgers, Indian Tacos, Fry Bread and Cream of Wild Rice Soup. In addition, over 6 local exhibitors showcased jewelry, clothing, purses and Native American crafts. The prices were affordable and their supply was diverse.

As the pow-wow concluded for the evening, guests expressed their appreciation towards the Menominee Casino Resort for a job well done. "The Welcome Pow-wow at the new conference center, was just that, welcoming! My family and I had a great time. The facility is amazing and the pow-wow was a great way to share it and celebrate its beauty with all. Good job Menominee Casino Resort. You did us PROUD!" said Menomin Hawpetoss on behalf of her and her family.

The Menominee Casino Resort, formerly known as the Menominee Casino-Bingo-Hotel, underwent a significant transformation; both in the physical and brand sense. 13,000 square feet encompasses the Convention Center with a banquet hall large enough to host weddings and functions for up to 600 guests. The banquet hall also has the ability to be configured into separate rooms for smaller events and functions. Also located in the Convention Center are five (5) large breakout rooms that can host meetings from 1-50 people. For small outdoor gatherings, the Convention Center offers a stone terrace near the meetings rooms and our beautifully landscaped courtyard area right next to the pool and the hotel. Alaska court says tribes share custody power

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) _ The Alaska Supreme Court has ruled that tribes share jurisdiction with the state in most child custody issues.

Friday's ruling is the second victory for tribal sovereignty advocates in recent months, the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner reported.

The case involved the village of Tanana, which sued the state for refusing to recognize tribal authority to issue adoptions. It was joined by five other villages and tribal organizations.

The state took a position that it had, in almost all cases, ``exclusive jurisdiction over child custody proceedings involving Alaska Native children,'' according to an advisory opinion issued in 2004 by the attorney general at the time, Gregg Renkes.

In 2007, a Superior Court ruling rejected that argument.

Friday's decision upholds the lower court ruling. The high court said federally recognized Alaska Native tribes ``are not necessarily precluded from exercising inherent sovereign jurisdiction'' to initiate child custody proceedings, and their judgments should be ``entitled to full faith and credit'' by the state.

Gov. Sean Parnell's office wasn't prepared to comment on the ruling, said spokeswoman Sharon Leighow.

Heather Kendall-Miller, an attorney with the Native American Rights Fund in Anchorage, said the decision follows one in October by the U.S. Supreme Court.

It refused to review a court ruling that upheld the Kaltag Tribal Council's ability to control tribal adoptions. In that case, the state had refused to issue a new birth certificate that included the names of the parents in a tribe-approved adoption.

``It was a nice one-two punch for us,'' Kendall-Miller said.

She said the disagreement about tribal jurisdiction created difficulties when children in disputed custody cases need health care, enroll for school or apply for social services. The Alaska court's ruling should spur more cooperation between tribes and state officials, she said.

The Alaska Supreme Court ruling doesn't resolve all questions surrounding tribal jurisdiction, including whether it extends to parents who aren't tribal members but adopt Native children, or if it applies to families that have limited or no contact with tribes.

Kendall-Miller said the judgment was expressed in ``very clear terms'' and gives the state solid direction on how to proceed. Alaska Department of Law spokesman Bill McAllister said the ruling doesn't address specific child-custody issues, which could leave room for interpretation.

Veterans conference to offer reintegration support

(Rhinelander, WI) Northern Highland Area Health Education Center (NH AHEC) and Nicolet Area Technical College are sponsoring a regional conference on community support for successful veteran reintegration on Wednesday, April 6 at Holiday Acres Resort in Rhinelander.

Military veterans of past eras have variously been hailed as heroes or stigmatized, depending upon the prevailing public attitude. Most veterans understand that such feelings "come with the turf" and adjust to the realities. But beyond that, many of today's veterans are facing serious personal issues as they transition to civilian life even as they lack the necessary direction and resources for managing their readjustment challenges.

Challenges of isolation, job loss or stifled careers, together with emotional and physical impacts of multiple tours, place many at risk.

"Successful transitions home require an understanding of the challenges veterans face," said Mark Scully, director of Northern Highland AHEC, and a Vietnam-era Navy veteran. The Project Hand-Over-Hand Conference offers insights into the physical and emotional needs of veterans and their families. It provides business owners and community leaders resources to support veterans in the workplace. And it will give veterans the chance to explore health science careers, a growth industry in rural Wisconsin.

Keynote speaker, Lieutenant Colonel Cynthia Rasmussen, will address some of these challenges. She will describe behaviors that can indicate Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI), or Military Sexual Trauma (MST). In the afternoon she will lead a discussion for health care providers (physical and mental), social workers, law enforcement, and religious leaders on the clinical symptoms of PTSD, TBI, and MST, and treatment.

"Adjusting to life back home has its own challenges," Scully said. "Challenges that can be as life threatening as combat duty, and can impact generations."

Veterans and a family member can attend at no cost as honored guests. Non-veteran registration fee is $30, student $20 w/ID, and includes materials, meals, and Continuing Education Units.

UNR athlete honored for tribal, school achievement

By TERRY DEMPSEY
Daily Sparks Tribune

RENO, Nev. (AP) _ In basketball, success is usually celebrated with the ceremonial cutting down of the net to mark a championship.

But on a recent Saturday at the University of Nevada, Reno's Lawlor Events Center, success on and off the court was celebrated through a traditional Native American gifting ceremony seldom, if ever, seen in a college basketball arena.

Tahnee Robinson, a senior guard on the UNR women's basketball team, received a Pendleton blanket from the Pyramid Lake Veteran's and Warriors Association in honor of her community service with Native Americans in northern Nevada.

``It's a tradition,'' said Michelle McCauley, university intertribal higher education coordinator. ``If someone is given one, then it means that they've done something very special. It's a very high honor.''

The ceremony was a part of a celebration of local Native Americans in conjunction with the Feb. 26 Wolf Pack women's game against the New Mexico State University Aggies.

Finding camaraderie can be difficult for Native American students at UNR. There are only 173 self-identified Native American students out of 16,681 students at the school, according to McCauley.

McCauley she hopes that events such as the ceremony held Saturday can help invigorate Native American students and forge links with local Native American communities.

``It is a challenge finding community because many of the students don't know anything about their songs, traditions, or languages,'' McCauley said. ``I've heard the term of 'walking in two worlds' and that's what Native Americans at UNR have to deal with: adaptation.''

The pre-game ceremony featured a performance of the ``Shoshone Flag Song'' by Gale Hanson of Bishop, Calif. The Pyramid Lake Veteran's and Warriors Association, also known as ``Namu Tookwasa,'' performed an honor guard presentation.

``'Namu Tookwasu' means people of the black shirts,'' McCauley said. ``It's what the Paiutes called the cavalry when they first came to the area with the settlers.''

Native American Student Organization President Chelsea O'Daye also performed the ``The Star Spangled Banner'' prior to the start of the basketball game.

During halftime, a Native American hoop dancer performed on the court and the group Echo Sky performed pow-wow music.

For each game attendee, Wolf Pack head coach Jane Albright donated $1 to Nike N7, a program that provides funding to get American Indian and Aboriginal communities in North America involved in sports.

Nike produces special N7 products and the proceeds from sales fund grants and sports programs in Native American communities, according to the Nike N7 website.

The first 500 children to come to the marketing table received a Nike N7 T-shirt and the team wore apparel from the Nike N7 collection during the game, Albright said.

Nevada is the only NCAA Division I-A women's team that has a partnership with N7, she added.

Robinson was given the Pendleton blanket on the court before the game, but a more formal ceremony was held afterwards.

Albright said the event to honor Native Americans started because of a relationship the UNR basketball team has forged with the local Native American community through Robinson.

Robinson is a Shoshone tribe member from Fort Washakie, Wyo., and is one of the few Native Americans competing in NCAA basketball.

``Our team is very diverse, and we're interested in the progress of all of our players,'' Albright said. ``We learn from all of their unique experiences what they have had to offer.''

Robinson, a general studies major, transferred to UNR from Sheridan College in Wyoming in 2009 and was named Western Athletic Conference Newcomer of the Year and first team all-WAC last season, according to the Nevada Athletics website. She also is a current semi-finalist for the Sullivan Award for the 2010-2011 season.

Robinson has reached out to younger Native Americans, talking about her experiences playing in college basketball and about her experiences with alcohol addiction, which affects the American Indian population at disproportionate rates, Albright said.

``The fact that she is a Division I athlete and that you have to stay in shape to compete at that level has been very important to her,'' Albright said. ``She no longer drinks and tries to share her experiences with that.''

Milwaukee Event Seeks Oneida Stories

For many decades Milwaukee has been the home to hundreds of Oneida families. As the nearest major city to the reservation, Milwaukee has attracted Tribal members seeking big city opportunities. With the transition to city life also come the challenges of urban populations. In a nutshell, everything is bigger in the big city, not only the opportunities, but also the crime, living costs, etc. Sometimes being an Indian in the concrete forest is not so easy. But, despite the barrage of ethnicities, automobiles, and tall buildings, the Oneida community has always sought places to share their culture, their history, and their laughter.

On Saturday, May 21, 2011, Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services will be hosting an event at UW-Milwaukee's Greene Hall (3347 North Downer Avenue, Milwaukee) to recognize the Oneida Indian experience in Milwaukee. Oneida Tribal members will share their experiences of culture and community in the big city. We will also have a welcome in the Oneida language by students of Dr. Mark R. Powless plus an exhibition of Longhouse dancing and singing. Corn soup and Indian tacos will be available as well as some great door prizes.

In preparation of the event, SEOTS is seeking individuals to submit their personal stories of Oneida culture and community in the Milwaukee area. Please submit stories in writing (500 words or less) to the SEOTS office (6820 West Wedgewood Drive, Milwaukee). Individuals who feel more comfortable sharing their stories verbally may set up an appointment at the office (414-329-4101). All submissions must be received by Monday, April 11, 2011.

Of particular interest are stories from the 1970's or earlier. Perhaps you or a family member can share a first hand account of the A.I.M. takeover of the Coast Guard Station in Milwaukee. Other possibilities include the early days of the Consolidated Tribes of American Indians, community gatherings at All Saints Cathedral or other churches with Oneida ties, United Indians of Milwaukee, the Iroquois baseball team, area Powwows, etc. We are also looking forward to stories of cultural activities at homes or family gatherings.

Any inquiries can be directed to the SEOTS office. We look forward to hearing from you and will share more information as it becomes available.

Volunteer Opportunity

Do you have knowledge, skills, or abilities that you can share with others? Are you able to contribute a few hours to your community?

From Trade Cloth to Treaty Obligation

Cloth in Early Oneida Clothing of the 18th Century

The Oneida people are among the Haudenosaunee a.k.a. Iroquois Confederacy who made first contact with Europeans in the early 1500's. They began trade relations with the French, Portuguese, Dutch and other European nations. As the Native and European nations intermingled, they had influences on each other in their culture, music, and way of dressing.

The Oneida people, and others, began adapting European clothing and created unique styles. The Oneida people adapted the European night shirt as their own. Oneida men wore it as a regular day shirt. This European shirt also inspired the Oneida women's old style dress.

The Oneida Nation Arts Program (ONAP) will host the "Early Haudenosaunee Clothing" lecture/demo program with Michael Galban, on Friday, Mar. 11th and 12th, in the ONAP cottage, 1270 Packerland Dr. Green Bay, WI. He is the Public Historian at the Ganondagan State Historic Site in Victor, NY. Seating is limited to 30 per presentation. This program is presented with funds from the Wisconsin Humanities Council and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The Iroquois Museum, of Howes Cove, NY, has more information about early Haudenosaunee clothing on their website.

"Cloth was introduced to the Haudenosaunee by European traders and quickly became an important trade item. At first, Haudenosaunee used the cloth to make their own styles of clothing. By the 1700s, calico and flannel cloth became popular for men's and women's outfits. Finished items from Europe like military coats and linen shirts, glass beads and silver jewelry were also introduced. For the first time, Native clothing began to feature sleeves!" Iroquois Museum, Howes Cave, NY, Haudenosaunee Clothing, (retrieved from http://bit.ly/iroqmu).

The cloth was so favored by the Haudenosaunee that it became an important part of the Treaty of Canandaigua. The "Early Haudenosaunee Clothing" presentation will discuss types of cloth the Iroquois preferred and how it became interwoven into the culture of Native American people.

Presentations of the "Early Haudenosaunee Clothing" Lecture/Demo program with Michael Galban will be Fri. Mar. 11th at 7:00pm; and Sat. Mar.12th at 1:00pm in the ONAP cottage.

To reserve your seat, call ONAP at (920) 490-3832, or email sbenton@oneidanation.org and indicate how many seats you wish to reserve.

Tribal TANF Program Acknowledgement

The Tribal TANF program staff of Barbara Metoxen, Economic Support Program Manager, Justine Huff, Tracy Metoxen, Alice Severson, Linda Summers, Economic Support Specialists and Michelle Doxtator, Intake Coordinator at the Center for Self Sufficiency took on a huge task this past fall. The Economic Support Program Manager applied for TANF American Recovery Act funding through the Administration for Children & Families Office in Washington D.C. The approved application brought a one time additional $94,414 to the TANF program. It was decided that due to the economic recession this one time funding would be used to help TANF eligible families with school clothing. These ladies worked together as a team processing 482 applications from August 16 thru September 30, 2010, serving 996 children, each enrolled, school age child received a $100 gift card for school clothes. Many families expressed their appreciation of having this help available to them. Good job TANF program staff! Thank you all for your hard work and dedication in taking on this task to help the families & children of the community.

Close cropping is an easy way to gain garden space

By Dean Fosdick

Associated Press – Gardeners react no differently than anyone else when times are tough: They tighten spending and try to squeeze more from their budgets. Some turn to close cropping _ crowding plants as a cheap and easy way to maximize yields from minimal space.

Placing garden plants shoulder-to-shoulder is not a new idea. Native Americans are credited with introducing the ``Three Sisters'' concept, in which corn, beans and squash were planted alongside one another. The nitrogen-rich climbing beans used the corn stalks for structure, while the ground-hugging squash smothered weeds and reduced soil evaporation. The result: three interdependent and eminently edible crops produced from the same ground.

If done right, massing plants in their growing beds is also an efficient way for urban gardeners to make the most of patios or decks, balconies or fire escapes.

``Many gardeners find themselves in a situation of wanting to grow either more produce in the same amount of space, or grow similar amounts in a reduced area,'' said Ben Sturtevant, a marketing specialist with Johnny's Selected Seeds in Winslow, Maine. ``This leads to finding ways to change methods or use new methods of production.''

Traditional single-row spacing varies, but smaller crops like radishes, leaf lettuces and beets usually are assigned about a foot between the rows, Sturtevant said. Larger plants, including beans, cabbage and broccoli, generally are given 2 to 3 feet.

Garden beds can be compressed, however, if managed properly. That includes letting enough air flow around the plants to prevent mildew, Sturtevant said.

It also means using rich soil, said Derek Fell, author of more than 100 garden publications. ``If you have a lot of nutrition in the soil, then a lot of plants won't mind being crowded,'' he said.

Rather than planting in single rows, plant in square or diamond patterns, Fell suggested. ``That's used extensively in places like Britain where you have space limitations. You can get an amazing amount of production from tight planting.''

Here are some space-saving variations:

_ Grow vertical. ``Cucumbers, some squashes, melons and tomatoes can be trellised very nicely,'' Sturtevant said.

_ Succession planting. Get a new crop into the ground as soon as the cool-season crop has been harvested. Replace lettuce, radishes and peas with something like beans, beets and turnips.

_ Inter-planting. Grow vegetables having different maturity dates side by side. A typical pairing might be radishes, which are fast maturing, with carrots, which take longer. Space also can be gained by planting a massed row of leaf lettuce between two rows of tomatoes. The lettuce can be eaten before the tomatoes grow tall enough to shade them out.

_ Use containers, ``a sure way to grow in a limited amount of space,'' Sturtevant said. ``Specific (plant) varieties are now being developed for this specialized environment.''

_ Select ``bush'' or dwarf plants, which don't take as much space or compete as vigorously for soil ingredients.

``Shop around for `kit gardens,' or comparable plant varieties that are made into salads, pizza fixings or herbal teas and seasonings,'' said Linda Chalker-Scott, an urban horticulturist with Washington State University's Puyallup Research and Extension Center. ``They're also a neat way to introduce gardening to the entire family, especially children.''

Conservationist to speak at UW-Green Bay

GREEN BAY – Conservationist Liz Titus Putnam, the founder of the Student Conservation Association, will speak at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 29, in Phoenix Room B of the University Union on the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay campus, 2420 Nicolet Drive.

Putnam, who was awarded a 2010 Presidential Citizens Medal, founded the Student Conservation Association, the country's first and now largest youth volunteer and environmental conservation organization.

The Student Conservation Association gives college students and high school students hands-on service opportunities in all types of fields including invasive species eradication, wildfire management and education, environmental education, and trail restoration and maintenance.

Putnam's talk, titled "Environmental Conservation and Youth Civic Engagement," focuses on the significance of building the next generation of conservation leaders. She will also guest lecture in two classes during her visit.

The presentation is free and open to the public. For more information contact the Office of Student Life at (920) 465-2720 or visit www.uwgb.edu/stulife.

Pre-college opportunity for High School students at UW-Madison, July 3-22, 2011

The College Access Program (CAP) is a three-week summer enrichment residential program for first-generation college students or students from economically disadvantaged backgrounds. The program is open to 9th, 10th and 11th graders who have completed their high school academic year. This year's program runs from July 3-22nd at UW-Madison.

Application deadline April 15, 2011. Program application and info: http://www.education.wisc.edu/cap/

During the 3-week pre-college program you will:

- Discover the University of Wisconsin-Madison
- Get a head start on your preparation for college
- Practice problem-solving skills you will need to succeed academically in college
- Work with college instructors on projects that will help develop your writing skills
- Learn how math and science are used to solve real-world problems
- Experience living in University Housing

What Will Workshop Sessions Cover?

Morning sessions explore problem-solving strategies used in science and mathematics. Although topics change from year to year, previous sessions have examined issues such as stereotypes, world hunger, mathematics in art, DNA testing, water quality and the environment, and emotion in the brain.

Afternoon sessions focus on developing college-level writing skills. You will learn strategies for research, analysis and presentation that are essential to writing effective academic papers. You will use these strategies throughout the program to produce formal and informal essays.

During the weekends and evenings you will have an opportunity to take advantage of the recreational and cultural activities on and off campus. In addition, you can use this time to find out about college applications, financial aid, academic requirements for college, and services available to university students.

Who Can Participate?

The College Access Program is designed to promote and encourage academic development in high school students. The program is open to students of limited/low income status regardless of race. Students must be completing their freshman, sophomore or junior year in high school when applying. Students must have a minimum 2.75 GPA and course work which will prepare them for college.

How Much Does It Cost?

The fee for the 2011 College Access Program is $500. This fee covers instruction, advising, room/board and supplies. Department of Public Instruction (DPI) scholarships are available to qualified Wisconsin residents. Limited scholarships are available to nonresidents.

For a scholarship application, please contact your counselor, Title VII Indian Education Coordinator or the College Access Program. Travel to and from the University, and all incidental expenses while on campus, will be the responsibility of the student.

How Should I Apply?

You must submit:

1) a completed program application and
2) a current copy of your high school transcripts.

The application deadline is April 15, 2011.

Send your application or contact for further information

Thinking of Going To College This Fall? Let the Higher Education Department help!

Please call us at (920) 869- 4471 with any questions.

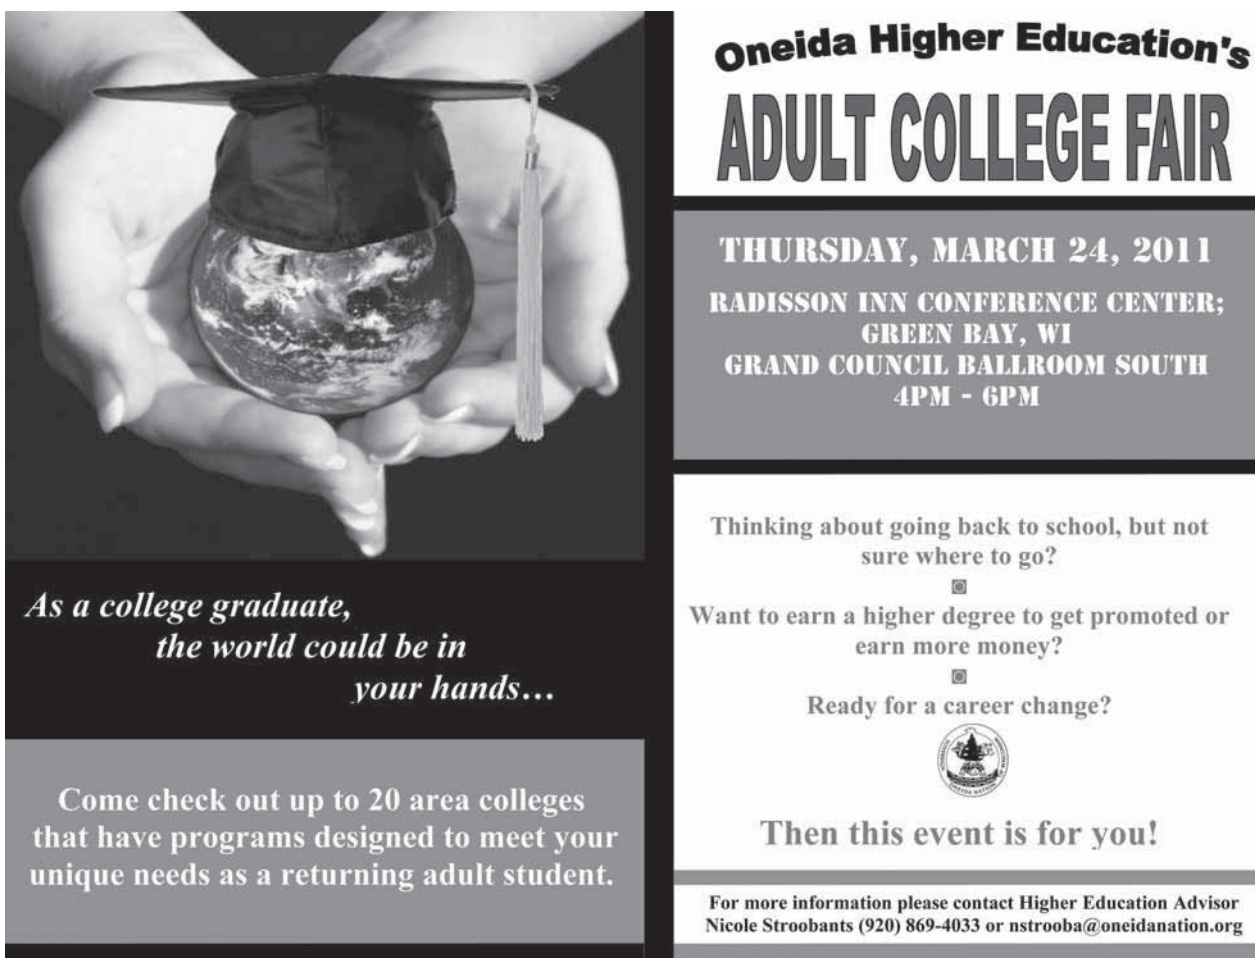
Candidates advised to finish GED this year

The GED (General Educational Development Testing Service) will be introducing a new series of exams on January 1, 2012. GED candidates who have begun testing under the current series are being urged to try to pass all five tests by December 31, 2011, otherwise, they will be required to retake the entire new exam series.

If you or someone you know has begun GED tests now is the time to complete. It would be a good idea to review before testing if you have not tested or studied in a while. The ONCEC is open to help you. Our hours are 8 to 8 Monday through Thursday; 8 to 4:30 Friday; and 8 to 3 Saturday. Occasionally we have a day off so check our monthly calendar.



Pulaski School District Explores Elementary Foreign Language

The Pulaski Community School District Board of Education heard a presentation from the district's Early World Language Task Force at their meeting on Wednesday, March 2, 2011. The task force was authorized by the Board in the fall of 2010. The task force is comprised of parents, representatives from business and industry, educators and students.

The task force met approximately five times and journeyed to eight school districts that teach elementary foreign languages. The task force was chaired by Darlene Godfrey, the district's Director of Learning Services, and Jenny Gracyalny, principal at Hillcrest Elementary School. According to Gracyalny, "We saw great things happening in the schools that we visited. Children as young as five years old were acquiring foreign language skills that are being taught in high school in our district." Godfrey said "In our world today it is important for our children to have the opportunity to acquire a second, if not a third and fourth language. Other countries teach not only their native language but English. In fact, many people from other countries are fluent in multiple languages."

The district's Board of Education will continue to study the inclusion of an elementary school foreign language program. Currently the district's plans were presented for the inclusion of Spanish language instruction in kindergarten through grade two for the upcoming school year. According to Dr. Mel Lightner, District Superintendent "Even in these tight fiscal times it is very important to reprioritize things that are done in school districts. I'm excited about the possibility that our young children would be learning another language next year." The Board will be getting updates and more specific information in the months to come in order for them to make a decision on whether to teach Spanish in kindergarten, first and second grade in the 2011-12 school year. Additionally, the school district Early World Language Taskforce plans to continuing their work in the 2011-12 school year, researching and planning for the possibility of offering a Mandarin Chinese Immersion Program at one of their five elementary schools for the 2012-13 school year.

More information on the study can be found on the Pulaski Community School's website http://connect.pulaski.k12.wi.us under News & Announcements.

Notice of Availability

Purpose:
The Oneida Tribe of Indians (Tribe) is proposing to construct an approximately 18,000 square foot addition to the existing casino located at 2020 Airport Road. The expansion will include a sports bar, food court, poker room, smoke shop, combined with other renovations. The project will be funded by the Tribe. The intent is to improve the economy of the Tribe and increase short and long term employment opportunities.

No federal involvement or action has been identified for this project.

An Environmental Assessment (EA) was prepared by the Oneida Tribe (Tribe) in 1992 for the construction of a gaming facility at 2020 Airport Road. A finding of no significant impact (FONSI) was made by the Bureau of Indian Affairs in March 1993. This addendum for the proposed expansion of the existing casino is in compliance with the Oneida Environmental Policy Act (2-13-93B) and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). The EA and addendum contain project information, affected environment, project alternatives, consequences, and consultation.

Location: The proposed expansion is planned to connect on the east end of the existing casino located at 2020 Airport Drive, on the Oneida Reservation, located in Township 23 North, Range 20 East, Section 6, Brown County, WI.

Alternatives: Preferred Alternative: The preferred alternative is for the Tribe to construct an addition of approximately 18,000 square feet on the east side of the existing. It will include a sports bar, food court, poker room, smoke shop, and other renovations. The addition will be located on what is currently a flat paved valet parking area; approximately 24 parking spaces will be removed. The valet parking will be moved to the south side of the building. No additional parking areas will be added with this proposal. Construction will occur on previously disturbed areas. The area of impervious surface is not expected to increase. Construction is planned for Summer 2012.
The applicant expects 20-25 short term jobs during the construction activities and 25-30 full time jobs resulting from the expanded services.

No Action Alternative: To not construct the proposed expansion to the existing Oneida Main Casino location. This will not assist in the goal of expanding gaming operations and improving the economy of the Oneida Nation.

Comments were requested from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service regarding possible impacts to threatened and endangered species, Oneida Cultural Heritage Department for possible impacts to culturally significant areas, and the Environmental Protection Agency for possible permitting needs regarding in-stream development

Project Description:
The Oneida Tribe is proposing to remove some 1.75 million cubic yards of sand, silt, and clay from a 59.83 acre, tribally owned surface mine. Once the surface materials have been removed, the site will be reworked to form a fishing lake and recreation area for tribal members. The property is located in Outagamie County, north of Crook Road, west of County Highway U, in Township 23 North, Range 19 East, Section 16, in the Town of Oneida. It is two miles south of Central Oneida.

A draft environmental assessment (EA) has been prepared regarding this proposed action in compliance with the Oneida Environmental Policy (2-13-93B) and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). The draft EA contains project information, affected environment, project alternatives, and consultation letters.

Comments were requested from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service regarding possible impacts to threatened and endangered species, Oneida Cultural Heritage Department for possible impacts to historic properties, the Army Corps of Engineers for wetland concerns, the United States Environmental Protection Agency for permitting, and the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Air Management for diesel emissions. Recommendations from the above contacts will be followed, but no significant resource impacts are anticipated.

Need for Project: The Oneida community has requested improved fishing opportunities on the Oneida Reservation. Some funding has been provided for restoration of a fishery through compensation for the ecological damages caused by polychlorinated biphenyls (PCB) contamination of the Fox River and Bay of Green Bay. The former 59.83 acre Binkowski sand and gravel mine was chosen as the potential lake site. The site was mined for sand in the past and provides an opportunity for additional mining. Once the surface material has been removed, the site will be developed for a warm-water lake fishery and recreation area.

Alternatives: The PREFERRED alternative will be to remove approximately 1.75 million cubic yards of sand, silt, and clay from the site. The Mining Plan details suggest removal strategies and recommend the appropriate equipment for the operation. A plan for stockpiling is being developed to minimize material handling. Once a sufficient amount of surface material has been removed, the area will be developed as a warm-water fishing lake and recreation area. A local construction firm has received a 5-year contract for mining, dredging, and shaping of the site.

The NO-ACTION alternative does not move the tribe forward with the goal of providing recreational fishing opportunities. No further mining or reclamation of the site would pose a safety hazard and potential for illegal dumping.

Comments & Availability: Interested parties may obtain copies of these documents from the above address. Comments regarding the proposed action may also be submitted within 30 days of the date of this NOA. Contact Bill Koonz at (920) 869-4569 or write Oneida Environmental, Health & Safety Division, PO Box 365, Oneida, WI 54155 for additional information.

ONHS Instructors Carol Johnson and Amy Amschler took a group of ONHS student leaders to the 7th Annual Northeast Wisconsin High School Diversity Leadership Conference.

The conference, sponsored by the Green Bay Area Schools, was held on the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay campus.

The conference theme was "Choices and Attitudes for a Purposeful Life."

The guest presenter was Manuel Scott whose life story was featured in the film Freedom Writers. Scott's speech was about the remarkable transformation that changed his life. Scott has spoken to almost a million people.

Some of the sectional offerings included African Dance; "Mementi Mori," a series of large-scale photographs by Madison-based photographer Paul Baker Prindle at the Lawton Gallery, UW-Green Bay; Lummi/Rhythm Sticks, presented by Green Bay West High School students; Oral Tradition/Storytelling – presented by Kay Huxford and Jackie Ninham; and "The Hidden Homeless," presented by Eileen Littig.

The ONHS group left school at about 7:15 a.m. and returned about 3:00 p.m. Students attending the conference were Eva Powless, Ululani Nunies, Mason Powless, Kanai Nunies, Noelle Metoxen, David White, Jordan Bain, and Jaaleesa Caldwell.

Reality Day at Seymour

By Thunderhawk Times Staff
Thunderhawk Times

"It was pretty cool," said Damon Danforth.

What he was referring to was Reality Day held at Seymour High School on Tuesday, March 8. The day was set aside for students to see what working and paying bills is like in the "real" world.

Each student was assigned a career. "We didn't get to choose," Damon said, "We drew one and whatever that was, that was your career and you had to see what you could do with it."

Students were also assigned a family. Then, they had to go to different places.

"We walked around and bought things – important things – that we needed," said Damon.

Those places were insurance, licenses, buying a house, car, day care, and so on.

"I was a librarian," Damon said. "I had two kids. I had to pay for me and for them—insurance, car, house, hygiene, supplies; we even had to pay for day care to our own mom. I bought a 2011 Toyota Camry."

"I was a cashier," said Terrill Guitierrez. "It was pretty hard making it on a cashier's pay. Then, I went to this thing called "SOS" that helps you get money back and helps you lower what you bought or get more money. Like instead of buying name brands, you could get something lower. It was a good experience, so that if you do get a job like that you know what it is like."

Students also had to go to "Fate." There "you had to roll dice or pick a card," said Terrill. "Fate could be good or bad."

There were also incidental, unplanned expenses.

"There was a cop there and if you didn't keep walking, he would give you a ticket for loitering," Terrill said. "So you had to pay that. Then there was this lady who carried around medical bills and she would hand you a medical bill. If you didn't have insurance, she could give you a medical bill for whatever she wanted."

Lady T-Hawks Are Phenomenal

By Joelle Thomas
Thunderhawk Times

The girls' basketball team has been phenomenal this year. Thanks to our coach, Jamie Betters. We never would have been able to do what we have accomplished this year without Jamie.

This journey has been fun, although there were some rough times. We got through the rough times because as a team, we got closer. We are like a family. Because of our closeness, our current record is 15-6.

There are nine girls on the team. The three seniors are Jasmin Webster, Eva Powless, and Ululanie Nunies. We have only one Junior, Kanani Nunies. There are two sophomores, Noelle Metoxen and Jessica House. Last, but not least, are three freshmen, Natasha Stevens, Lakota Martinez, and me, Joelle Thomas.

Our plans are long term. We all believe we can make it to state. We have our friends, family, and other supporters in the community.

Our athletic director, Lisa Rauschenbach, also helped us a lot. We plan to get new team gear. We want to thank Lisa, that we are able to do that. The team just wants to say: THANKS JAMIE AND LISA.

SPRING…It's Around the corner

By Shanna Jourdan
Thunderhawk Times

Regular March temperatures can get up to the forties and fifties or even better.

The best thing about spring is Spring Break. This year, Spring Break goes from Monday, March 21 through Friday, March 25.

On spring break, the kids can do what ever they want to do and enjoy the time off. What I like to do on spring break is, sleep in late, go to the park with my family and enjoy the sun shine. It's nice to see the nice green grass, the baby blue sky, and seeing flowers popping up from the ground.

If it's warm enough, another cool thing is to enjoy the sun, maybe sit out in the sun to catch a little tan, have a cookout with the family, or just lay out underneath a big shadowy tree and relax and enjoy the quietness of spring.

When spring starts, it's all wet outside from all the snow, but after that it's going to feel gorgeous. You can't help but to be outside.

So, what I'm saying is, don't stay in side all day… Go outside and play!

Where was Gary?

By Joelle Thomas
Thunderhawk Times

Gary Lancelle is the Computer Applications teacher at the Oneida Nation High School. He hasn't been to work lately because, during Christmas break, Gary had a heart attack and he had to have open heart surgery.

So, he's been off the past couple of months.

He came back on Thursday, March 3. Everyone missed him dearly, students and staff.

About being back, Gary said, "It's great to be back amongst the living. I missed everyone and I appreciate the fact that they missed me."

In our next issue, we will have an in-depth interview with Gary regarding his experience.

Paintball!

By Jade Doxtater
Thunderhawk Times

My name is Jade Doxtater and one of my favorite hobbies is to play paintball.

Paintball is a sport in which players compete, in teams or individually, to eliminate opponents by hitting them with capsules containing food coloring and gelatin (referred to as paintballs). The capsules are propelled from a device called a paintball marker.

Paintballs have a non-toxic, biodegradable, water soluble mineral-oil.

The game is regularly played at a sporting level with organized competition involving worldwide leagues, tournaments, professional teams, and players.

Why Shop Anywhere Else?

A tip of the hat goes to local appliance store, Van Vreedes.

According to ONHS instructor, Laura Studee, they have been very helpful with the annual prom since 2009.

"So, for two years in a row now," said Studee, "Van Vreedes has been amazing to us by giving us cardboard to use for prom."

The cardboard is used for various props and decorations, depending on the prom's theme.

"Yaw^ko to Van Vreedes for your donation of cardboard to ONHS for our prom," Studee said. "It's nice for our school to be supported by a local business like this."

Biodiesel Project Continues

By Jason Skenadore and ONHS staff member David Santee
Thunderhawk Times

My biodiesel project is about using different oils, such as vegetable oils, see if we can produce biodiesel. The goal is to replace petroleum-based diesel as a fuel.

We are trying to make at least twenty-five gallons of biodiesel fuel as part of the Indian Education Energy Challenge.

I picked this project firs semester and have been working on it a lot for the last month. We make little batches every day. We have taken them to NWTC to test them and they have all turned out good—meaning they all meet AMSE standards.

Testing involves four criteria: 1. PH Levels using an electronic PH meter, 2. Water Content using a pressure test, 3. Residual Catalyst by titration, and 4. Unreacted Fat Chains by checking for soap – titration.

ONHS was chosen along with four other Native American High Schools to build the plans we submitted for this project. This means that ONHS is one of only five high schools who qualified as finalists.

We were given $3500 to build a working biodiesel plan. We will be given a diesel generator to test our fuel in. Our plan calls for the biodiesel plant to be built on a trailer so we can demonstrate the process to the community.

We are currently purchasing parts for the processing plant and hope to begin assembly after spring break.

Our plan is to recycle oil and grease from local restaurants.

Jason's comments: I hope to go somewhere with this project. I hope one day that we can get everyone together to make enough biodiesel to help everyone out by replacing the fuel we are burning now. Go green. Here in Oneida, we could really make this work and do better for the environment.

(I want to give a shout out to my parents for inspiring me to work on something like this and lots of love to my brother, Joe, for making me best man at his wedding.)

Court-ordered notification in $3.4 billion Indian Trust Settlement to begin

Hundreds of Thousands of Native Americans must act soon to participate in the Settlement

Washington, D.C. ~ January 25, 2011 – The Court-ordered process of notifying individual Indians of their right to participate in the historic $3.4 billion class action Settlement, Cobell v. Salazar, is underway. The Settlement resolves claims related to Individual Indian Money (or IIM) accounts and land held in trust by the federal government for the benefit of individual Indians.

Class Members all over the country are receiving detailed information about their legal rights and options via U.S. Mail. Information will also be provided through an extensive media campaign, which includes Native America print media, television and radio ads, and online advertising.

On December 21, 2010, U.S. Senior District Judge Thomas F. Hogan granted preliminary approval of the Settlement, setting in motion a process through which hundreds of thousands of individual Indians who have or had government-managed IIM accounts or trust lands may receive some of the $3.4 billion Settlement Fund.

The judge's approval came after Congress passed and the President signed legislation approving the Settlement. Current estimates project that most Class Members will receive about $1,800, with some Class Members receiving much more depending on the level of activity in their IIM accounts.

The $3.4 billion Settlement was reached between the Departments of the Interior and Treasury and the individual Indian plaintiffs in December 2009. The Settlement resolves the government's failure to provide an historical accounting for IIM accounts and also resolves claims that the government mismanaged funds and other trust assets, including royalties owed to individual Indians for oil, gas, grazing, and other leases of individual Indian lands, mostly in the West.

The Settlement provides a $1.5 billion fund to compensate an estimated 500,000 affected individual Indian trust beneficiaries who have or had IIM accounts or own trust land. The Settlement creates two groups of Class Members eligible to receive money from the fund—the Historical Accounting Class and the Trust Administration Class.

- The Historical Accounting Class comprises individual Indians who were alive on September 30, 2009, who had an open IIM account anytime between October 25, 1994 and September 30, 2009, and whose account had at least one cash transaction.
- The Trust Administration Class comprises individual Indians alive on September 30, 2009, who had an IIM Account at any time from 1985 through September 30, 2009, recorded in currently available electronic data in federal government systems, as well as individual Indians who, as of September 30, 2009, had a recorded or demonstrable interest in land held in trust or restricted status.
- The estates of deceased Class Members will also receive a Settlement distribution if the deceased beneficiary's account was open as of September 30, 2009, or their land interest was open in probate as of that date. Other eligibility conditions and requirements for each Class are detailed in the Settlement Agreement.

Under the Settlement Agreement, $1.9 billion will fund a Department of the Interior program to buy fractionated interests in trust or restricted land from willing sellers to benefit tribal communities and aid in land consolidation. Depending on the level of participation in the land consolidation program, up to $60 million will be set aside to provide scholarships for higher education for American Indian and Alaska Native youth.

Information about the Settlement and legal rights is available to all American Indians and Alaska Natives.

The website www.IndianTrust.com and toll-free number 1-800-961-6109 are available to provide more information about the Settlement and the legal rights of Class Members. Individuals who are unsure whether they are included in the Settlement should visit the website or call the toll-free number for more information.

Class Members who receive a formal notice in the mail about the Settlement and who are currently receiving IIM account statements do not have to do anything to receive payment. Individuals who believe they should be part of the Settlement but do not receive a notice in the mail or are not receiving IIM account statements need to fill out a Claim Form as soon as possible, available at the Indian Trust website or by calling the toll-free number.

Individuals wishing to keep their right to sue the federal government over mismanagement claims covered by the Settlement must exclude themselves from the Settlement by April 20, 2011. Class Members can also submit written comments or objections about any Settlement terms that concern them by April 20, 2011.

Twahwahtsi·láyʌ (Dwah wah jee leye) - we all are family

By C. Alexandrea Lei-Nako
Twahwahtsi·láyʌ project

Come and learn more about Twahwahtsi·láyʌ while enjoying good food, music, and fun. We are having a Community Dinner April 4, 2011 at Parish Hall. Learn about our successes, challenges, and help create our dreams.

The Twahwahtsi·láyʌ project is made up of three distinct yet overlapping programs: Sashakoti?nikuhlahslu·níhe? (saw-saw-go-dee-nee-goo-lah-sloo-nee-heh), Oneida Community Volunteers who are available for community interventions; Yethiyaʌtanunhá a program for youth not in school or about to leave school; Twahwahtsi·láyʌ this portion is being developed and includes two purposes, one to give the community a voice and the other to bring forward family titles and strength family ties (we all are family). The vision of Twahwahtsi·láyʌ is The Re-vitalization of Tsi?niyukwaliho·tá (Geet ne yoo gwa le ho da) all of us our ways. The mission is to renew family titles and ties.

To fully implement Sashakoti?nikuhlahslu·níhe we need to secure the final background checks and have them on file for the volunteers. We also need to develop a Memorandum of Understanding with the Oneida Police Department along with procedures that include the use of the orange card. Then develop a card for area schools along with appropriate procedures and agreements.

Yethiyaʌtanunhá (yea tee ya da noon hah) which translates 'we are watching over them' has been operating since November 8, 2010 and currently is supporting five youth. We are in the process of hiring two student interns to work 20 hours a week who we hope to secure by March 31, 2011. The interns will be there to assist the youth and volunteers throughout the day. Thank you, to Shirely Barber, Bev Skenandore, JoAnn Ninham, Michelle Jordan, Lyle Metoxen, Mark Ninham, Greg Matson, Vicki Matson, Richard Brzezinski, Laurie Becker, Sue Reiter, Linda Gerlickowski, Belinda Brennan, Denis Gullickson, Bill Vervoort (OLB, Oneida Living in Balance) and Lynn Adrian for all their hard work in getting Yethiyaʌtanunhá started and maintained while we work to secure required staff and funding. Thank you to the guidance counselors and school staff for making this possible and for assisting us in finding ways for youth to receive credits. Thank you, to Renee De la Cruz, Cheryl Warrington, Nikki Kornetzke, Faye Le Mense, and Danielle Tubby for being those special liaisons with the area schools.

The dinner on April 4 will be the beginning of Twahwahtsi·láy; giving you a voice, and looking for those aunties and uncles who are willing to be available for their nieces and nephews. We send out a very special thank you to Ron Hill who will be our speaker for the evening and who has assisted in bringing this project forward over the last several years.

Please join us on April 4, 2011 to learn more and let us hear what you have to say.

We look forward to receiving your knowledge, and support. Please feel free to bring a dish to add to the feast. For further information or to comment you can contact me Alex Lei-Nako at 920-490-3774 or Ron Hill at 920-496-5385.

Meyer Theater to host Superstars of Rock & Roll

By Nate Wisneski

Kurowski

George Kurowski has always had a comfort level performing. His most recent project will test his comfort level.

Kurowski will star in the debut of Superstars of Rock and Roll Heaven, a two-hour show featuring light shows, video montages and impersonations of legendary rock and country artists done by Kurowski.

"People can expect a real neat show. It is designed to give the audience a visual content link between the artist," said Kurowski.

Kurowski owned a singing telegram business in northeast Wisconsin and honed his performance skills.

"I did about 5000 costumed singing telegrams," he said. "I would roast people and invade their work-place to deliver a personalized singing costumed telegram."

He released his debut album called Shallow Waters in 2009.

The show will be Thursday, March 24 at the Meyer Theater in Green Bay. Showtime is 7:30 p.m. and discounts are available for tribal members by calling (920) 764-0700 or emailing gakblktcb@yahoo.com.

Celebrate National Nutrition Month & "Eat Right with Color"

Submitted by Susan Higgs, RD, CD

During 2011 National Nutrition Month®, the American Dietetic Association is encouraging us to add color and healthy choices to our meals with this year's theme: "Eat Right with Color."

No matter what time of year it is; all seasons offer a variety of colorful and delicious foods, you just need to get creative. Choosing your meals and snacks from a variety of seasonal foods and colors will mean you are eating essential nutrients for optimal health and disease prevention.

Like an artist starting off with a blank canvas, you can transform a plain meal to a more colorful and exciting meal with just a few strokes of color. Your family will see, feel and taste the difference… a little color can make! See the ADA Press Release for some great ideas.

ADA Press Release:

"Adding a splash of colorful seasonal foods to your plate makes for more than just a festive meal. A rainbow of foods creates a palette of nutrients, each with a different bundle of potential benefits for a healthful eating plan," says registered dietitian and ADA Spokesperson Karen Ansel.

"Food variety supplies different nutrients, so to maximize the nutritional value of your meal, include healthful choices in a variety of colors."

ADA Spokesperson, Karen Ansel offers ways to brighten up your plate in every season with this quick color guide.

Green produce indicates antioxidant potential and may help promote healthy vision and reduce cancer risks.

- Fruits: avocado, apples, grapes, honeydew, kiwi and lime
- Vegetables: artichoke, asparagus, broccoli, green beans, green peppers and leafy greens such as spinach

Orange and deep yellow fruits and vegetables contain nutrients that promote healthy vision and immunity, and reduce the risk of some cancers.

- Fruits: apricot, cantaloupe, grapefruit, mango, papaya, peach and pineapple
- Vegetables: carrots, yellow pepper, yellow corn and sweet potatoes

Purple and blue options may have antioxidant and anti-aging benefits and may help with memory, urinary tract health and reduced cancer risks.

- Fruits: blackberries, blueberries, plums, raisins
- Vegetables: eggplant, purple cabbage, purple-fleshed potato

Red indicates produce that may help maintain a healthy heart, vision, immunity and may reduce cancer risks.

- Fruits: cherries, cranberries, pomegranate, red/pink grape fruit, red grapes and watermelon
- Vegetables: beets, red onions, red peppers, red potatoes, rhubarb and tomatoes

White, tan and brown foods sometimes contain nutrients that may promote heart health and reduce cancer risks.

- Fruits: banana, brown pear, dates and white peaches
- Vegetables: cauliflower, mushrooms, onions, parsnips, turnips, white-fleshed potato and white corn
- Whole-grains: 100% whole wheat breads, buns and rolls, whole-grain cereals, brown or wild rice, whole wheat or multi-grain pastas, and soft corn or whole wheat tortillas.

Ansel recommends choosing a variety of colors when shopping for seasonal fruits and vegetables. "And for additional options in the color palette, choose frozen or dried fruits and vegetables available throughout the year," she says.

"Instead of grilled chicken and mashed potatoes, consider painting a more colorful plate, such as grilled chicken topped with salsa, mashed sweet potato, asparagus and spinach salad with orange slices. A colorful meal is not only visually appealing, but it also contains a variety of nutrients and is quite flavorful," Ansel says.

For more information on how to "Eat Right with Color," visit ADA's National Nutrition Month website for a variety of helpful tips, fun games, promotional tools and nutrition education resources.

Smoke Signals: Sending a Message

Jessica A. Rickert, D.D.S.

Mark Twain said, "Quitting smoking is easy. I've done it a thousand times."

Promising yourself you'll quit using tobacco is easy. Never touching tobacco again is difficult, because nicotine is so very addictive, causing extreme dependence on this drug. All forms of tobacco are harmful to the user, very harsh to nearby human beings.

CHEW, dip, SNUFF, smokeless tobacco, SPIT TOBACCO, and chewing tobacco are names for the same tobacco product, a product which contains 28 known cancer-causing agents. These poisons increase the user's chances of having a heart attack, stroke or cancers. There is NO safe form of tobacco.

As a dentist and Potawatomi tribal member, I am so saddened to see the effects of tobacco on my patients' oral health. I cry each time I diagnose oral or throat cancer. When the referral to an oral surgeon results in surgery, radiation and/or chemotherapy, it is devastating for the patient, the family and for me. Sometimes the disfigurement from oral cancers is so profound, that the patient refuses to leave home, becoming essentially a hermit. When they are only 23 years old, my heart breaks for them.

Among other ill effects, tobacco constricts the blood vessels, resulting in white patches in living tissue. This leads to gum disease and possible tooth loss. After extractions, dry sockets often afflict the tobacco-users with increased pain and healing time. There is also increased tooth decay due to the massive amounts of sugar added to tobacco. Tobacco users often complain of an uncomfortably dry mouth, resulting in bad breath and failure of fillings. Diminished taste and smell is another complaint from my tobacco-using patients. Maybe the tobacco-users don't notice, but everyone else notices their ugly, stained teeth, tongue and even lips.

It's just gross. Yuck!

If you are a tobacco user, and you notice these signs of possible cancer, go to your dentist or doctor right away. The earlier a cancer is diagnosed, the more likely the tobacco-user will live.

-Any sore or tenderness which does not heal

-Numbness or pain anywhere in the mouth or throat

-Development of a lump, or a leathery, wrinkled or bumpy patch inside your mouth.

-Instead of the healthy pink color on the lips or inside the mouth, are there any changes in color, such as white patches, red spots or graying of the tissues? Any blue or black places?

-Difficulty chewing, swallowing, speaking or moving the tongue?

-Any tooth movement or changes in the way your teeth fit together?

I encourage you to never start using any tobacco product. I encourage you to stop using any tobacco product, and I applaud your efforts. Go to any tribal health clinic, and ask for help. Here are some other helpful possibilities to increase your chances of successfully stop the use of tobacco products:

-Phone 1-800-QUIT-NOW

-Visit www.smokefree.gov

-The U.S. Surgeons General's Office can send you the "You Can Quit Smoking Kit"

-The National Institute for Dental and Craniofacial Research

-The American Lung Association

-The American Dental Association's website http://www.ada.org/3013.aspx

-The Center for Disease Control at 1-800-232-4636

-The National Cancer Institute at 1-800-422-6237

-The American Cancer Society at 1-800-227-2345

If you don't quit for yourself, then seriously consider the extreme health risks you are putting on your family and those around you. Second-hand smoke is dangerous to everyone, but especially kids and pregnant women. Truly, you do not wish to harm your loved ones, do you? Even "chew" is dangerous; children have ended up in the emergency room of hospitals, because they picked up some careless person's chew, put it into their mouth and swallowed it! Don't let this happen in your household.

Yes, you stop using tobacco products. Your medical doctor can write a prescription which can lessen the cravings; there is gum, and patches to help. Remove all tobacco products from your home, workplace and car. Seek tobacco-free environments. Exercise daily. Use sugarless mints with Xylitol often. A good source is www.drjohns.com For a discount, use the code P I P 8 S 5 B 4 7. When you crave tobacco, use the 4-D's:

(1.) DELAY – the craving will pass in 5 – 10 minutes

(2.) DRINK 4 – 8 ounces of water, slowly

(3.) DO something else –distract yourself with activity. A brisk walk is good. So is prayer.

(4.) DEEP breathing – 5 deep breaths, in through the nose as deeply as possible. Hold as you slowly count to 5. Then "blow" out a candle, emptying the lungs as much as possible.

I do encourage you not to use any tobacco products. I encourage you to stop using any tobacco products, and I applaud your efforts.

Utility Assistance NOTICE

Utility companies will begin soon to send out preliminary disconnect notices. If you have not been able to make payments during this heating season, please contact your utility provider (WPS, WE Energies, etc) to make payment arrangements. If you have been making payments but the balance of your bill is difficult to manage, contact the utility provider to discuss making payment arrangements for that balance.

If you haven't done so already, you can contact the County or Tribal Energy Assistance Program – see below for contact information – to schedule an Energy Assistance appointment.

If you are determined eligible for utility assistance, you may also be eligible for Weatherization. The Weatherization program's goal is to decrease energy consumption by assisting with insulation, sealing air leaks, upgrades to heating systems, and energy saving products. Information provided during your Energy Assistance appointment determines the need for referral to the Weatherization Program.

If you reside within the Oneida Reservation, contact the Center for Self-Sufficiency at 920-490-3710 to schedule an appointment …

If you reside in Brown County but outside of the Oneida Reservation boundaries you can contact Integrated Community Solutions at 920-498-3737 or go to their office at 2605 S. Oneida St, Suite 106 in Green Bay … and

Survival Skills & Overnight Camping

Get Out… Explore!

Who's This For? Parents with their children or any interested individual (Adults and Ages 12-up)

Dates/Times? 3 Week Session… April 5, 12, 19 • 5 PM – 7 PM

Survival Overnight… April 30 • 10 AM – 10 PM

Class Location: 2640 West Point Rd., Green Bay, WI 54304

Cost? $40.00 for Tribal Members/Employees/Fitness Members
$60.00 for Non-Members (cost for overnight trip included)

Often times our life experience and education will determine how we respond to a survival situation. In a wilderness setting this holds true and you can enjoy the outdoors even more if you have the confidence to stretch your comfort zone. Wilderness survival skills are essential when exploring the great outdoors and the skills taught in this class will help you develop the confidence you need to get out and explore.

Modern and Primitive techniques will be taught during the course. Three main rules of survival will be focused on during the sessions: (fire, shelter & water) Participants will learn several ways to start a fire (Flint and steel, bow drills along with artificial and natural fire starters.) Building a shelter is a great skill to learn. Several examples of shelters will be shared during the course and you will have a chance to sleep in your own during the overnight. The survival overnight will be a hands on learning experience using the new survival skills you've developed during the course. This class could be a great activity for a parent and child or any interested individual. A survival game and quiz will be used to help bring out a real survival situation.

Instruction will be provided on the following priorities:

Fire: A fire is an essential survival skill to have; learn some fire building basics along with some natural fire starting materials. Use flint and steel or a bow drill to start a fire

Shelter: Learn how to build a survival shelter using the surrounding resources.

Water: Treating and collecting water are essential skills to have in any outdoor adventure activity. It can be a critical survival skill.

Adults and ages 12 and up are invited to register.

Space is limited so be sure you register in advance.

Class portions will be offered at: Oneida Adventures • 2640 West Point Road • Green Bay, WI 54304

COMMUNITY FUND

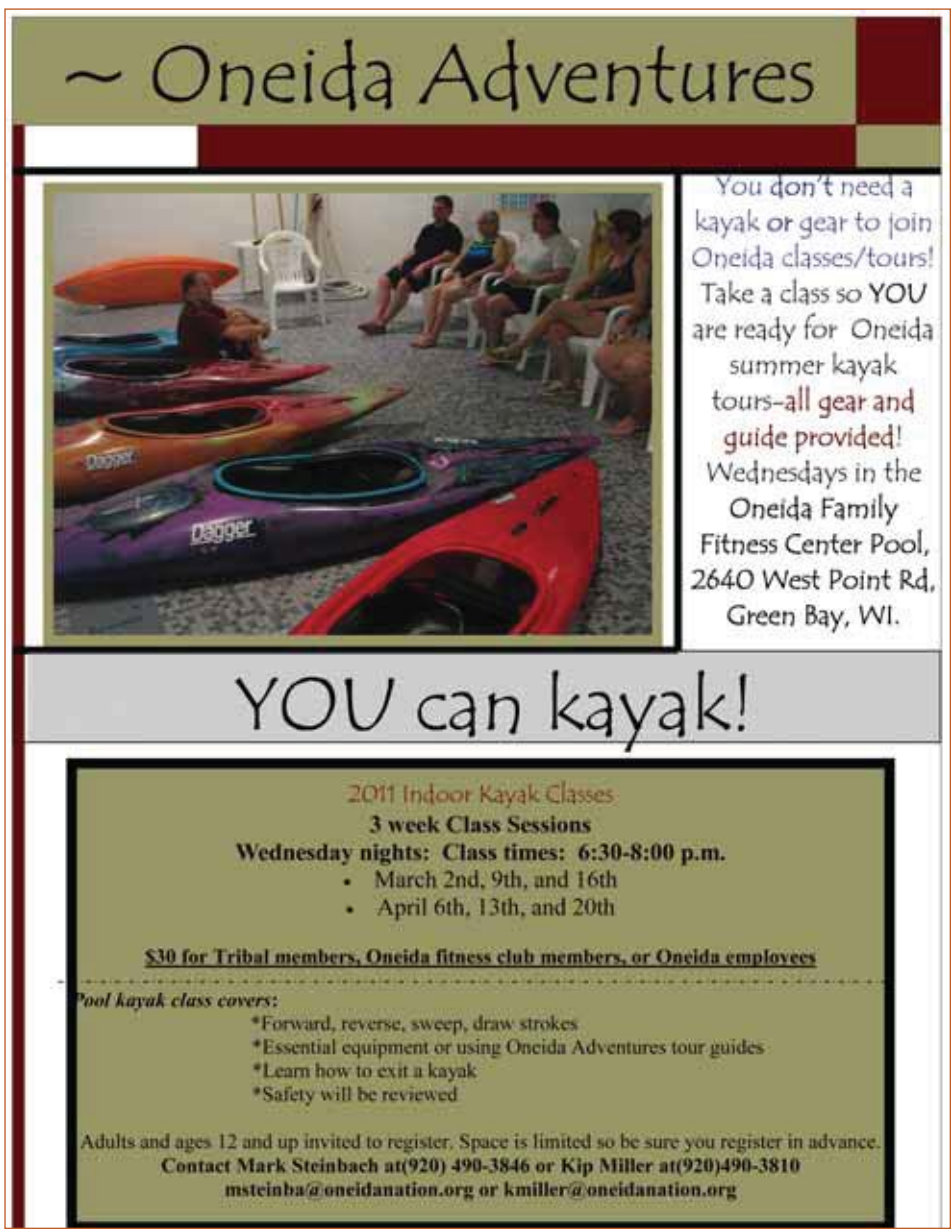
Question and Answer Sheet

Q: What is the Community Fund?
A: It is a vendor generated fund that is part of a contract agreement for products and services currently utilized by the Oneida Tribe of Indians of WI.

Q: Where did the Community Fund come from?
A: It evolved from the older vendor agreement. The Community Fund was created after an internal audit and Standard Operating Procedures were completed.

Q: What is the process to request funding or products?
A: Information packets can be obtained from the Finance Office. Once received requests are placed on the next meeting of the Finance Committee who review Community Fund requests once each month.

Q: Who can apply to the Community Fund?
A: All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin are eligible.



Q: Can departments within the Oneida Tribal organization utilize this fund?
A: Tribal departments can request products for employee /community events. They are excluded from the fund request portion as all tribal department funding is covered under the budget process.

Q: How are requests reviewed and who reviews them?
A: The Treasurer, CFO and Finance Committee drafted Standard Operating Procedures for equitable distribution of funding and products. The Finance Committee that is chaired by the Treasurer reviews all requests.

Q: What types of requests are covered under the Community Fund?
A: There are three categories covered under the Community Fund; 1) Tribal and Public School System Events, 2) Oneida Community Events and 3) Fund raising activities for Oneida Community causes. Excluded from this fund are travel requests as well as requests for personal expenses.

Q: Are there funding limits for requests to the Community Fund?
A: Yes. Requests from individuals are limited to $500 per individual/event per year and requests from groups/organizations are limited to $1,500 per group/event per year.

Q: Will I receive a 1099 if I receive a donation from the Community Fund?
A: No. Donations from the Community Fund are considered gifts and therefore exempt from being classified as taxable income.

Fighting Sioux foes say keeping name will hurt UND

By Trevor Born
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) ~ Opponents of a proposed state law that would force the University of North Dakota to keep its Fighting Sioux nickname say retaining the tradition isn't worth the potential damage keeping the mascot could have on its athletics program.

UND is preparing to retire the nickname and a logo depicting an American Indian warrior in August under the terms of a settlement with the NCAA, which considers such mascots hostile and abusive.

The North Dakota Senate's Education Committee spent more than five hours Monday reviewing a proposed law that says the university must keep the Fighting Sioux name and logo. It also instructs Attorney General Wayne Stenehjem to consider suing the NCAA if it penalizes UND for doing so.

The committee plans to vote on the measure Wednesday or early next week, said chairman Sen. Layton Freborg, R-Underwood. Gov. Jack Dalrymple has declined to say whether he will sign the measure if it is ultimately approved.

If UND keeps its name and logo, it would be barred from hosting postseason events. Sen. Mac Schneider, a Grand Forks Democrat who played center on UND's national championship football team in 2001, said the restriction "unquestionably decreases the chances of winning a championship."

"The thought of politicians taking away competitive advantage that our student athletes have earned makes my stomach turn," Schneider said.

Brian Faison, UND's athletic director, said Minnesota will likely leave the WCHA soon, when the Big Ten conference begins offering hockey. Without that conference connection, keeping the nickname could mean ending the schools' storied hockey rivalry, Faison said.

The bill's supporters downplayed what Jody Hodgson, general manager of the Ralph Engelstad Arena, called "these doomsday scenarios." UND plays its hockey games in "The Ralph," which is festooned with thousands of Fighting Sioux logos and other images.

Jon Backes, president of the state Board of Higher Education, said he doubted the NCAA would bend.

"To speculate that the NCAA would change its rule on imagery because the state of North Dakota is unhappy with its policy I think is absolute folly," Backes said.

The NCAA rules require colleges with American Indian nicknames or logos to change them or face sanctions, unless the schools receive permission from the affected Indian tribes to use the name.

UND sued the NCAA over the issue, and the two sides reached a settlement in which the school agreed to get rid of the name and logo unless it obtained permission from the Standing Rock and Spirit Lake Sioux tribes.

Spirit Lake tribal members endorsed the nickname and logo in a 2009 referendum, but the Standing Rock Sioux tribal council, which has said it opposes the nickname, hasn't held a vote.

Backes said the bill's directive that Stenehjem consider an antitrust lawsuit against the NCAA is meaningless, because the state gave up any antitrust claims against the association in its 2007 settlement.

Some also questioned if a legal battle may hurt the school's transition to Division I, which it is set to make next year when it joins the Big Sky Conference.

Big Sky commissioner Doug Fullerton said in a interview on Monday that conference officials haven't questioned UND's membership status because of the legislation. But "there's no question that this kind of ongoing controversy will hurt them,"

Fullerton said the Big Sky expects teams that win its conference titles to advance in national tournaments, which is less likely if the team cannot host a postseason game.

26th Anniversary of Landmark Supreme Court Ruling

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Long time Land Claims Commissioner and Oneida Historian Loretta Metoxen led a discussion on the history of the Oneida land claim in New York state and the future of the claim at a potluck celebrating the 26 anniversary of a landmark Supreme Court ruling that found the state of New York liable for wrongful possession of Oneida's land (see ruling syllabus at bottom of page) on Friday, March 4.

"It was the first major land claims case that was taken through the federal court system, because tribes had previously been preempted from taking their court cases, their cases, their land claims cases into federal court. They had to no standing until the Oneidas brought the first case in 1970 to federal court," explained Metoxen.

The land base had been established in the 1794 Treaty of Canandaigua which reserved land for the Six Nations of the Iroquois Confederacy. Article II of the document states:

"The United States acknowledge the lands reserved to the Oneida, Onondaga and Cayuga Nations, in their respective treaties with the state of New York, and called their reservations, to be their property; and the United States will never claim the same, nor disturb them or either of the Six Nations, nor their Indian friends residing thereon and united with them, in the free use and enjoyment thereof: but the said reservations shall remain theirs, until they choose to sell the same to the people of the United States, who have the right to purchase."

However, the state of New York began illegally obtaining Indian lands in violation of the Nonintercourse Act of 1793 which limits the sale of Indian lands to the Federal Government. As a result, Oneida lost most of its land and a majority of its citizens moved to northeast Wisconsin while another population settled in Ontario, Canada.

> "We have not been paid a red penny or single dime of those damages to date, so it's been 26 years since the Supreme Court."
> – Loretta Metoxen

While the Supreme Court ruling was a positive one for Oneida, efforts to negotiate a settlement with New York have not come to fruition.

"We have not been paid a red penny or single dime of those damages to date, so it's been 26 years since the Supreme Court," said Metoxen.

In 1991, the three Oneida communities signed an agreement, but "Basically, we fell apart because the government of the New York Oneidas decided that they wanted to use this three way agreement to influence the governor to grant them the right to a casino if the New York Oneidas would back off the claim and frustrate the purposes of the claim," she said.

Changes in the make up of the Supreme Court judges could end in a reversal of the 1985 ruling unless a settlement can be negotiated.

"I think there's hope, but the hope is in the negotiations, and people have to press for it," said Metoxen.

v.

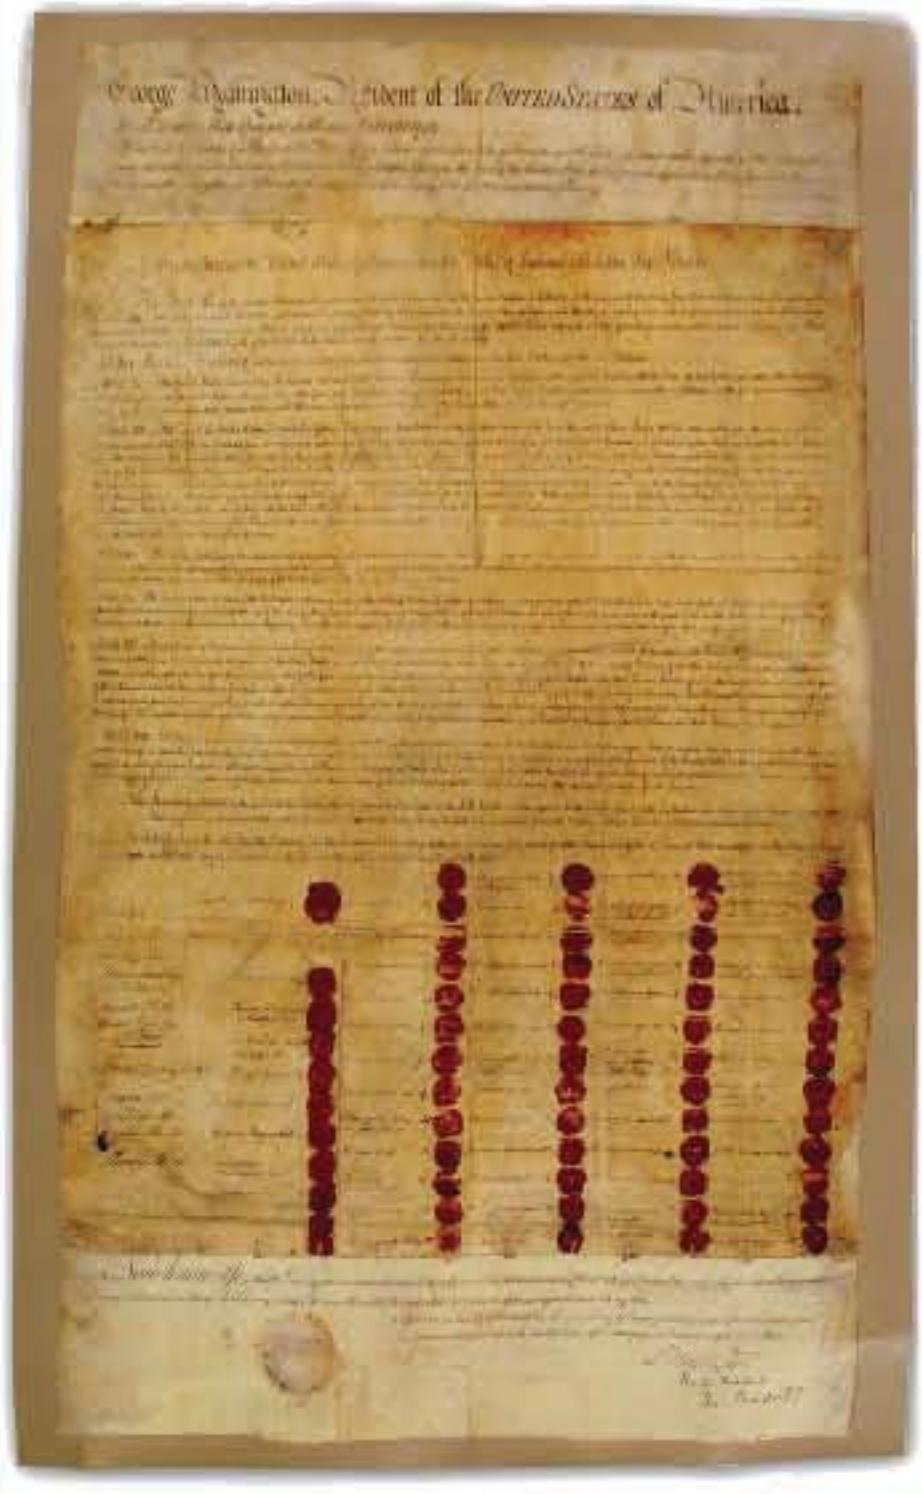
ONEIDA INDIAN NATION OF NEW YORK STATE, etc., et al.

Nos. 83-1065, 83-1240.

Argued Oct. 1, 1984.



Decided March 4, 1985.

Rehearing Denied April 22, 1985.

See 471 U.S. 1062, 105 S.Ct. 2173.

Syllabus

Respondent Indian Tribes (hereafter respondents) brought an action in Federal District Court against petitioner counties (hereafter petitioners), alleging that respondents' ancestors conveyed tribal land to New York State under a 1795 agreement that violated the Nonintercourse Act of 1793—which provided that no person or entity could purchase Indian land without the Federal Government's approval—and that thus the transaction was void. Respondents sought damages representing the fair rental value, for a specified 2-year period, of that part of the land presently occupied by petitioners. The District Court found petitioners liable for wrongful possession of the land in violation of the 1793 Act, awarded respondents damages, and held that New York, a third-party defendant brought into the case by petitioners' cross-claim, must indemnify petitioners for the damages owed to respondents. The Court of Appeals affirmed the liability and indemnification rulings, but remanded for further proceedings on the amount of damages.

Seymour High now offering Oneida language class

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Language is often described as a centerpiece to a culture. As for the Oneida Tribe, that centerpiece is diminishing with many wondering if our culture is next. The Seymour High School saw an opportunity to help and took action.

Oneida Language and Culture is level one class taught by former Cultural Heritage intern Charlie Doxtater. It focuses on basic language, culture and history of the Oneida Tribe. The class was a joint effort, lead by the district, between the school and tribe.

"The class was made possible through a partnership grant through the Department of Public Instruction," said Jenny Kurczek, the district's Director of Curriculum & Instruction. The project is in second, and final, year of the grant.

"We have worked together through the whole process. It's not something that our district has totally taken over," she added.

Doxtater, who has a Cultural linguistic Anthropology degree from the University of Wisconsin – Oshkosh, transitioned easily into the role of teacher.

Oneida VFW honors female veterans

The Robert Cornelius VFW Post #7784 in Oneida honored female veterans during a ceremony on Friday, March 18. The ceremony was not only an honor ceremony, featuring drumming, but also a reminder that women are often forgotten when it comes to utilizing veteran services they have earned. Event organizer Liz Summers identified women as the fastest growing group of veterans.
The veterans were invited to take part in the weekly fish fry at the post along with being recognized by the Oneida community.

Spring means Tree Tapping for Oneida students

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Not too far into spring, students of the Oneida Nation school system experience the process of harvesting sap from maple trees in an effort to produce maple syrup. As a Language & Culture activity, students trek into wooded areas surrounding the schools, learn the steps of tree tapping, as well as the proper Oneida language associated with the process.

Oneida Nation Elementary School Language and Culture teacher Maxine Thomas has been involved with the teaching of tree tapping in the Oneida school system since its introduction in 1981, when the Tribal School began tapping trees at the prompting of Norbert S. Hill, Sr. Maxine recalls, "We hired Sherwin Rice and the Rice family, they're the ones who taught us how to tap the trees. They went and bought all of the equipment and we went to the school and took out kids there and we've been doing it ever since."

Students now learn the scientific process that produces harvestable tree sap, as well as how to use the necessary tools and their Oneida language names. The number of students that participate in this annual event is around 500, 400 from the elementary school and 100 from the high school. The Oneida Veterans offer assistance with the process, "The Veterans come out and they help us, they tell stories to the kids about when they were young and we have all these people sitting out there. It's fun, it's nice."

The process requires patience; thirty-three gallons of sap need to be collected to produce one gallon of syrup. Once enough sap is collected it is boiled down into syrup and bottled with the assistance of the Oneida Cannery. With the final syrup in hand, it is used entirely for the Family Feast event as well as a Pancake Breakfast held with the students and their parents.

Cottrell

Travis Cottrell has joined the Kalihwisaks staff to serve as a Photographer/Reporter. He has previously worked as a Student Intern for the Kalihwisaks. Travis graduated from Saint Norbert College in May of 2009 and hoped to start a career path soon thereafter, however the current state of the job market only offered part-time opportunities. Travis says, "I am thrilled to join the staff of the Kalihwisaks, my previous experience with the newspaper was very enjoyable. I enjoyed working with the Kali staff members as well as carrying out the duties of the position during my internship, so I jumped at the opportunity to join the Kalihwisaks staff."

Aside from his career interests, Travis also enjoys movies and fine arts such as painting, drawing, and photography. He also enjoys playing basketball and baseball.

From 1A/Lang. class

I wanted to be a teacher. I gave tours at the (Oneida Nation) Museum and I always knew I could teach," he said. "It just came natural to get up in front of the class and talk."

The class started out as an eight-week pilot class for no credit. It then turned into a summer school class and moved to the current form it is now; a half-credit class in the Social Studies area. The class was offered for the first time during the second semester of the 2010 – 2011 school year. It is open to any student at any grade level in the high school.

Doxtater is using parts of the curriculum available on the Cultural Heritage's website and with the help of Stephanie Stevens and Forrest Brooks, formulated the foundation for the class.

"Stephanie and Forrest were developing the website and Forrest really helped me develop the eight-week curriculum, Stephanie gave me a lot of posters and different activities for the kids to do," said Doxtater. "They pretty much gift-wrapped it for me."

Doxtater's goals for the students are rather simple but challenging.

"I want them to be able to hold a brief, simple conversation," he said. "It's vocabulary they can use everyday with their moms, dads, grandmas, and grandpas."

With the grant in the final year, the future for the class remains unclear, but Doxtater is looking long term and being able to reach other students in other districts.

"I am thinking an online course. They would load up videos, learn at their own pace or certain times of the day," he said. "To learn the language you need to be face to face, you can't just put on headphones and listen. There is emotion behind it and the simplest way to learn a language is to immerse yourself in it."

The West De Pere, Freedom, and Pulaski school districts were all very interested in offering the class to their students.

Doxtater realizes the importance of language to a culture and wants to do his part.

"Language is your identity, it tells who you are and where you're from," he said. "It basically explains your culture and community. We are revitalizing our language and educating our community."

2010 Oneida Quality of Life Results

Submitted by Oneida Statistics Office

The Oneida Quality of Life survey was administered in August 2010. Surveys were sent to all Oneida households in Brown and Outagamie Counties. The following lists some of the key findings from the survey.

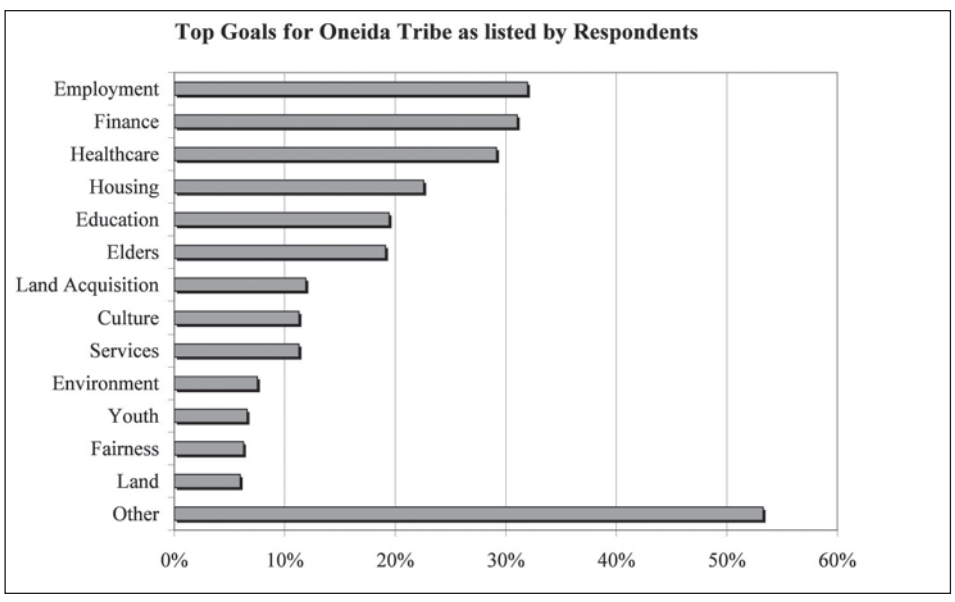
Respondents were asked to list what they think the top three goals for the Oneida Tribe should be. The most common goal listed was Employment. Employment was listed by 32% of respondents who wrote down goals for the Oneida Tribe. The Employment goals included developing new employment opportunities for members, reducing unemployment, and placing more qualified individuals in Oneida Tribal positions. Some respondents also wrote that frontline employees needed raises.

The second most common response was Finance. Financial issues were listed by 31% of the respondents who listed goals. The issues listed regarding Finance included balancing the budget, reducing wasteful spending, and increasing revenue generation. The increase in revenue generation included improving the enterprises that the Oneida Tribe already has and developing new enterprises.

The third most common goal listed was Healthcare. Healthcare was listed by 29% of the respondents who listed goals for the Oneida Tribe. Many respondents just listed healthcare in general. Other respondents listed specific healthcare issues which included improving the quality of the care provided and reducing alcohol and drug dependencies.

Housing had the fourth most common number of responses, followed by Education, then Elders. The chart shows the goals written by the percentage of respondents who listed goals. There were numerous goals listed that did not fit into a common category, so they were combined together in the "Other" category.

Overall, the vast majority of respondents are satisfied with their lives. Just over one-third, 36%, of respondents are very satisfied with their lives, and another 50% are somewhat satisfied. This totals 86% who are satisfied. 10% are somewhat dissatisfied, and 3% are very dissatisfied with their lives.



Respondents who live on the Reservation are slightly more satisfied than those who live off the Reservation in Brown and Outagamie counties, 89% compared to 82%. Only 10% of those who live on the Reservation are dissatisfied compared to 17% of those who live off the Reservation.

Respondents were asked various questions specific to the Reservation. As would be expected a much higher percentage of respondents who do not live on the Reservation chose "N/A" for their response.

The majority of respondents, 70%, consider the Reservation an excellent or good place to live. Of the respondents who gave a rating, a much higher percentage of respondents who live on the Reservation think the Reservation is an excellent or good place to live, 82% compared to only 63% of those who live off the Reservation in Brown and Outagamie counties.

65% of respondents think that the Reservation is an excellent or good place to raise a family. Of those who gave a rating, 73% of those who live on the Reservation consider the Reservation as an excellent or good place to raise a family compared to only 62% of those who live off the Reservation.

The majority of respondents, 64%, think the Reservation is an excellent or good place to retire. Of those who gave a rating, 78% of respondents who live on the Reservation think the Reservation is an excellent place to retire compared to only 61% of those who live off the Reservation.

	Excellent	Good	Fair	Poor	N/A
Oneida Reservation overall as a place to live	20%	50%	19%	3%	7%
Oneida Reservation as a place to raise a family	18%	47%	22%	4%	8%
Oneida Reservation as a place to retire	23%	45%	19%	7%	6%

Services provided by Oneida Legal Resource Center

Submitted by Attorney Charlene Smith
Legal Resource Center

The Legal Resource Center (LRC) is for tribal members who have legal issues and tribal employees who have employment issues. The LRC staff is available for free legal consultations by appointment.

Due to the expansion of the Oneida tribal jurisdiction with the recent adoption of tribal laws relating to family law, more cases will be heard in the Oneida Tribal Judicial System (OTJS) for members who would otherwise have to file and appear in state court. This is an opportunity for members to have their legal disputes addressed/settled in their own court by tribal judicial officers. It is beneficial for the tribe as a whole as it exercises our sovereign right to self govern.

The services are offered to Oneida tribal members for a fee. The legal services include family law litigation at the OTJS, pro-se divorce paperwork, name changes, wills, power of attorney documents, eviction defense (OHA and DOLM only), small claims, and legal procedure information. There may be legal issues that the LRC staff is not proficient in, but the staff will do their best to point the member in the right direction to get their legal questions answered and/or legal issues resolved. The LRC attorney also provides assistance and/or representation for tribal members in criminal matters and family law issues in local state courts.

The LRC continues to assist Oneida employees who work on the program side with their issues of employee dispute. An employee who has an employment dispute may consult with one of the LRC paralegals in regard to their rights and due process. There is no fee for this service.

Please call the LRC for more information or an appointment at (920) 496-5310.

The LRC is located at Ridgeview Plaza, in Suite 7 at 3759 w. Mason St.

Treasurer's Report

By Cristina Danforth
Tribal Treasurer

My current term as Treasurer of the Oneida tribe has allowed me an opportunity to change the dynamics and infrastructure of the tribe's fiscal environment. One of my goals for Oneida was long range planning and to create more efficiencies in an effort to strengthen and improve its fiscal stability. To this end, I implemented a three year budget cycle, reduced expenditure allowance in discretionary areas, and improved planning for our operational fund units. All of these changes were accomplished and implemented while replacing the Chief Financial Officer, hiring a new Budget Director, filling a vacant Controller position, and after analyzing the financial procedures in place. With a well-placed team, we accomplished efficiencies through new financial operating procedures, consolidating expense lines, fiscal planning, and holding management accountable to their budgets. These efforts were further driven by a stressed economic condition and the onset of a recession.

Under my supervision, the Finance team comprised of the CFO and Chief Financial Advisor, through their diligence secured a AA- bond rating from Standard & Poor's rating service. The bond rating is significant because our retail enterprise revenues were deemed sufficient enough to pledge repayment of this debt without pledging our gaming revenues. Gaming is more than 60% of our revenue source, yet we did not want to rely on this income stream. The S& P review team questioned and scrutinized our tribal allocation plan for per capita and General Tribal Council's (GTC) ability to impact and approve our budget. Governance at the GTC level is community involvement, yet we were able to show fiscal stability with historic trends that are fiscally sound and prudent. The par amount of the bond issuance is $30,075,000 and will be used to fund projects for an Oneida Residential Community Care Center, Milwaukee Community Center, energy efficient products, athletic and community events area, sewer and water projects, park upgrades, and government and non-profit building upgrades.

The process to complete the bonding package, and thus to put the bonds out for sale was delayed from late September to January due to Oneida Business Committee (OBC) actions and the need to hire a new senior bond manager to underwrite the issuance of this bond. Externally, this delay was from the inability of RW Baird & Co. (Baird) to attract sufficient interest from investors, and consequently we had to postpone the sale of the bonds. A second delay was triggered by the OBC itself. In late September, we appointed Bank of America/Merrill Lynch as our new bond manager/underwriter and retained Baird as co-manager. On October 13, 2010, the OBC took action "to direct the bonding process not continue until the underwriting contracts are available that outline the terms, and all fees assessed and the optional underwriters be provided" (Motion by Trish King and seconded by Brandon Stevens). Even though the Finance team recommended the best possible firm, Bank of America/Merrill Lynch, to get the deal done, the OBC still wanted more details. Subsequently, the OBC went with Bank of America/Merrill Lynch and the bonds were successfully sold. Not only did Bank of America/Merrill Lynch sell the bonds as promised, they were oversubscribed generating $49,575,000 in bond orders. While these delays cost the tribe more money, time, and effort. None of these delays were due to the Finance team's due diligence and efforts. I once again commend Larry Barton, CFO, and Terry Cornelius, CFA, for their efforts to stay on course. More specific details can be found in the OBC minutes of October 13, and November 10, 2010 respectively.

As you all are aware, we are upon another election cycle for the Business Committee and other boards and committees. I am excited that we are finally having the first ever Primary Election on May 7, 2011. This is a historic event and a very positive opportunity for the Oneida tribe as a whole. Be sure to cast your vote and continue your efforts on July 16, 2011 for the final election.

Respectfully,
Tina Danforth

Sakoli:

After careful thought and consideration, I have decided not to seek re-election to the Oneida Business Committee this coming July. Serving the Oneida People for the past three terms has been a true honor and an incredible gift, and I will always reflect on this experience with a great feeling of accomplishment.

Although I submit my notice now, there are still five months and many things we hope to accomplish before this term ends. As the Legislative Operating Committee winds up our legislative agenda, we are requesting your continued support to finalize some of the most important initiatives that we have worked on this term – laws that will strengthen our foundation as a sovereign people, that will improve our services, protect our children, and enhance the Tribe's ability to continue to govern itself successfully and independently. In particular, our goals are to finish the Judiciary law, Legislative Procedures Act, Indian Preference in Contracting Law and to make strides in creating the Oneida Children's Code before this term is over.

My tenure on the OBC (and thus the Legislative Operating Committee) has been exciting, challenging, and ever so humbling. Public service is an incredible way to feel the heartbeat of the Onʌyote?a·ká Nation - it offers a deep perspective into who we are, where we have come from, what ties us together, and our collective hopes and dreams.

The ancient belief that "everything is connected" has taken on new relevance for me. Serving on the OBC is an excellent way to understand how the actions taken seven generations ago shape us today and how the actions we take today will affect the next seven generations, for we are representing and serving not only the membership of today, but also those who came before, and generations yet to come. From my perspective there is no greater honor, nor any more personally rewarding experience.

In so many ways, the past nine years have allowed me to witness firsthand the strength, perseverance, determination - and yes, even stubbornness - that binds the Oneida together as a people. It is beautiful to watch the slow but resolute resurgence of our traditions, language, heritage, and culture; to hear our youth speaking in the same language and taking part in the same ceremonies as our ancestors. It is also heartening to see more of our land base returning to the Tribe and Tribal jurisdiction. There were times in recent centuries (and in some cases, recent decades) where our land, language, traditions, and identity as a people were almost lost to us, and the fact that we have managed to preserve these and to grow them again, is a testament to our determination as a people.

With the help of so many individuals from all walks of life, the LOC has worked to create new laws that strengthen our Tribal infrastructure, foster a Tribal economy, protect our People, and most importantly, reiterate and reinforce our status as a self-governing sovereign. This sort of nation-building is a meticulous and somewhat painstaking process, but it is necessary. The laws the LOC and OBC bring forward are intended to support the Tribe as it grows and as we adapt to the world around us; as we strive to provide the best lives we can for our people. I think we have done well, and I am truly excited to see what the future holds for our great Nation.

So many people have made my journey incredible, and I want to take this opportunity to recognize them:

I offer my sincerest gratitude to my husband Harlan for his enduring support, acceptance, patience, and respect during my tenure in office, even though it was probably extremely difficult at times.

Thank you to all of my other family members and friends, for your support and love. I am grateful to those who have known me from before I ran for office, who can and do offer up unvarnished opinions and steadfast, unqualified love; and I am also grateful for the new friends and family members who have entered my life since I took office, bringing fresh perspectives.

I want to express my deepest gratitude to the membership – for three terms, you have entrusted me with the responsibilities of safeguarding and growing our nation, and I hope that I have lived up to your expectations.

For the experiences and education garnered from working with other Tribes, other national groups representing Indian Country, and other municipal leaders, I will always be grateful. These teachings helped me understand and appreciate my responsibility as a Tribal Leader, and how to use that responsibility when dealing with political circles of influence.

And of course, I cannot forget the talented employees, co-workers and community members with whom I share a common goal – building a better future for our People. Together we have made great strides to improve our great Nation. Many people have helped me keep an open mind, to be creative, to be a visionary, and to focus on making decisions based on the best interests of the people, and I am truly thankful for that.

Finally, in closing, I wish to extend a heartfelt thank you to those stepping up to the plate to lead this great Nation, and wish all of the candidates for the upcoming tribal elections the best of luck.

To My Dear Patients

Well, the verdict is in: It is with great sadness that I have to share with you that the Oneida Health Center Director, Dr. R. Vir, has advised me that we will no longer provide and thus you will no longer be able to receive in house diagnosis and treatment by a competent certified Urologist.

Some of you will be able to be referred to the outside Urologists, and this probably at greater expense, but some of you who are not eligible and who don't have insurance might be left out in the cold.

Initially, in November 2010 your appointments for urology were canceled; I felt compelled to write an article in Kalihwisaks to share with you what was happening:

The reason given then was that too many nurses had quit or been let go and thus no adequate nursing support was available for the specialists like the urologist, ENT specialist, Allergist etc. The reason given to me in writing today was also BUDGETARY CONSTRAINTS.

My love for the tribe and my concern for my patients prompted me to offer my services free of charge - which I had already done for 4 years about 10 years ago; my offer was not even acknowledged BUT STILL STANDS!

When I was the interim director of the Oneida Health Center it was my plan to expand the in house services and procedures we could offer the Tribal members in order to reduce the need for outside consultation. I assume that the present tribal leadership has different plans.

In the past the Tribe has been very supportive in the expansion of the urology department, in purchasing up to date equipment and supporting continuing education, and I am very grateful for that; hopefully this expensive equipment will be put to use again later when this unfortunate decision will be reversed.

I think it is important that Tribal citizens keep close communication with and supervision of their Oneida Health Center and reinstatement of a Health Board might just do that!

I have always enjoyed my work at the Oneida Health Center and will miss my patients, my interaction with the Tribe and the clinic staff!

If I can be of further assistance I will always be ready to do so and available by phone: 813-784-4670.

Elder's Concerns

To Elderly Services,

Listed below are some concerns expressed by participants in the elder home chore program.

Clients are not informed when a worker doesn't come to work. Some workers call their clients directly and some do not. Quite often a client will not receive a call from anybody advising whether their worker is going to be late or not show up at all. If they do "call in" to their supervisor, this information is not passed on to clients who are left waiting. When clients call Elderly Services themselves, no one knows anything, including their supervisor. They have a "don't know, don't care" attitude and clients are left hanging.

Heavy cleaning is another issue. Please advise what is "heavy cleaning" to both workers and clients. Some workers define dusting as "heavy cleaning" and do not dust anything. Whose responsibility is it to inform clients what the workers can and cannot do as the choice is now made by the worker while on the job. Some workers have been asked to leave a household due to their unwillingness to do what is asked and because of their poor attitude. If a dispute arises between a client and a

Habitat for Humanity and Oneida working together to meet housing needs

By Scott Denny
Comprehensive Housing Coordinator

The Oneida Tribe and Habitat for Humanity have been working together in an effort to increase the awareness of what Habitat for Humanity can offer eligible Oneida families. At this time Habitat for Humanity has already selected partner families for 2011. Increased awareness of what Habitat has to offer will help Oneida families determine their interests in applying for 2012 Habitat partnerships.

As a step toward increasing such awareness, Habitat for Humanity has answered the following questions.

What is Habitat for Humanity?

Habitat for Humanity is a faith-based, nonprofit, worldwide Christian housing ministry that's open to people of all faiths. We seek to eliminate substandard housing and homelessness from the world and make decent shelter a matter of acknowledged necessity and action. To accomplish these goals, we invite people of all backgrounds, races and religions to build houses together in partnership with families in need.

Habitat for Humanity International was founded in 1976 by Millard and Linda Fuller, with Jimmy Carter and his wife becoming avid spokespersons for Habitat in 1984. Habitat for Humanity International has built over 400,000 houses around the world, providing more than 2 million people in 3,000 communities with safe, decent, affordable shelter.

How does Habitat benefit my family?

Habitat homes benefit more than just our partner families. There are benefits to the community as well. Benefits for your family and community include:

- you providing a house your family can call home
- improved living conditions for you and your family
- an affordable mortgage that makes home ownership easier to accomplish
- a financial investment for your and your family's future
- improved performance of your children in school, both socially and academically
- improved property values for the surrounding community
- more stable neighborhoods
- greater community involvement of homeowners compared to renters

Is there a Habitat office in the Green Bay/Oneida Area?

Yes. The Greater Green Bay Habitat for Humanity (GGBHFH) office serves the Green Bay area to include the portion of the Oneida Reservation within Brown County.

GGBHFH's mission statement is to "work in partnership with God and people everywhere, from all walks of life, to develop communities with people in need by building and renovating houses, so that there are decent houses in decent communities."

Since our founding in 1987, GGBHFH has built homes with 53 conscientious, hard-working, and responsible families.

A team of volunteers during a "women build" day work together to frame a home. GGBHFH welcomes volunteers from all skill levels; no expericen necessary!

Who is eligible for a home through Habitat?

Our partner families are Brown County residents who must go through an extensive screening process. They are selected based on their need, ability to pay (a mortgage and down payment), and willingness to partner with our organization. Additionally, our partner families must also provide documentation of residency and eligibility to work in the U.S.

- Need is defined as unsanitary, unsafe or unaffordable current living conditions (cost of current housing and utilities is more than 35% of the monthly income before taxes).
- Ability to pay is determined through the information provided on the application, pay stubs, benefit statements, previously filed federal tax returns, and credit reports.

Each partner family receives home-buyer counseling and is required to invest 300-500 "sweat equity" hours to build their home and homes for other partner families. This means that not only do our partner families become proud homeowners, but they learn valuable building skills, and forge long lasting friendships with the many volunteers who help them build their home.

How do I begin the process?

The first step in becoming a Habitat homeowner is to attend an informational meeting. The purpose of these meetings is to inform potential applicants of the qualifications and requirements of the program, and to give the opportunity to fill out an application. If you would like to be informed of an upcoming information meeting, you can submit a form on our website: www.greenbayhabitat.org/HomeOwnership/HowToApply or call the office and ask to speak to the family services coordinator (920) 593-3921.

If you plan to attend a meeting, you will need to bring copies of:

- Federal Income Tax returns (form 1040) for past two years filed
- Current Pay Stubs (last 2)
- Current Bank Statements
- Current Benefits Statements (SSI, SSDI, Food Stamps, Section 8 Housing, etc)
- Child Support Court Order and payment history for past two years
- Name, address, and phone number of current landlord
- All monthly bills, including balances and monthly payment amounts
- Proof of residency and eligibility to work in the U.S

To demonstrate a willingness to partner with us, and put in the necessary volunteer hours to complete the Habitat home, we require potential Habitat homeowner candidates to complete 8 hours of community service at any nonprofit organization in Brown County. You will need to mail, fax, or drop off the completed community service form at our Habitat office within 30 days of the application meeting.

Once all of the above have been received, Habitat for Humanity will begin the financial review of your application. The entire Habitat application process will take 60-90 days before you are informed of the final decision.

How does the Oneida Tribe and Habitat intend to work together?

GGBHFH views the Oneida Nation as a respected and underserved part of our community. A series of meetings has taken place between members of the Green Bay Habitat Board & staff and Scott Denny, the Oneida Nation Comprehensive Housing Coordinator, the Oneida Tribe's Community Development Planning Committee and the Oneida Tribe's Housing Task Force to explore ways in which Habitat and the Oneida Tribe can work together.

A potential course of action might include:

- Distributing information to Tribal members to create awareness of the Habitat program and criteria (as evidenced by this article)
- Holding an informational meeting or application meeting on the reservation
- Building a home in partnership with an Oneida Tribal member

Lady Thunderhawks battle through WIAA playoffs

Kali photos/Nate Wisneski & Travis Cottrell

The Oneida Nation High School girls basketball team took to the court for their historic WIAA playoff basketball run. The Lady Thunderhawks advanced to the Regional Final in their bracket but fell to St. Mary's Central 42 - 64. Kanani Nunies lead the way with 25 points. No girls basketball team from Oneida has ever advanced to the Regional Final in the school's history.

The Lady Thunderhawks defeated Valley Christian in the opening round by a score of 49 - 12 and were led by Eva Powless' 16 points. They then defeated N.E.W. Lutheran in the second round in overtime 62 - 61 and again were led by Powless with 29 points.

ACLU honors Munson

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Barbara Munson was honored by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) of Wisconsin with the Eunice Z. Edgar Lifetime Achievement Award at its annual Bill of Rights Celebration held Saturday, March 19 in Milwaukee.

Munson was recognized for her many years of work to encourage schools to eliminate race-based mascots. As chair of the "Indian" Mascot and Logo Taskforce for the Wisconsin Indian Education Association since its inception in 1997, the Taskforce actively worked to support the 31 Wisconsin school districts that have retired race-based mascots and was instrumental in the passage of Act 250 in 2010.

"I really felt good about it because Wisconsin Indian Education Association and all of our allies both Native people and non-Native people have been working on this for a long, long time, and it was just good to see that an organization like the ACLU appreciated the work that we've been doing for many years to deal with this form or discrimination in the public schools," said Munson.

Barbara Munson with Aasif Mandvi of the Daily Show with Jon Stewart at the ACLU of Wisconsin's annual Bill of Rights Celebration Saturday, March 19.

The event also allowed Munson do more advocacy and education facing the issues of race-based mascots.

"The ACLU was really gracious and really filled a lot of requests. I asked them if Richie Plass could be there with the Bittersweet Winds Display," she said.

Munson explained the ACLU helped her when she began to fight for the removal of race-based mascots in 1994 by recommending a lawyer.

"Jackie Boynton, who was that attorney, has become a lifelong friend of mine, and we've worked on a number of different kinds of issues over the years. As it turns out at this point in time, she is again my attorney now as we are working our way through the constitutional challenge brought against Act 250 in Mukwonago," she said.

Munson felt the issue had come full circle, and was appreciative of the award.

"I got a feeling that as far as social justice issues and people being willing to be good strong allies with one another that the ACLU and Native people can look to one another as allies, long term allies," said Munson.

worker, the worker should call the supervisor while in the presence of the client. A promise of a call from the supervisor at a later date sometimes does not happen until a few days later or not at all.

When a client is sharing their home with a younger adult what are the guidelines for services? Are these services concrete and do they apply to all clients equally? There is uncertainty with clients and workers as to what the worker can do in this instance. Also, how much cleaning time is allowed per household? Visits range anywhere from on to two hours and basic cleaning of a household requires at least two hours.

Workers have been accused of stealing and clients are now obligated to stay home while the worker is in their home. Are workers bonded and will a client's presence really prevent theft? Is any action taken when a worker is accused of theft and if so what are the procedures? Accusations of theft should be taken seriously on behalf of the client.

Workers and clients would benefit from cleaning and customer service training. Workers need skills to perform their duties in a professional manner and need to strive for 100% customer satisfaction.

Home chore service should be a benefit and not an issue to be dealt with on a weekly basis. As you know, many elders do not complain to Elderly Services because they don't want to be labeled as trouble makers. They prefer to talk to family, friends, etc., and in the mean time they continue to put up with bad service which should be unacceptable to Elderly Services. Clients deserve to be treated with respect and courtesy and not left in the dark with many unanswered questions and at the mercy and discretion of the worker.

Sincerely,
Submitted by Lou A. Green on behalf of Oneida elders who will remain anonymous

Community Not Lawsuits

My name is Bob Van De Hey and I am running for the position of Trustee in the Village of Hobart. Some may already know me through my work as the Fire Chief in Hobart and other community events. In my bid for village board member, I would like the community to know where I stand on the relationship between Hobart and Oneida. Although we are separate governments, we share the same land base and we are a community. We need to move our communities toward cooperation and compromise.

I know that many Oneida members who own land within the reservation boundaries are obligated to pay property tax. I am also aware of the fact that the Oneida itself is the largest taxpayer in Hobart. Of Oneida's approximately 3,000 employees, 1,700 perform governmental tasks, like the Oneida school system, social services, department of public works and 24/7 law enforcement. These are services that property taxes normally pay for, instead the Oneida Tribe pays for these and others at no cost to local governments. But understand, Hobart also provides services; fire protection, road maintenance, law enforcement, waste removal, recycling, etc. These mutually beneficial services need to be assessed and a value established so we can negotiate a service agreement that benefits our collective community. Right now both sides feel slighted.

I am very concerned about the 43% of the current Hobart tax levy that goes toward legal fees on litigation mainly against Oneida. These taxpayers are both Hobart and Oneida citizens. Oneida Tribal members who are also Hobart taxpayers are paying DOUBLE - once for Hobart to bring a court case against Oneida and again for Oneida to countersue. This simply does not make sense.

We need to understand what the issues truly are and begin building a process which allows us to work smarter by better utilizing all of our resources. I want to be part of a team that reaches across the table and makes positive things happen. This isn't going to happen through litigation. INVEST IN OUR COMMUNITY, NOT IN LAWSUITS.

Bob Van De Hey

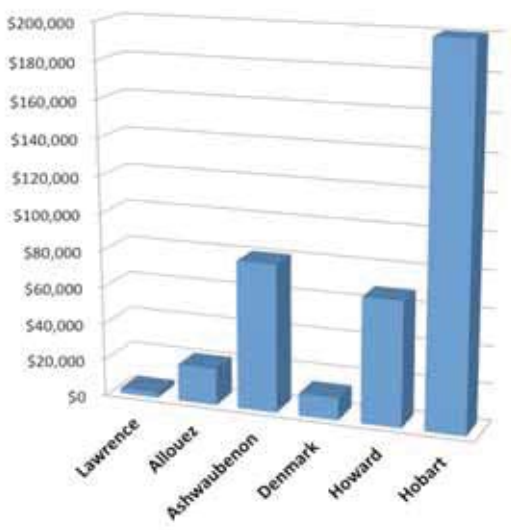
An Open Appeal to the Taxpayers of Hobart:

Let's Cooperate, Not Litigate!



The endless cycle of litigation between the Village of Hobart and the Oneida Tribe must end.

Disagreements between the Oneida Tribe and the Village of Hobart have cost both taxpayers of Hobart and the Tribe millions in legal fees alone, not to mention the cost of lost opportunities that could be realized by all of us working together.

FIRST, THE COSTS:

- Between 2007 and through 2010, the Village of Hobart spent at least $1.4 million on litigation. While some of these fees have been spent on litigation with other local governments, much has been spent challenging the sovereignty of the Oneida Nation and opposing the Tribe's right to self-governance.
- These legal fees exceeded budgeted expenditures by over one-half million dollars, a cost overrun of 63%, that was never debated or authorized by a vote in open session at Village board meetings.
- Over the past four years, the $1.4 million in legal expenses accounted for 43% of the general fund tax levy.
- The final bill hasn't come due yet. In the most recent Village budget documents, 2010 costs are estimated to be $300,000 when the budget called for an expenditure of "only" $233,000, and the litigation continues.

Legal Fees budgeted for 2011 in Hobart and Surrounding Communities

To put this in perspective, consider that 43 cents of every tax dollar spent by Hobart for general government purposes goes to legal fees, which have averaged $352,549 per year over the past four (4) years. No other neighboring community spends nearly as much. The Village of Ashwaubenon, for instance, budgeted only $20,000 for legal fees in 2011.

Hobart claims it has never "initiated" litigation against the Oneida Tribe. That is simply not true; yet, that is what they tell taxpayers. They also claim they have prevailed in all past cases; again, not true. Are they distorting the record to justify the huge expenditures and cost overruns?

There is a solution. A February 24, 2010 editorial in the Green Bay Press Gazette summed it up this way:

"Until the Village of Hobart recognizes the sovereignty of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin, we can expect a seemingly endless cycle of litigation."

Taking a look at Housing: Behavioral characteristics and the housing need

As a branch of the series of articles on the economic effects on the Oneida community Kalihwisaks reporter Nate Wisneski will focus on the Oneida Housing Authority and their role in serving the Oneida Tribe.

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Housing supply and demand is not a problem centralized in Oneida but felt across the country.

Scott Denny, Oneida Housing Authority's (OHA) Housing Coordinator, feels to simply supply more units is looking at the issue in the simplest form.

"In addition to housing inventory being a challenge there are many other factors contributing to the overall challenge of Oneida families being able to obtain adequate housing," said Denny.

He points to a broad list of behavioral characteristics that usually link a person to a housing need. They include low income, chemical dependencies, poor employment marketability, criminal activity or history, inadequate education, teen or young adult pregnancy, and social and domestic, issues.

"In the majority of cases there is more than one challenge evident, therefore making the situation for the individuals or family fairly complex." said Denny.

Denny feels like certain behavioral characteristics are linked to others and usually will appear together.

"When factors such as divorce, alcohol dependency, uncontrollable temper, low-income, drug use, and an abusive relationship are present there is a good chance things like too much debt, bad credit, criminal history, non-payment of rent, drug crimes and acts of violence (are factors as well)," Denny said.

These social issues are viewed differently in the conventional housing market verse the income-based market that OHA is in. Many landlords are not concerned with individuals or families behavioral characteristics as long as rent is paid and no damage is done to property. Denny feels income-based housing agencies, along with those in the conventional landscape, have a responsibility to protect the well being of families and communities.

"The agencies providing service also have a social responsibility to not only the families they serve but neighboring families, neighborhoods, and communities," said Denny. "They (must) provide safe and healthy living environments. If the landlord fails to do so the landlord will be held accountable regardless if they are conventional or income-based."

The OHA was established in 1963 and consisted of officers Artley Skenandore Sr., Norbert Hill Sr., Ruth Baird, Oscar Archiquette and Vivian DeCoteau. In 1966 the first housing project, Site 1, was developed with 24 rental units. Today, OHA owns and manages 258 rental units and 81 home ownership units with 1019 individuals being served by agency.

Wisconsin state officials see value in drug court

Wisconsin Rapids Daily Tribune

WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis. (AP) ~ As jails across central Wisconsin reach and exceed capacities, local officials are working to find alternatives to locking people up for crimes.

One of the main goals is preventing future crimes, Wood County District Attorney John Henkelmann said.

"That's why we have drug court, for example; drug court has a better success rate than sending people to jail," Henkelmann said.

Wood County's Adult Drug Treatment Court is a diversion program that gives nonviolent, drug-dependent felons an alternative to a long prison sentence. It's one of several diversion programs in Wood and Portage counties.

Anyone who spends time in a county jail will discover quickly it is a lot of down time, said Attorney Dave Dickmann, who oversees four public defender offices in central Wisconsin.

"They're not doing anything; they're not learning a lot; they're just hanging out; they're costing taxpayers money," Dickmann said.

Portage County has a diversion volunteerism program, said Attorney Melissa Dalkert, public defender. It matches misdemeanor offenders with a community mentor to create goals to help the offender straighten out his or her life. The goals can include things such as furthering one's education or finding a job.

Other programs created in the past several years include an intensive supervision program for drunken driving defendants in Portage County and a victim impact panel for convicted drunken drivers in Wood County. The Portage County program is one that defendants enter before they're convicted and gives them the chance to reduce their jail sentences, Dalkert said. The Wood County program involves victims of drunken drivers speaking to those convicted of the crime. It doesn't reduce jail time, but it gives the drivers a chance to learn how drunken driving has hurt people.

Programs such as drug court change people's lives, Wood County Circuit Judge Todd Wolf said. Intensive supervision and frequent drug and alcohol testing helps participants become sober and drug free. It gives them new contacts and makes it easier for them to stay clean and sober when they finish the program, Wolf said.

Judges also are becoming a little more creative when sentencing, Dickmann said. At times, they will order defendants to write letters of apology to their victims or, on occasion, an essay explaining the impact of a crime.

"It strikes me as appropriate, because those people must face what happened and the consequences," Dickmann said.

Community service also has become fairly routine, Dickmann said. It's a good alternative to fines, which many defendants can't afford.

The goal of all the alternative courts and punishments is to stop the cycle of repeat offenders, Henkelmann said.

"Hopefully, it does have an impact; we hope and believe that it does," he said.

Legal Notice

Important information about the $3.4 billion Indian Trust Settlement

For current or former IIM account holders, Owners of land held in trust or restricted status, or their heirs

There is a proposed Settlement in Cobell v. Salazar, a class action lawsuit about individual Indian land held in trust by the federal government. This notice is just a summary. For details, call the toll-free number or visit the website listed below.

The lawsuit claims that the federal government violated its duties by (a) mismanaging trust funds/assets, (b) improperly accounting for those funds, and (c) mismanaging trust land/assets. The trust funds include money collected from farming and grazing leases, timber sales, mining, and oil and gas production from land owned by American Indians/Alaska Natives.

If you are included in the Settlement, your rights will be affected. To object to the Settlement, to comment on it, or to exclude yourself, you should get a detailed notice at www.IndianTrust.com or by calling 1-800-961-6109.

Can I get money?

There are two groups or "Classes" in the Settlement eligible for payment. Each Class includes individual IIM account holders or owners of land held in trust or restricted status who were alive on September 30, 2009.

Historical Accounting Class Members

- Had an open individual Indian Money account ("IIM") anytime between October 25, 1994 and September 30, 2009, and
- The account had at least one cash transaction.
- Includes estates of account holders who died as of September 30, 2009, if the IIM account was still open on that date.

Trust Administration Class Members

- Had an IIM account recorded in currently available data in federal government systems any time from approximately 1985 to September 30, 2009, or
- Owned trust land or land in restricted status as of September 30, 2009.
- Includes estates of landowners who died as of September 30, 2009 where the trust interests were in probate as of that date. This means you have asked a court to transfer ownership of the deceased landowner's property.

An individual may be included in one or both Classes.

What does the Settlement provide?

- A $1.5 billion fund to pay those included in the Classes.
- A $1.9 billion fund to buy small interests in trust or restricted land owned by many people.
- Up to $60 million to fund scholarships to improve access to higher education for Indian youth.
- A government commitment to reform the Indian trust management and accounting system.

How much can I get?

- Historical Accounting Class Members will each get $1,000.
- Trust Administration Class Members will get at least $500.
- If you own a small parcel of land with many other people, the federal government may ask you to sell it. You will be offered fair market value. If you sell your land it will be returned to tribal control.

If you believe you are a member of either Class and are not receiving IIM account statements, you will need to call the toll-free number or visit the website to register.

What are my other rights?

- If you wish to keep your right to sue the federal government about the claims in this Settlement, you must exclude yourself by April 20, 2011.
- If you stay in the Settlement you can object to or comment on it by April 20, 2011. The detailed notice explains how to exclude yourself or object/comment.

The U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia will hold a hearing on June 20, 2011, to consider whether to approve the Settlement. It will also consider a request for attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses in the amount of $99.9 million. However, Class Counsel has fee agreements that would pay them 14.75% of the funds created for the Classes, which could result in an award of $223 million. The Court may award more or less than these amounts based on controlling law. If approved, these payments and related costs will come out of the Settlement funds available for payment to Class Members.

If you wish, you or your own lawyer may ask to appear and speak at the hearing at your own cost. For more information, call or go to the website shown below or write to Indian Trust Settlement, P.O. Box 9577, Dublin, OH 43017-4877.

Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems

Tsyunhehkwʌ́ Welcomes the Spring of 2011

Jeff Metoxen
Director Tsyunhehkwʌ́

With the beginning of our 2011 seasons we hope this finds our community looking forward to our upcoming Spring.

Our Annual Seed and Plant Distribution (S&P) will again begin in May. Notices will be posted and sent out in the coming weeks. It has been inspiring to see that for the last few years our annual S&P has distributed all of its contents in the first few days of operation. Last year all our products were sold within the first week. Our annual list of workshop activities will be posted very soon. We are always trying to meet your needs and request through our activities, if there is something specific you would like us to consider please contact me directly.

One of key areas that we are excited to report about is that our layers are back in production in a big way! Farm Fresh Eggs are available at retail and can also be picked up at our Ag site, 139 Riverdale Drive. Production has been great this Winter and we currently have plenty in stock for your enjoyment and meals! Our Cannery is going through some much needed renovations, which began in January and is not expected to be completed until the end of March. We tried to make arrangements so that the products provided would not be reduced. However, due to unforeseen circumstances we are not able to provide all products. What is available is being sold at the former Tsyunhehkwa retail.

With another growing season approaching remember to contact us for your tilling needs and sign up for our limited space in the Community Gardens off Highway 54 near Green Bay and our newest location of Three Sisters in Green Bay. Contact us for eligibility requirements. Any comments please let us know, we look forward to hearing from you.

For the last few years many of our articles have been providing information on our Community's Food Security and Food Sovereignty. In this article we shared updates and highlights of the work we apply to these areas.

Food Security: When all people at all times have access to sufficient, safe, nutritious food to maintain a healthy and active life.

Food Sovereignty: The right of peoples, communities and countries to define their own agricultural, labor, fishing, food and land policies which are ecologically, socially, economically and culturally appropriate to their unique circumstances.

One of the larger projects we continue to work on is the Oneida Food Assessment, which included the teams of Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems (OCIFS) and the Oneida Living in Balance (OLB). We wanted to make sure that the community, our leaders and decision makers were aware of the information gathered by the printing of those articles in this and other publications. If you are interested in the entire packet please contact my office.

The Tsyunhehkwʌ́ greenhouse, used to grow a significant amount of plant life used by the department, now uses the suns energy to power itself. The pictured solar panels convert the sun's rays into useable energy that is then harnessed to power the greenhouse.

A cracked farm fresh egg (top) with a cracked conventional egg (bottom). The yolk of the farm fresh eggs is much thicker and darker in color than the store bought egg. Additionally, the egg white of a farm fresh egg is much clearer than the conventional egg, which has a neon yellow yolk and a translucent yellow egg white. The color and consistency of the yolk and egg are largely due to the chicken's diet.

OCIFS Sponsors CDPC Presentation on Organic Beef Farm

The Community Development Planning Committee will be hosting an informational presentation next week Thursday, April 7th, at the Business Committee Conference Room. Mike Hansen from Good Earth Farms will be speaking about organic grass fed Belted Galloway beef, the advantages of grass fed animals and the process to achieve both socially and economically sound results. Mike operates an 80 acre organic farm in Milladore, Wisc., an operation that has been nationally recognized by organic foods and services organizations. For more info on their operation, visit http://www.goodearthfarms.com.

You are invited to attend this meeting and ask any questions you may have. The presentation will take place over the noon hour, so a light lunch will be provided. We look forward to all community participation and input!!!!

For more info please contact Bill Vervoort, OCIFS Coordinator, at 920-496-7423.

Food Assessment Survey Results
(Issue 5 of 6)

This is the fifth in a series of articles on the Oneida Community Food Assessment (OCFA) and the community survey information we gathered. We will be providing charts & data from the Community Survey that will show what we are learning in our final articles.

What is Food Security:
When all people at all times have access to sufficient, safe, nutritious food to maintain a healthy and active life.

What is Food Sovereignty:
The right of peoples, communities and countries to define their own agricultural, labor, fishing, food and land policies which are ecologically, socially, economically and culturally appropriate to their unique circumstances.

Oneida Libraries to Receive Grant

Contributed photo

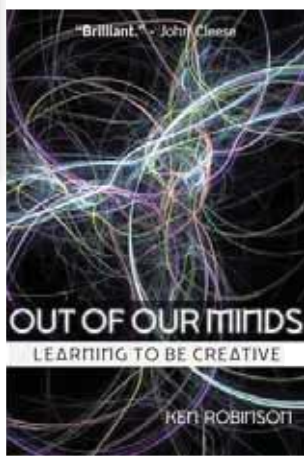
This summer "Grandpa" Fred Turk will be back, and we will be able to offer a more exciting and diverse Summer Reading Program at both libraries than ever before!

The Oneida Community Public Library and Green Earth Branch Library, on behalf of the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin, were awarded the 2010 Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) Native American Library Services Enhancement Grant in the amount of $102,824. We are planning and implementing a library makeover with new furnishings to provide a comfortable, safe, and inviting environment for the community.

In addition, a new computer, an interactive whiteboard for summer, after-school, and Oneida culture and language classes, and video equipment to offer programming that will help bridge the digital divide for staff and patrons, and other technology equipment.

An Oneida artist and videographer will develop a Teen Video Project with the Youth Liaison hired under this grant. The Green Earth Branch Library will organize a mini-autobiography audio/digital scrapbooking project for their Elder Day activities.

We continue to offer programming such as February's Haudenosaunee/Iroquois singing workshop and performance with Matt Myke from the Cayuga Nation, Six Nations Reserve; and March's performer/puppet master/banjo player "Grandpa" Fred Turk. In April we'll be programming with Culture Shock Camp, in May we'll solidifying plans for a Pancake themed program for Children's Book Week—stay tuned.



Thanks to IMLS and the wonderful grant we were awarded—for you, our community and Nation, so that we could bring you the best books, movies, computer programming, and events and programs we can!

For more information on the grant visit http://www.imls.gov/news/2010/090710b_list.shtm#WI

"Out Of Minds" Book Review

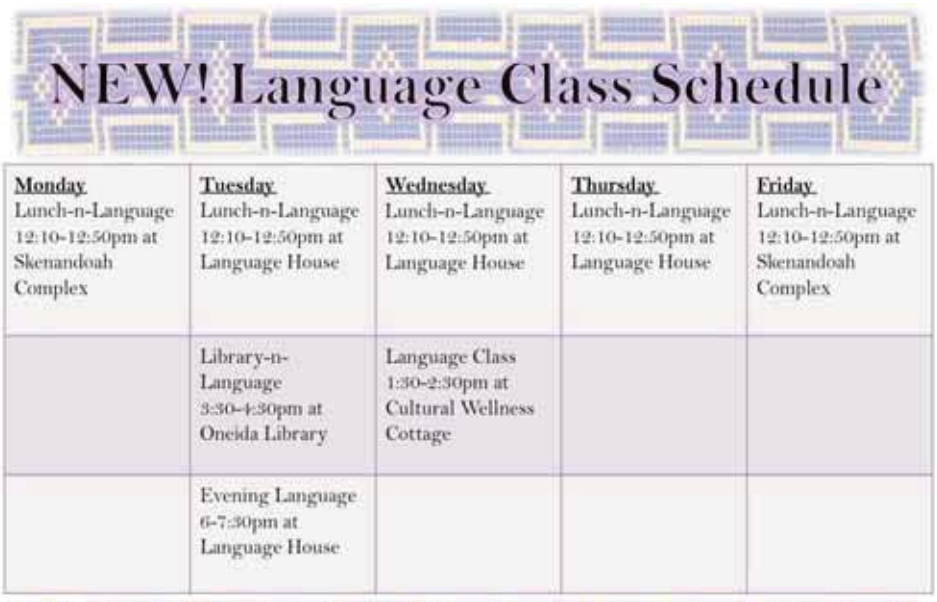
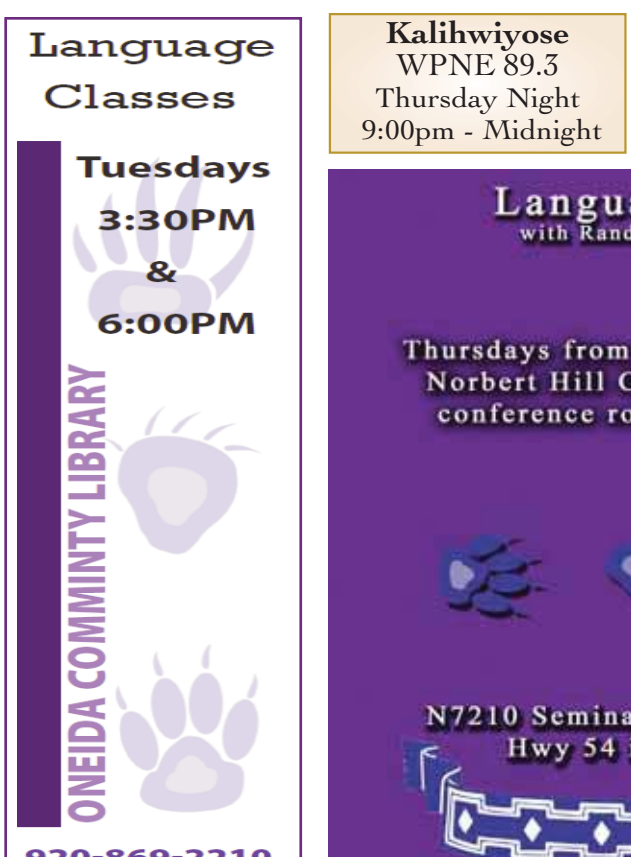
"Out Of Minds"
by Ken Robinson
Copyright Ken Rob 2001
Published by Capstone Publishing Limited

If being creative and realizing much of our future relies on this ability, this book is for you. Ken Robinson has found a way to work with both the industries and individuals to develop strategies in learning to be creative.

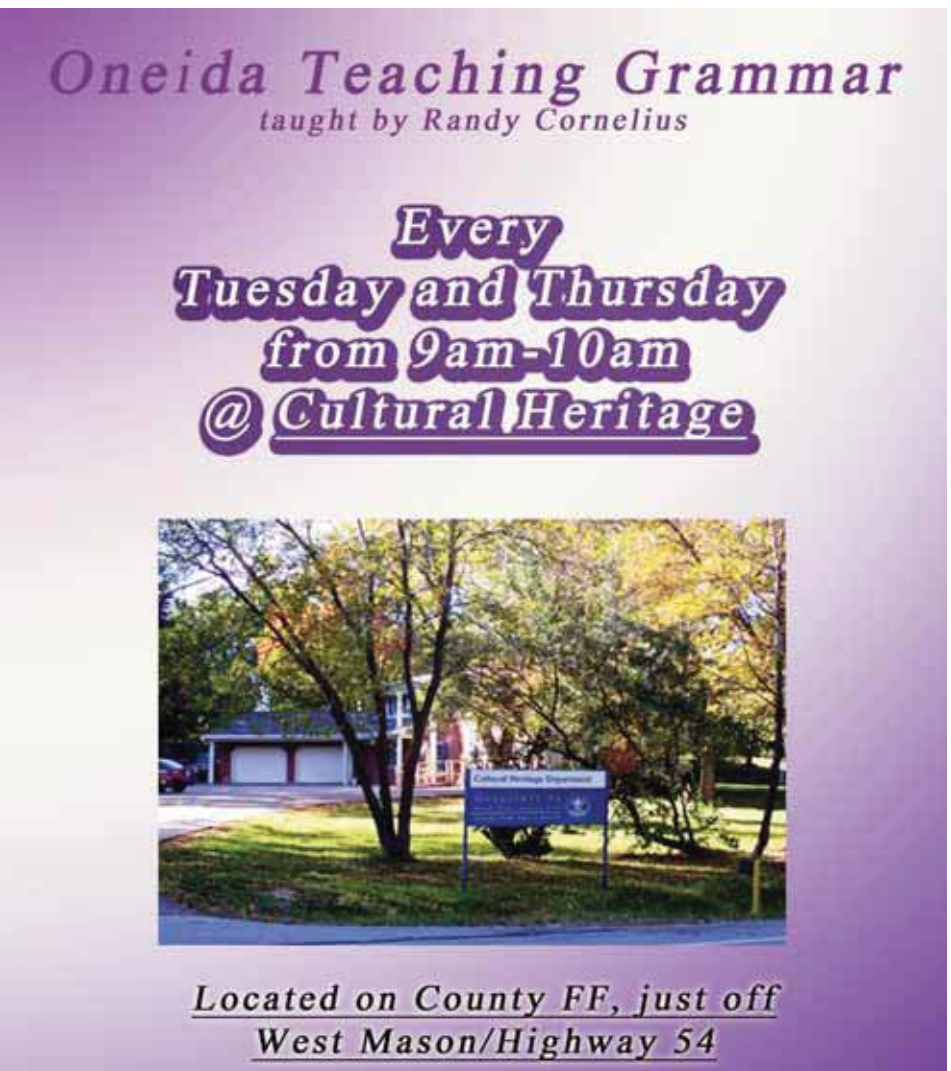


Creativity is the lone factor which will make us a leading country in today's world. No longer can we sit on our laurels, new technologies abound, with hands on manufacturing jobs disappearing dramatically, we must prepare for this change.

Everyone is creative, just how we nurture and/or understand the actions which will promote this quality, is Ken Robinson's work.



"The question is not how intelligent we are but how are we intelligent?" Collective education process is questioned on whether or not our studies are most conducive to creative thinking?



He bounces outside the lines of what is "best" for us in the realm of creativity.

Minnesota columnist looks back on long career

By Euan Kerr
Minnesota Public Radio

SAWYER, Minn. (AP) ~ For almost 22 years, Ojibwe writer Jim Northrup has entertained and chastened readers of his syndicated Fond Du Lacs Follies newspaper column. Now, a new collection of the Follies is about to hit the bookstores.

Northrup covered everything from the rise of casinos and treaty rights, to his love of tapping trees for syrup, and harvesting wild rice. And he always included a lot of jokes.

"Asked at a restaurant: do you have a reservation?" he intoned recently.

"Yes! Fond du Lac!" he answered to his own question.

The Minnesota Historical Society Press is publishing a collection of Northup's columns.

Northrup sits at his kitchen table, whittling with a large clasp-knife.

"I'm carving sugar bush taps," he said.

He uses maple branches about 1.5 inches in diameter, cut to about 4 inches long. He'll pound each one into a hole drilled in a maple tree.

"We tap about 170, 200, taps a year," he said, adding that while it sounds like a lot of work, it's actually not. "Lot of time spent sitting around the fire."

Boiling the sap and telling stories, something that's important to Northrup. It's a way to explore his love of language.

"I grew up speaking Ojibwe, until I was age 6," he said. "And then I went to a Federal boarding school called Pipestone in southern Minnesota. And then as I like to say, I had Ojibwe pounded out and English pounded in.

"And it must have been a pretty good pounding because I make my living at it today, stringing words together, standing them up and saying, 'Wait right here and I'll be right back. I'll go get another word and stand it up next to you.' That's the process sometimes," he said.

Over the years, Northrup has stood many words up next to each other. "Anishinaabe Syndicated: a view from the Rez" is a distillation of his Fond du Lac Follies columns from 1989 to 2001. They were turbulent years and Northrup doesn't pull his punches.

"I guess it's the result of being in the military and seeing some pretty terrible things in Vietnam," he said. "There's no more shading on the truth. Just got to tell it like it is."

He admits he came back damaged from Vietnam.

"I've had PTSD before it had a name," he said. "First when I heard about it, I thought it meant 'party till someone dies.'"

Veterans issues come up a lot in the Fond du Lac Follies, as do his concerns about tribal management, and reservation politics. He said despite his bluntness, he's received few complaints about his column. Although there was that one joke that caused a fuss.

"Why do Indian men make better lovers?" he asked. "A lot of them don't have to get up and go to work in the morning."

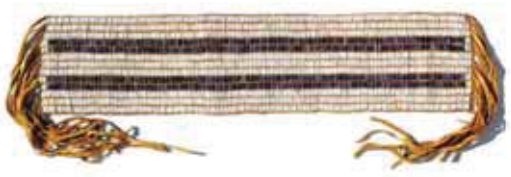
"I got a little heat for that one," he said. "I got a letter and a petition from some of my fellow Fond du Lac-ers, apparently the ones with jobs, because they felt I was contributing to a negative stereotype."

Northrup dealt with it this way: he promised in his column never to write another joke like that. He did, however, repeat the joke. In three separate columns.

He wrote at length about the treaty rights protests in the early 1990s. He was one of the tribal members who went out spearing as angry crowds gathered on the boat landings.

"It's kind of hairy to ride along in a canoe, being the only source of light on the lake and hearing gunshots," he said.

Northrup no longer spears. He said since the Supreme Court upheld the 1852 treaty guaranteeing Ojibwe hunting and fishing rights, they can spear fish freely. He said without having to go creeping around in the woods anymore, it's just not as much fun.



In conversation, as in his writing, Northup often starts in one direction and ends up arriving someplace else. The journey is as interesting as the destination. Looking out his window he points to the houses where several of his siblings and children live. He likes that. He happily lives in the digital world, while doing things like tapping maple trees.

"The seasons dictate my activities, so I don't have to make too many long-term plans," he said. "The seasons do it for me. What I like about this life is: once I asked my boss if I could have two weeks off to go to Norway, and I said yes."

In a few weeks Northrup will travel the state to talk about his book, but in the meantime there are trees waiting to be tapped.

Community Wetland Projects Roll On

By Tony Kuchma, EH&SD

The goal of the Environmental Health & Safety Division (EH&SD) wetland program is to protect, restore and preserve the Oneida Nation's wetland resources. Wetlands are biologically diverse areas that serve to purify water, prevent flooding, provide wildlife habitat, and serve as recreational area. Wetlands are protected by the Federal Clean Water Act. Historically there were approximately 13,000 acres of wetlands within the Reservation boundary. Most of these were located in the northwestern portion which was known as "the great swamp". Today there are 7,185 acres of mapped wetlands.

Oneida has enjoyed considerable success with wetland restoration over the past decade with over 20 wetland restoration projects conducted as of 2010. These initiatives have been as small as a two acre groundwater discharge spring or as large as a 200 acre wetland complex that has everything from wet prairie to floodplain forest. Partnerships are critical for implementing wetland projects. Typical partners include the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Natural Resource Conservation Service, the BIA, and the Fox River NRDA Trustee Council.

Oneida took advantage last year of major stimulus funding for wetland programs. In 2010 and 2011 Oneida received external grant funding through the BIA and Great Lakes Restoration Initiative. A portion of this funding is dedicated for a 55 acre restoration project located on Conservation Reserve Program land south of Florist Dr. and east of Overland Dr. This project will include establishing native species in wetlands, prairie grasslands and forests. The end result will be high quality habitat for many wildlife species including pheasants.

Funding will also assist in the planting of 50 acres of native grasses along Reservation waterways, converting 210 acres of row crops to permanent pasture and rotational grazing lands, and other measures to help protect Oneida's waterways. Additionally, a pilot project for wild rice will be established on 10 acres. Success will be measured by the rice bed's ability to annually reseed itself and maintain or increase its original acreage.

Environmental Health & Safety Division staff continues the hard work of identifying funding sources for projects and coordinating with external agencies. Restoring Oneida's natural landscape and providing enhanced opportunities for tribal members to enjoy natural resources are our main goals. The EH&SD will continue to pursue additional Great Lakes Restoration Initiative and other funding opportunities to strengthen the quality of life and natural resource base of the Oneida Nation Reservation.

Candidates advised to finish GED this year

The GED (General Educational Development Testing Service) will be introducing a new series of exams on January 1, 2012. GED candidates who have begun testing under the current series are being urged to try to pass all five tests by December 31, 2011, otherwise, they will be required to retake the entire new exam series.

If you or someone you know has begun GED tests now is the time to complete. It would be a good idea to review before testing if you have not tested or studied in a while. The ONCEC is open to help you. Our hours are 8 to 8 Monday through Thursday; 8 to 4:30 Friday; and 8 to 3 Saturday. Occasionally we have a day off so check our monthly calendar.

Phuture Phoenix scholarship

Scholarship application deadline April 15

GREEN BAY - Area high school seniors have until April 15 to apply for a $1,000 University of Wisconsin-Green Bay Phuture Phoenix scholarship.

Scholarships are made available to qualified students who plan to attend UW-Green Bay in the fall of 2011. The $1,000 scholarships are renewable each year the student attends UW-Green Bay.

"College access is more critical today than ever, because our world and our workplaces are changing so rapidly, so dynamically," said Phuture Phoenix Director Kim Desotell. "Through the Phuture Phoenix program we are saying that we will help students reach for their dreams."

Scholarship awards will be based upon the applicants' prior involvement in the Phuture Phoenix program through mentoring, tutoring, or participation in the annual October Tour Day as a fifth-grader. The scholarship will also be based on financial need and proof of admission to UW-Green Bay.

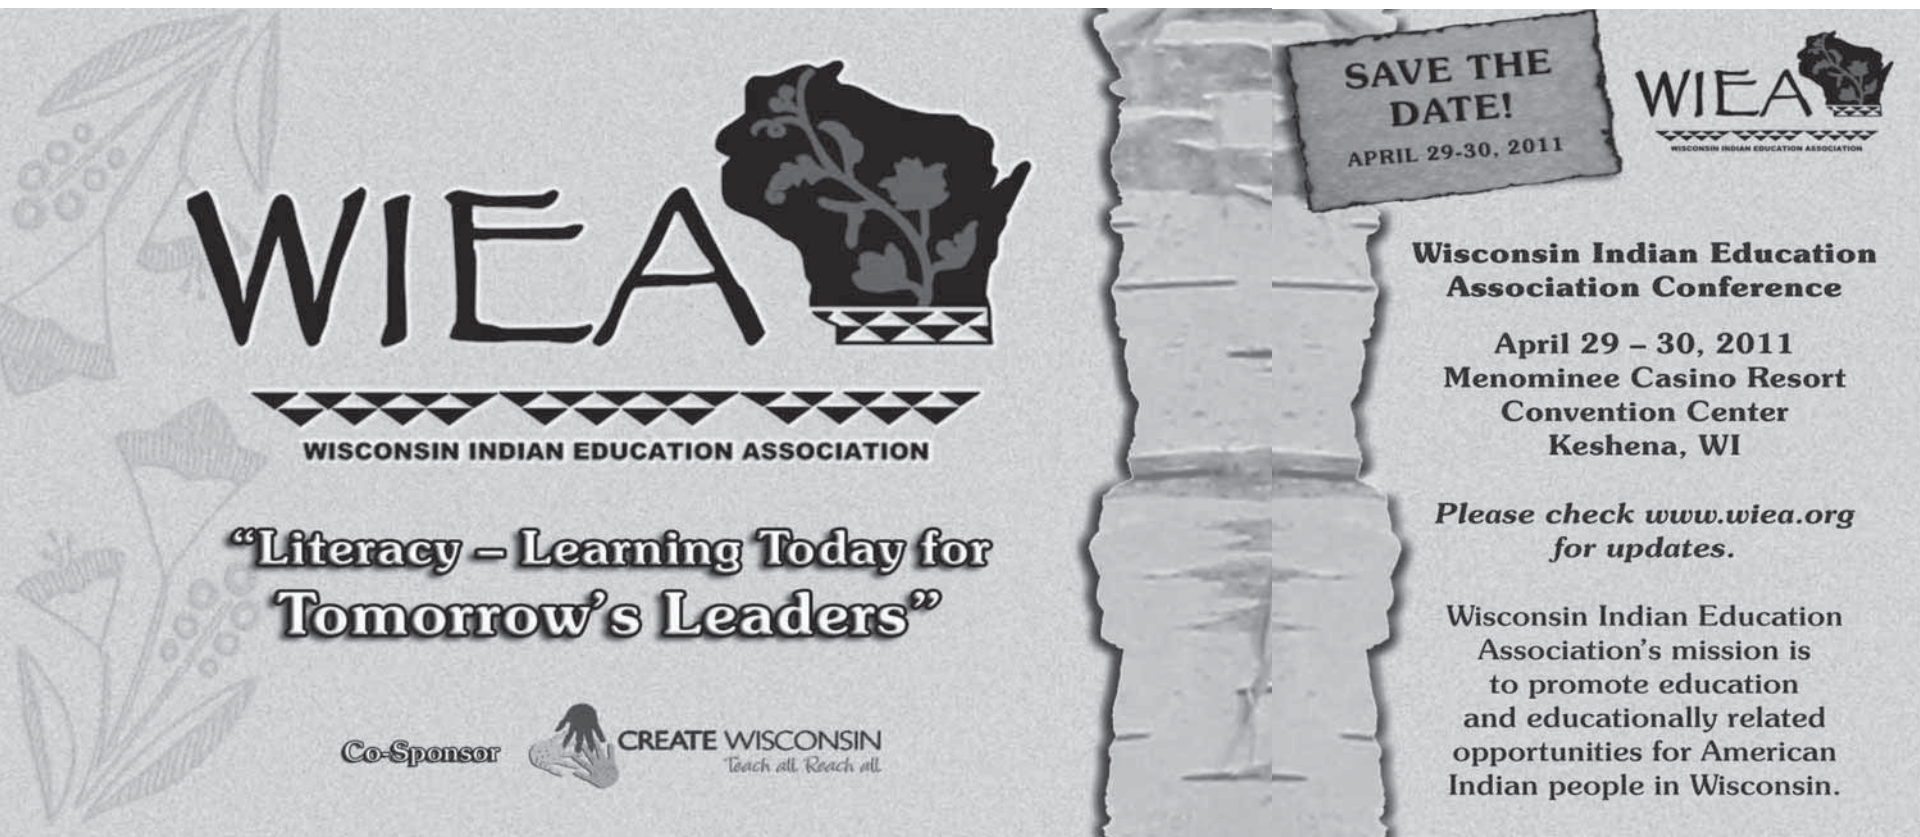
The awards are made possible through the generosity of local donors supporting the Phuture Phoenix program. Applications are available in high school guidance offices, at the UW-Green Bay Institute for Learning Partnership (Cofrin Library 750), and at www.uwgb.edu/phuturephoenix/.

The award-winning Phuture Phoenix program is a university/community enterprise that began in 2003 from an extended conversation between Cyndie Shepard, the wife of former chancellor Bruce Shepard, and University Trustee Ginny Riopelle about establishing a mentoring program that could help students in at-risk schools stay on course for college.

It has since served more than 10,000 school children from elementary schools with significant low-income populations. Later this month Silver Lake College will join UW-Eau Claire and Western Washington University in replicating the Phuture Phoenix program.

The cornerstone event of Phuture Phoenix is an autumn tour of the campus for nearly 1,300 fifth-graders attending high-needs schools in the area. Giving them tours are hundreds of UW-Green Bay student volunteers.

Since its inception Phuture Phoenix program has grown well beyond a field trip. Each year UW-Green Bay students go to middle and high schools to serve as positive role models and mentors for nearly 1,000 at-risk students.



"This will be our second year of awarding scholarships to Phuture Phoenix participants. Many of the applicants and scholarship recipients will be the first members of their families to attend college. It is a real pleasure to see these students receive assistance in their goal of obtaining a college education," said Janet Lieb, community volunteer and chairperson of the scholarship committee.

2011 Project Phoenix

Each year, high school students from around the nation participate in structured journalism workshops under the guidance of distinguished journalism professionals at the annual NAJA conference.

We are pleased to announce that we are now accepting applications for the 2011 Student Projects program, which will take place at the 2011 NAJA conference in Ft. Lauderdale, FL. Application deadline is April 1. For an application, go to:

Notice of Availablity

Purpose:
The Oneida Tribe of Indians (Tribe) is proposing to construct an approximately 18,000 square foot addition to the existing casino located at 2020 Airport Road. The expansion will include a sports bar, food court, poker room, smoke shop, combined with other renovations. The project will be funded by the Tribe. The intent is to improve the economy of the Tribe and increase short and long term employment opportunities.

No federal involvement or action has been identified for this project.

An Environmental Assessment (EA) was prepared by the Oneida Tribe (Tribe) in 1992 for the construction of a gaming facility at 2020 Airport Road. A finding of no significant impact (FONSI) was made by the Bureau of Indian Affairs in March 1993. This addendum for the proposed expansion of the existing casino is in compliance with the Oneida Environmental Policy Act (2-13-93B) and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). The EA and addendum contain project information, affected environment, project alternatives, consequences, and consultation.

Location: The proposed expansion is planned to connect on the east end of the existing casino located at 2020 Airport Drive, on the Oneida Reservation, located in Township 23 North, Range 20 East, Section 6, Brown County, WI.

Alternatives: Preferred Alternative: The preferred alternative is for the Tribe to construct an addition of approximately 18,000 square feet on the east side of the existing. It will include a sports bar, food court, poker room, smoke shop, and other renovations. The addition will be located on what is currently a flat paved valet parking area; approximately 24 parking spaces will be removed. The valet parking will be moved to the south side of the building. No additional parking areas will be added with this proposal. Construction will occur on previously disturbed areas. The area of impervious surface is not expected to increase. Construction is planned for Summer 2012.
The applicant expects 20-25 short term jobs during the construction activities and 25-30 full time jobs resulting from the expanded services.

No Action Alternative: To not construct the proposed expansion to the existing Oneida Main Casino location. This will not assist in the goal of expanding gaming operations and improving the economy of the Oneida Nation.

Comments were requested from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service regarding possible impacts to threatened and endangered species, Oneida Cultural Heritage Department for possible impacts to culturally significant areas, and the Environmental Protection Agency for possible permitting needs regarding in-stream development

Comments and Availability: Interested parties may obtain copies of these documents from the address below. Comments regarding the proposed action may be submitted within 14 days of the date of this NOA. Contact Lisa Miotke at (920) 869-4582 or write Oneida Environmental, Health & Safety Division, PO Box 365, Oneida, WI 54155 for additional information.

Gary's Back!

By Billie John
Thunderhawk Times

Last issue, we told readers about ONHS computer teacher, Gary Lancelle, who suffered a heart attack during Christmas break and returned to work on Thursday, March 3.

This issue, we present a Q & A with Gary.

Q. That was quite an experience. What did you learn?
A. That I'm mortal.
Q. How close were you to death?
A. Too close!
Q. Did you stay in a good mind?
A. Yes, I knew I would make it through this!
Q. How long were you in the hospital?
A. Four days.
Q. Could you feel everything that was going on?
A. No, I didn't know I went through surgery until the doctors told me.
Q. Was someone with you through this?
A. Yes, my girlfriend, Sue.
Q. Did you miss the school/staff/students?
A. I sure did!
Q. How does it feel to be back?
A. Great!

Fund Raising Continues for Hilo, Hawaii Trip

By Thunderhawk Times Staff

Oneida Language and Culture Staff Member, Kal^na^kehtskwas Brooks, was pleased with the amount of money raised to support an upcoming trip to Hilo, Hawaii for four ONHS students.

"The Hilo, Hawaii group would like to express their sincere gratitude and thankfulness to this continued supportive community!" said Brooks. "We raised an awesome $1,195! Yaw^ko so very much!"

The group raised the money through donated gifts from various tribal members and enterprises that were then raffled off.

The "Granquist Family, Matson Family, Powless-Hill Family, and I and my family would like to thank everyone," Kal^na said.

The four young men who will be taking the trip are (l to r) Bradley Granquist, Eddie Santiago, JoJo Santiago, and Kendrick Crouch-Powless.

An Interview With Kalʌna?kehtskwas Brooks, Iroquois Women Studies

By Joelle Thomas
Thunderhawk Times

What's happening in Iroquois Women Studies?

"Well, let's see…..this is the second year this class has been offered to the female students of the Oneida Nation High School. This past first semester we had a blast! The ladies learned all types of things ranging from Oneida language, to canning healthy foods, cooking and sharing family recipes, reciting their own personal K a n e h e l a t ú k s l a - Thanksgiving Address, explanation of the cycle of ceremonies, a field trip to the Generational Healing conference to hear Katsi Cook, Mohawk Nation speak about important issues of the Hotinoshoni Women, sewing/appliqué projects, and most importantly, learning the process of documenting/journaling throughout the semester."

What are some of your goals as a teacher of the Iroquois Women Studies class?

"The Iroquois Women Studies course is to include values that belong to the women; moon time, healthy relationships, Iroquois wedding ceremony, child rearing, beast feeding, traditional parenting skills, and overall physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual good health. Students will begin to ask themselves,

What role do I play in this community as a strong Iroquois Woman?

"This class offers a wide spectrum of culture-based curriculum. For example: cooking traditional foods, cycle of c e r e m o n i e s , Thanksgiving Address, field trips to cultural events, inspirational speakers, critical thinking discussions, daily self-reflection journaling, self-esteem/self concept building, and community service/volunteer work. I'm excited to mention that the Iroquois Women Studies students will be introduced to a new project this spring; organic planting and harvesting from the school garden."

What are some things you do outside of the classroom? (Like in the community)

"The Iroquois Women Studies students have traveled to a handful of places to partake in volunteering their time with community service projects such as; the 2009-2010 Annual Big Apple Fest at the Oneida Cultural Heritage Center, Performance at the 2009 NIEA (National Indian Education Association) Convention in Milwaukee, cooking projects outside the classroom for the 2009-2010 ONHS Welcoming Ceremony, several cooking lessons at the Oneida Cannery, 2009 field trip to theValerian Day Spa in Wisconsin Dells, and the most exciting project we experienced was the Oneida language teaching project Stephenie Stevens and the Oneida Head Start children.

Who are some of the guest speakers you've introduced to your Iroquois Women Studies students?

August 2009 to the present-Jamie Betters, Tina Roskom, and Vicki Cornelius-Traditional Cooking & Canning-Oneida Cannery.

September 2009-Cindy Martin-Cayuga Nation-T r a d i t i o n a l H e a l t h / H o l i s t i c W e l l n e s s / C u l t u r a l Education & Traditional Counseling.

December 2009-Forrest Brooks – Iroquois Wampum Belts/Replica Wampum Beaded Bracelet Project.

February 2010-Ana R a m i r e z - G l o b a l Issues/Child birth.

November 2010-Katsi Cook-Mohawk Nation-Hotinoshoni Women Issues/Midwifery.

Is this class open for anyone?

The Iroquois Women Studies class is offered to all female students enrolled at the Oneida Nation High School. It's currently a semester class. Each student will earn a ½ credit toward their Oneida language & culture requirements.

What made you decide you were going to be a teacher?

Being a teacher means the world to me! It's an honor to work with these young people on a daily basis. It's with every intension that I as a teacher at the Oneida Nation High School, work hard toward providing each and every student with;

- Feeling supported.
- Learning boundaries and expectations.
- Developing of strong sense of identity.
- Becoming empowered by our rich Hotinoshoni language and culture.

Hey, Pine Mountain!

By Jade Doxtater
Thunderhawk Times

On Monday February, 28, thirteen of the Oneida Nation High School's most well-behaved students went on a skiing field trip to Pine Mountain.

Pine Mountain Golf and Ski Resort is located in Upper Michigan.

The day began at 7:00 a.m. with a nice long bus ride to Pine Mountain.

When we arrived, the first thing you see is the biggest and tallest ski hill I have ever laid my eyes on. It was so frightening it made me want to stay on the bus!

When the bus came to a stop, Denis did one last head count, then we started to unload the bus. To get inside we had to pass through two sets of big double doors.

Still half-blinded from the morning sun, we were greeted by the Ski Resort's staff with smiles and friendly 'Hellos and Good Mornings.'

Then it was first things first. We all had to gather upstairs to get the low down on the rules and regulations of the resort. Then from there we all went back downstairs to get our gear and equipment.

We had the choice between skiing and snowboarding. The majority of our group went skiing and only a handful went snowboarding. Before we were allowed to go 'free' we had one last meeting, but this time it was about our safety on and off, the slopes. It was a quick meeting so it wasn't too bad.

After that we were free to go and have fun. I think one of the best things about this trip was that our school was offered free lessons for those who need them or if you felt you need to brush up on your technique. We were lucky with that because usually lessons go for about $70.00 for a private lesson.

I think that everybody who went was really happy they were given the opportunity to go, because I know I did.

Batter Up, Girls!

By Shanna Jourdan
Thunderhawk Times

Last year at the ONHS, there was a girl's softball team. Unfortunately, they had to forfeit their first game due to not having enough players.

According to softball coach, Ces Dawson, you must have at least nine or ten players to field a team.

Hopefully, this year, there will be enough players to make a team.

Dawson was the coach for the girls last year and, possibly, this year—if there are enough players.

Ces said, "It would be great if we got a softball team going again, and if not, there will also be track to go out for."

She also said, "A lot of kids don't even know all the rules to softball, but the rules are very easy to learn and remember."

Right now there is a sign up sheet for girls who want to go out for softball. There is word that there are eight girls signed up already.

This year there should be new fresh faces at practice, since there are new students at ONHS.

Prom is around the corner!

By Joelle Thomas
Thunderhawk Times

Prom is coming awfully fast. It's March and prom is April 16.

So, with that, ladies, go get your guys and guys go get your ladies because you do not want to miss out on prom.

With new people in the school and the theme being "A Night in Paris," I'm sure you do want to go. It's going to be a "crazy" one. I can tell you that.

Laura Studee, ONHS social studies teacher, is in charge of the prom committee and, trust me, they are going to make this the best prom of your life. You are going to be flabbergasted as soon as you walk in.

They have wicked music and awesome plans. So don't miss out.

That's the 411 on Prom at ONHS 2011! Watch for more details to come.

National Public Health Week at Oneida Community Health Center

Submitted by Michelle Myers
Community Health Nurse

This year's National Public Health Week will be celebrated April 4th – 10th 2011. Community Health Nursing (CHN) Department will showcase a different community/ public health program each day during this week at OCHC.

The CHN Department coordinates a variety of programs serving individuals across the lifespan. At the heart of every program, is the focus of prevention education. Preventing injury, illness and the complication associated with illness will save money and improve health outcomes.

Screening activities: The CHN Department offers two scheduled blood pressure clinics at events in the community each month. We partner with the OCHC dieticians at the Diabetic Luncheon. A second screening event is scheduled each month at the Senior Center meal site the fourth Wednesday of each month.

Chronic disease management: For some community members and their families, chronic disease management can be overwhelming. Oneida Community Health Representatives (CHRs) and Community Health Nurses (CHNs) work as a team to assist these individuals and their families. CHRs provide home visits for chronic disease monitoring, medication delivery, and socialization. Community Health Nurses provide home visits to assist individuals with setting up their medication, provide one-on-one teaching/ reinforcing of medications and disease processes, communicating with providers, and coordinating other health care needs i.e. scheduling medical appointments and transportation. Just as each individual is unique, so is his/ her plan of care.

Foot care: Community Foot and Nail clinics are offered several times a month to patients that cannot complete routine foot care independently. The clinic is located at Elder Services. Participants are seen approximately every six weeks. Service is provided by appointment only; Mondays mornings, some Thursday afternoons and the fourth Friday morning of each month.

Immunizations: Immunizations prevent children from vaccine preventable diseases like measles, chickenpox, diphtheria, polio and some cervical cancers. Immunization clinics are offered the 2nd & 4th Tuesday afternoon, the 2nd Wednesday evening, and 1st & 3rd Friday morning of each month at OCHC.

Communicable Disease Investigation/ follow up/reporting: To assist in the control of illness in the community, specific communicable diseases are identified as "reportable" to Public Health in the State of Wisconsin. Laboratories and medical providers are required to notify public health when these diseases are identified. Community Health Nursing Department completes the roles of investigation/ follow up and reporting to the State of Wisconsin for the Oneida Tribe.

Child Passenger Safety Program: Oneida has offered a successful car seat program here in Oneida for many years. Oneida has several Nationally Certified Child Passenger Safety Technicians in the CHN Dept, OCHC Safety, Health Promotions, and at the Oneida Police Dept. These technicians meet with participants by appointment during the work week and on a first come first served basis at community car seat events. Education and instruction is offered at no cost. Through partnerships with Oneida Environment, grant dollars provide the program with discounted car seats for participants.

School nursing programs: Oneida is fortunate to have individuals specifically assigned to address the medical needs and reporting requirements for the Early Head Start Program, Head Start Program, the Oneida Nation Elementary and High Schools.

Group education: Community Health Nursing Dept provides group education programs in the community. CHN Dept regularly works with the Teen Parent group by offering an assortment of educational topics related to injury and illness prevention in children. Also, the CHN Dept had partnered up with Elder Services to provide the "Living with Chronic Conditions" program. It consists of a series of meetings once a week for six weeks to help elders manage their chronic diseases.

Preparedness: This initiative has brought together many non-traditional partners with the common goal of preparing and practicing our responses should we face a natural or manmade disaster in the community. The H1N1 mass vaccination campaign is a good example of this. Oneida worked closely with local and State Public Health in planning for mass clinics and response. The key to being prepared is planning and practicing. This is the number one reason the community flu clinics continue to be held at the Oneida Nation Elementary School. In the Tribes Emergency Plan, this is the location that has been designated for mass clinics. Not only do the staff practice, but it is a way to ensure the community will also know what to do and what to expect in case it would ever be needed.

In addition to the above listed programs, CHN Dept staff participates in a variety of other community/ public health initiatives, both within the Tribe and with other local public health partners. These relationships have proven to be extremely valuable when facing common threats and crisis in public health.

To learn more about any of the above listed programs, please visit us at www.oneidanation.org or call 920-869-4840.

From 2B/Green innovations

Events will begin at 8:45 a.m. Wednesday, April 20 and will continue on the morning of Thursday, April 21. The cost to attend the event is $79 through March 31, and will increase to $99 after that date.

The Wisconsin premiere of the award-winning documentary, "DIVE! Living Off America's Waste" is scheduled for 7 p.m. on April 20. The film explores America's grocery waste and contends that "every year in America, 96 billion pounds of food is thrown away" while many Americans go without proper access to nutritious food. A post-documentary panel forum will follow and be led by the film's director, Jeremy Seifert, and will include representatives from Paul's Pantry and local grocers.

EMBI helps support one of UW-Green Bay's founding principles - establishing itself as a leader in the promotion of environmental awareness and ecologically prudent initiatives. The establishment of EMBI is a step in the evolution of UW-Green Bay's historic mission of studying environmental issues and developing solutions to problems by recognizing the critical interconnections between science, policy and business, and their social contexts. Partnering with public and private sector interests throughout the New North region, EMBI is working to make Northeastern Wisconsin synonymous with sustainability and environmental leadership.

Protect the Great Lakes as a Commons, says Council of Canadians

As the federal government prepares to introduce its budget, the Council of Canadians is calling for the allocation of significant resources to protecting the Great Lakes as a Commons, a Public Trust and a Protected Bioregion. The Council of Canadians outlines how and why to do this in a new report today entitled Our Great Lakes Commons: A People's Plan to Protect the Great Lakes Forever.

"The Great Lakes crisis is part of the global crisis, in which we are quickly running out of fresh water," says Council of Canadians chairperson Maude Barlow, author of the report, which is available at www.canadians.org/water. "It's not a closed hydrological cycle like we were taught-- we are losing clean water through irrigation, bottled water, virtual water trade and more."

Our Great Lakes Commons is a call to understanding and a call to action on an exciting new proposal to designate the Great Lakes and its tributary waters as a lived Commons, to be shared, protected, carefully managed and enjoyed by all who live around them. The Great Lakes Basin Commons would need to be protected by a legal and political framework based on Public Trust Doctrine, underpinning in law that the Great Lakes are central to the very existence of those people, plants and animals living on or near them and therefore must be protected for the common good from generation to generation.

"It's time for the federal government to step up their commitment to restoring the Great Lakes," says Council of Canadians national water campaigner Emma Lui, "The Obama administration had originally proposed $475 million for Great Lakes clean up, even the Republican party supported $225 million for the Restoration Initiative. In the last budget, the Harper Government allocated a mere $8 million to protect the Great Lakes. The federal government needs to increase funding significantly in order to protect the Great Lakes as a commons, public trust and protected bioregion."

In the water chapter on water in the Alternative Federal Budget, the Council of Canadians calls for $3.375 billion in new funding over five years, to clean up polluted lakes and rivers, protect Canada's waterways from invasive species, and to clean-up the Great Lakes.

"Scientists say that the Great Lakes could be bone dry in 80 years," Barlow adds, citing the case of the Aral Sea, the fourth largest lake in the world, but now just 10 percent of its former size. "The World Bank says that water demand is outstripping supply by 40%, producing great suffering."

The long-term goal of the network proposing the Great Lakes Basin Commons – which includes the Council of Canadians, On the Commons and Food & Water Watch – is to eventually see a full treaty between Canada and the United States that declares the Great Lakes to be a lived Commons, Public Trust and Protected Bioregion, one that is also adopted by the states, provinces and First Nations of the Basin.

Twahwahtsi·lʌ́yʌ: We All are Family

By C. Alexandrea Lei-Nako
Oneida Social Services

Twahwahtsi·lʌ́yʌ (Dwah wah jee leye) - we all are family

Come and learn more about Twahwahtsi·lʌ́yʌ while enjoying good food, music, and fun. We are having a Community Dinner April 4, 2011 at Parish Hall. Learn about our successes, challenges, and help create our dreams.

The Twahwahtsi·lʌ́yʌ project is made up of three distinct yet overlapping programs: Sashakoti?nikuhlahslu·níhe? (saw-saw-go-dee-nee-goo-lah-sloo-nee-heh), Oneida Community Volunteers who are available for community interventions; Yethiya?tanunha' a program for youth not in school or about to leave school; Twahwahtsi·lʌ́yʌ this portion is being developed and includes two purposes, one to give the community a voice and the other to bring forward family titles and strength family ties (we all are family). The vision of Twahwahtsi·lʌ́yʌ is The Re-vitalization of Tsi?niyukwaliho·tʌ́ (Geet ne yoo gwa le ho da) all of us our ways. The mission is to renew family titles and ties.

To fully implement Sashakoti?nikuhlahslu·níhe we need to secure the final background checks and have them on file for the volunteers. We also need to develop a Memorandum of Understanding with the Oneida Police Department along with procedures that include the use of the orange card. Then develop a card for area schools along with appropriate procedures and agreements.

Yethiya?tanunhá (yea tee ya da noon hah) which translates 'we are watching over them' has been operating since November 8, 2010 and currently is supporting five youth. We are in the process of hiring two student interns to work 20 hours a week who we hope to secure by March 31, 2011. The interns will be there to assist the youth and volunteers throughout the day. Thank you, to Shirely Barber, Bev Skenandore, JoAnn Ninham, Michelle Jordan, Lyle Metoxen, Mark Ninham, Greg Matson, Vicki Matson, Richard Brzezinski, Laurie Becker, Sue Reiter, Linda Gerlickowski, Belinda Brennan, Denis Gullickson, Bill Vervoort (OLB, Oneida Living in Balance) and Lynn Adrian for all their hard work in getting Yethiya?tanunhá started and maintained while we work to secure required staff and funding. Thank you to the guidance counselors and school staff for making this possible and for assisting us in finding ways for youth to receive credits. Thank you, to Renee De la Cruz, Cheryl Warrington, Nikki Kornetzke, Faye Le Mense, and Danielle Tubby for being those special liaisons with the area schools.

The dinner on April 4 will be the beginning of Twahwahtsi·lʌ́yʌ; giving you a voice, and looking for those aunties and uncles who are willing to be available for their nieces and nephews. We send out a very special thank you to Ron Hill who will be our speaker for the evening and who has assisted in bringing this project forward over the last several years.

Please join us on April 4, 2011 to learn more and let us hear what you have to say.

We look forward to receiving your knowledge, and support. Please feel free to bring a dish to add to the feast. For further information or to comment you can contact me Alex Lei-Nako at 920-490-3774 or Ron Hill at 920-496-5385.

2011 – 2012 Tribal Elder Outreach Program

Providing Community Outreach and Victim Assistance Services to Address Elder Abuse

Sekoli Elders,

Oneida Elder Services has received a grant to help alleviate abuse of Tribal elders in the community through outreach and education. With this grant a new position was created to assist the Elder Abuse Coordinator in working with the elders to gather information on what their needs and concerns are, to help organize events to spread awareness of elder issues, and to reinforce the belief of Yethino·lúkhwa? Yukwakwʌná·ta? - We Love Our Elders.

Our Elder Outreach Assistant, Daniel Borgstrom, will be contacting elders and listening to their needs and concerns about elder abuse and work to inform them of the different types and effects that abuse can have on the elders. With your help, we can work as a community to alleviate abuse, and to help the younger generations understand that care and reverence for the elders is a historical and strong cultural tradition.

To help inform you of different types of abuse, we have included a short list of abuse terminology:

- Physical Abuse: The intentional or reckless infliction of bodily harm
- Emotional Abuse: Verbal attacks, threats, rejection, isolation or belittling acts that cause mental anguish, pain, or distress
- Sexual Abuse: Is a violation of Wisconsin's criminal sexual assault law
- Neglect: A caregiver's failure or refusal to provide for a vulnerable elder's safety, physical or emotional needs
- Financial Exploitation: Theft, fraud, misuse or neglect of authority as a lever to gain control over an elder's money or property
- Confinement/Restraint: Involuntary and unreasonable confinement or separation from living area, use of restraining device or excessive over-medication
- Self-Neglect: Danger to an individuals physical or mental health because the individual is responsible for their own care, but fails obtain adequate care

Watch for upcoming events in future DRUMS.

If you have any questions, please contact: Daniel Borgstrom, Elder Outreach Assistant; Joyce Johnson, Elder Abuse Prevention Coordinator, (920) 869-2448

Random Acts of Health: Share fresh fruits and veggies with others

Submitted by Susan Higgs, RD, CD

March is National Nutrition Month! This year's theme is "Eat Right with Color," with the basic message being; a variety of tastes, color and health benefits increase with a rainbow of foods in your diet.

This month the staff of the WIC/Nutrition Department at the Oneida Community Health Center took it to the next level with "Random Acts of Health," by offering a piece of fresh fruit to patients waiting in line or to co-workers at their desk. We were welcomed with lots of smiles and are now encouraging you to offer "Random Acts of Health" to others too!

"Random acts of health" – Easy ideas:

At work:

- Share a bag of apples or oranges with your teammates.
- Have co-workers each bring a different ingredient for an easy trail-mix:

~ box of whole-grain cereal squares
~ almonds or pistachios (check for allergies first)
~ dried fruit

Combine ingredients, give it a fun nick-name, and share at the afternoon slump. You will re-energize the group and save calories and money at the vending machine.

- Organize a Soup & Salad day for the office potluck, with each person bringing a variety of colorful salad fixing's. (See recipe below).

At home:

- Keep fresh fruit in an attractive bowl on the kitchen counter.
- Have cut-up vegetables ready-to-eat, in the frig.
- Buy 'Light' microwave popcorn for a family game night.

Ready to grab – healthy snacks:

- Whole-grain cereal bar, check for 4-5 gms fiber per bar.
- A small handful of almonds or walnuts.
- A piece of string cheese or low-fat yogurt.

Colorful Salad:

Mix and match ingredients by choosing one or more foods from each column below.

Consider flavor, texture and color! Add a light salad dressing and enjoy!

Leafy Greens:
Bibb lettuce
Green/Red leaf lettuce
Green/Red cabbage
Romaine
Spinach

Salad-in-a-bag:
Mixed greens combo

Vegetables:
Artichoke hearts
Avocado
Bean Sprouts
Beets
Bell pepper
Broccoli
Cauliflower
Carrots
Celery
Cucumber
Onion
Peas
Radishes

NOTICE

The OCHD Management team has decided to discontinue ENT, Urology and Allergy Specialty services provided on site at OCHC. This decision was made taking into consideration the budgetary and operational constraints we are currently faced with. Please join us in wishing Doctors Warpinski, Binard and Reinke the very best and thank them for the services provided to our patients and the community. Dr Warpinski will be staffing the clinics scheduled on March 11th and April 15th . We will continue to utilize Dr Warpinski and Dr Reinke for consultations through contract health referrals.

This decision will be reviewed in our next budget cycle.

Utility Assistance NOTICE

Utility companies will begin soon to send out preliminary disconnect notices. If you have not been able to make payments during this heating season, please contact your utility provider (WPS, WE Energies, etc) to make payment arrangements. If you have been making payments but the balance of your bill is difficult to manage, contact the utility provider to discuss making payment arrangements for that balance.

If you haven't done so already, you can contact the County or Tribal Energy Assistance Program – see below for contact information – to schedule an Energy Assistance appointment.

If you are determined eligible for utility assistance, you may also be eligible for Weatherization. The Weatherization program's goal is to decrease energy consumption by assisting with insulation, sealing air leaks, upgrades to heating systems, and energy saving products. Information provided during your Energy Assistance appointment determines the need for referral to the Weatherization Program.

If you reside within the Oneida Reservation, contact the Center for Self-Sufficiency at 920-490-3710 to schedule an appointment …

If you reside in Brown County but outside of the Oneida Reservation boundaries you can contact Integrated Community Solutions at 920-498-3737 or go to their office at 2605 S. Oneida St, Suite 106 in Green Bay … and

If you reside in Outagamie County but outside of the Oneida Reservation boundaries you can contact Heating Assistance of Outagamie County at 800-506-5596 or go to their office at 530 W. Wisconsin Ave. in Appleton.

If your household gross income is less than the amount shown on the following chart, you may be eligible for a benefit or services.

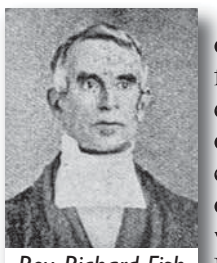
The Hobart Episcopal church in Oneida

By Thelma Cornelius McLester

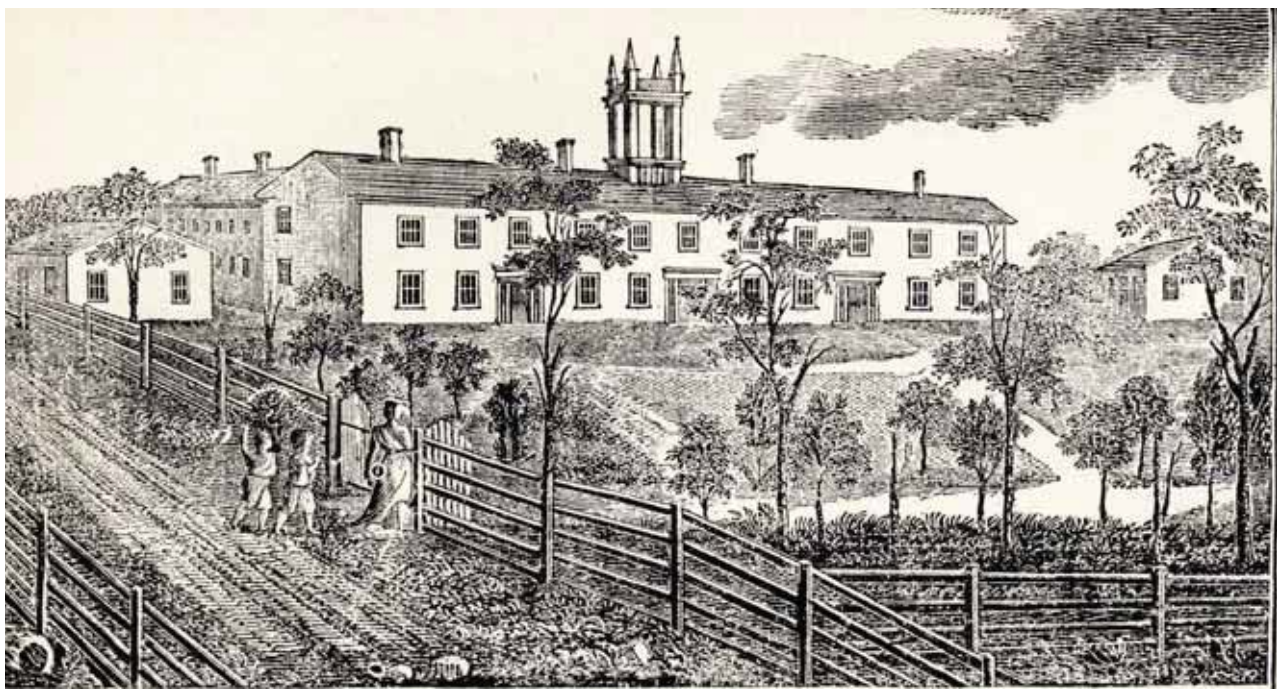


Second Series of the Hobart Episcopal church in Oneida.

Eleazer Williams left his assigned position at Hobart Church in Oneida as well as that of working on the supposed Mission School in Green Bay by 1830. (The school never materialized under him, however, did come about later on). Accordingly Williams had already lost his credibility with the local church committee that was formed in Green Bay in 1827.

Rev. Eleazer Williams

Reverend Richard Fish Cadle succeeded Williams and was assigned both positions of serving Green Bay and Oneida. He was already establishing himself at Green Bay by 1828, having arrived in the summer of 1827. His appointed title was Superintendent of the Green Bay Mission School. Cadle obtained possession of the building known previously as the officers' quarters of the Camp Smith Stockade and he had already begun preparations to open up a boarding school for Indian children. This was after meeting with the local church leaders at Green Bay who had already requested funding for such a school from the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society for the Protestant Episcopal Church in New York and also from the War Department in Washington.



Rev. Richard Fish Cadle

Establishing the Mission School was a lengthily process and in time there were several buildings to take care of which included a boarding and a day school combination with the day school portion for the local resident's children at Green Bay. The tuition costs for the day school participants were to come from the families of the children.

Cadle served only three unsuccessful years at the helm of the school prior to moving on. He only spent one and a half years serving the Oneida or Duck Creek Hobart Church.

At the height of his services for Indian children, there were only ten Oneida children, as most of the children were from the Menomonie Nation. The problems that occurred under Cadle's reign were Language barriers, as well as he having no knowledge of Indian culture. The boarding school was set up to take in the very young, age four years old as well as older children, to age fourteen. As soon as the children were released, many never returned. There were also those who ran away from the school. The school did receive $1500 from the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church to cover the cost for the Indian children. In addition the Mission School also received funds from the War Department, Indian Affairs Division.

The first Mission school in Green Bay. Foreign Missionary representatives recommended closure of the school which occurrred in 1839.

After several visits from the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society representatives, it was they who recommended the school be closed which occurred in 1839 when there were only ten students remaining. At this time the Indian children were already attending mission schools in their own communities.

The Reverend Solomon Davis followed Cadle as the next assigned missionary to the areas of both Oneida and Green Bay. Davis who arrived from New York had already been introduced to the Oneidas as he had attended and preached in their church while in New York where both parties had previously lived.

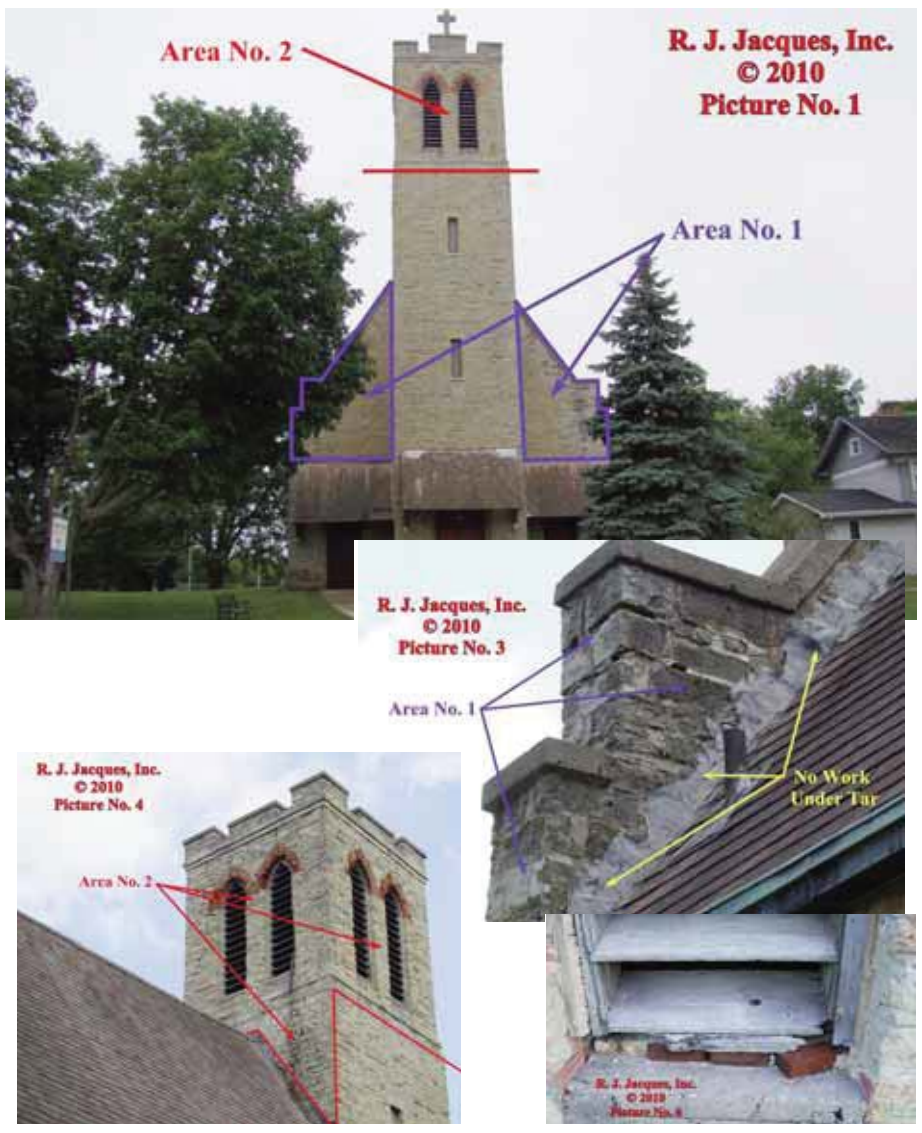
In 1837, Davis began making plans to build a frame church replacing the log church in Oneida. He signed an agreement with a Mr. Edwin Hart, as the contractor at Green Bay at a cost of $3800.00. The work was completed by 1839.

Bishop Kemper, the first traveling missionary of the Protestant Episcopal Church in New York had visited the Wisconsin area in 1834. It was he who consecrated Hobart Church as the first erected church in Wisconsin and also the first consecrated Episcopal Church in this part of the world in 1839.

During Davis's time, it was he who made the determination to have two young men become ordained priests at the Hobart Church in Oneida. This ordination occurred in 1842 when the Reverend James Lloyd Breck and the Reverend William Adams became priests. (They later founded Nashotah House near Fond du Lac, Wisconsin). It was at this visit that they invited three young men to accompany them back to Nashotah in order to be educated in the priesthood. This was the initial beginning of Cornelius Hill's rise to the priesthood later on, as it was he who was serious enough to continue on this long path.

After Davis left the area, In 1847, the Reverend Franklin R. Haff became the next priest at Hobart Church until 1852. There was an increase in attendance at the Hobart Church through-out this period with more people recognizing the Parish as the Center of activities for the community.

In 1853, the Reverend Edward A. Goodnough succeeded Reverend Haff and remained in this position until he passed away thirty-six years later in 1890. This period of time, under the full-time status of Goodnough was perhaps one of the most dynamic in the history of the church.



Rev. Edward A. Goodnough

In the 1870's it was once again time to begin plans for a larger church building. Plans were drawn up by Reverend Professor Charles Babcock of Cornell University who gave the plans as a gift to the Oneida Mission. The church was to be in the early English Style.

Since everyone agreed to the new building, they agreed to work toward making the new church a reality. They first of all had to quarry the stone from their quarry, prior to hauling the stone to the site of the new building. Many Oneida men gave one full day a week towards this effort. The women served meals for them every day that work was performed. Also fund raising helped and before long, they had raised six thousand dollars, which was placed in the Strongs bank in Green Bay. Without warning, the bank failed and all of their monies were lost. However word went out about their plight and funds come into the church to help make up for the lost funds. They reached their goal and the new church was finally completed in 1886. This was indeed a time for celebration with the cornerstone laid by the first Bishop of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, the Right Reverend Bishop John Henry Hobart Brown. Reverend Goodnough was also present and was able to enjoy all accomplishments made for another six years until he passed away in 1890.

Taking a look at Housing: Need related to inventory

As a branch of the series of articles on the economic effects on the Oneida community Kalihwisaks reporter Nate Wisneski will focus on the Oneida Housing Authority and their role in serving the Oneida Tribe.

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

With new acquisitions to the Oneida Housing Authority's (OHA) inventory logic may lead one to believe that the waiting list of roughly 125 families would dwindle. According to Dale Wheelock, OHA's Housing Executive Director that's just not the case.

"Our waiting list has been growing. It seems people are moving back to the reservation, especially in the current economy," said Wheelock.

According to Wheelock, there are currently 255 rental units, 81 home ownership homes and three home grant units spread across the reservation.

OHA aims to provide multiple and affordable housing options for members of the community. The tribal program is looking to add 70 housing units over the

Sap boil down begins

Kali photos/Travis Cottrell

The Oneida Nation School System continues to harvest sap from local maple trees. When nearly 33 gallons of sap have been collected, the sap is then poured into a kettle to be set over a fire and boiled down to make a single gallon of sweet syrup. The sap boil down can be a lengthy process depending on the size of the fire as well as how much sap needs to be boiled.

TANF program offers assistance to those in need

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Kalihwisaks will be focusing on the effects of the economic downturn and sharing stories of Oneidas struggling in these financial hard times. This is the fourth story in the series.

Jolene Nicholson has reentered the workforce, and credits Justine Huff of Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) with getting her on track.

"Justine Huff helped me get my GED, and now I got a job at the casino," said Nicholson. ""I'm really happy that they have the program to help me work towards my goal that I procrastinated so long to get."

Social Services Economic Support Specialist Huff worked with Nicholson to establish what her needs were.

"Every person's different, not one person walks in with the same kind of scenario," said Huff. "We concentrate on getting the GED first … then we look at are there any other barriers? Maybe she needs a driver's license, car insurance."

The TANF program works with individuals to prepare them to become financially self-sufficient. The program offers classes on how to budget money as well as offers incentives for pursuing further training such as computer classes and completing a GED.

Oneida students enjoy national success

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Four students from the Oneida Nation School System participated in the 24th Annual American Indian Science & Engineering Society (AISES) National Science Fair held in Albuquerque, New Mexico, March 24-26, 2011. Louisa Mehojah, grade 7; Sheila Stevens, grade 8; Guadalupe Martinez, grade 11 & Ululani Nunies, grade 12, were the students sponsored by ONSS with the support of the Oneida Nation School Board and the endorsement of the Oneida Nation Business Committee.

Students participated in the ONSS Science Fair prior to the national science fair and prepared during their day-to-day studies. Ululani Nunies says, "I spent about two months researching. We had a class for it, just when we do science fair, during that time I could figure out what I wanted to do and then do the research." During this time the students drew inspiration from current events, future needs, and their own curiosity. As a result the projects produced included floating eggs, loony balloons, healthy drinking options, and oil spill clean up. Sheila Stevens comments on the inspiration behind

CORRECTION

In the article of the Hobart Episcopal church in Oneida of the March 24, 2011 Kalihwisaks, it was stated "Nashotah House near Fond du Lac, Wisconsin." Nashotah House is located about 60 miles south of Fond du Lac, about 25 miles due west of Milwaukee.

In the March 24, 2011 Kalihwisaks on page 2a, incorrect information was submitted about the number of candidates to vote for in the May 7, 2011 Primary Election for Oneida Business Committee. Voters should choose one (1) officer per seat and up to five (5) council members.

List of upcoming WisDOT State Highway projects affecting the Oneida Reservation through 2012

STH 172, 9280-04-72 STH 54 and Casino Entrance Roundabouts – Roundabouts will be constructed at the STH 54 and STH 172 intersections. Construction is expected to start in April/May 2011 at the casino/airport entrance. Traffic will be detoured along CTH EB (Packerland) north to STH 54 back to STH 172. This roundabout is expected to be completed by the middle of July 2011. Construction on the STH 54 roundabout will begin at that time. This roundabout will be constructed in two stages.

During the first stage, traffic on STH 54 will not be impacted. STH 172 traffic will be detoured up CTH GE to STH 54 back to STH 172. In this first stage, 3 of the 4 legs of the roundabout will be built (all except the west leg of STH 54). The first stage will take approximately 2 months. The second stage will be to construct the STH 54 west leg. At this time, STH 54 traffic will be detoured down CTH GE to STH 172. Traffic will then be using the roundabout and the detour continued using CTH E to CTH U (east service road) back to STH 172. This stage will be completed in approximately 3 weeks.

US 41/WIS 54 Mason Street Interchange, 1133-03-72—The US 41/WIS 54 interchange will be reconstructed in 2012. Construction is anticipated to begin February 2012. Mason St. will be closed from Hinkle St. through Taylor St. The posted detour will begin at Hwy 172 to Hwy 41 to IH 43 to Hwy 54 at the University Interchange. Construction is anticipated to take 6 to 8 months.

Hwy RK, South Frontage Road, 9202-07-72—Hwy RK, a frontage road (South Frontage Road) paralleling WIS 29 will be constructed as part of the US 41/WIS 29 interchange improvements. Hwy RK will accommodate local traffic between County Highway J and Hwy EB (Packerland Drive). WIS 29 will be converted to freeway status during the Hwy 41 project, thus necessitating the need for Hwy RK.

Access from Hwy J to Hwy 29 will be eliminated. Hwy J will be reconstructed with a roundabout at the intersection with Hwy RK. Hwy J will be built under new Hwy 29 bridges over Hwy J. Hwy RK construction is planned for 2011 and into 2012.

STH 54, 9210-11-71 Duck Creek Bridge Replacement and Seminary Road Intersection – This project involves the replacement of the Duck Creek Bridge north of the existing bridge and construction of a roundabout at the STH 54 and Seminary Road intersection. Construction on the new bridge and roadway will begin in spring 2012. The project is currently planned to be completed under traffic (no detours) using temporary lanes and constructing the roundabout in stages.

STH 29, Hwy FF Interchange – The Department is currently planning to construct this interchange in 2013 and 2014. Design is just beginning. Specific details are unavailable at this time.

Listening and Learning session scheduled Apr. 26

The U.S. Department of Education will be holding several Listening and Learning sessions in urban Indian communities in Spring 2011. The next urban Indian Listening and Learning session with Indian community and tribal leaders and Native student-serving representatives will be held on Tuesday, April 26, 2011, at the Radisson Hotel & Conference Center in Green Bay, WI, from 9:00 am MST to 4:00 pm MST.

Additional Listening and Learning sessions will be held in Los Angeles, CA, and Stockton, CA. Dates and exact locations are TBD.

These Listening and Learning sessions in urban Indian communities are a follow-up to a series of 2010 tribal leader consultations that were conducted in Anchorage, AK; Espanola, NM; Shawnee, OK; Pine Ridge, SD; Window Rock, AZ; and Puyallup, WA.

The session will provide you with an opportunity to voice your thoughts and engage in dialogue with senior officials from the Department. The Department is committed to moving forward in Indian education and anticipates that interactions among tribal and community leaders, Indian education stakeholders, and the Department will create a more effective education policy.

Thornberry Creek at Oneida Joins Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program

Oneida, WI – The Thornberry Creek at Oneida golf course has received certification in Environmental Planning from the Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program for Golf Courses (ACSP), an international program administered by Audubon International designed to help lawnmowers preserve and enhance the environmental quality of their property. The plan was developed by Steve Archibald, Golf Course Superintendent, who is also recognized for his effort to plan for environmental stewardship.

Thornberry Creek at Oneida was recently received certification from the Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program for Golf Courses to enhance conservation efforts.

The Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program for Golf Courses provides an advisory service to help existing golf courses develop effective conservation and wildlife enhancement programs. This worldwide effort is coordinated by Audubon International and is sponsored in part by the United States Golf Association.

"The open space of a golf course is utilized not only by golfers, but is habitat for a variety of wildlife species," explained Jim Sluiter, Staff Ecologist for Audubon International. "We welcome Thornberry Creek at Oneida's commitment to the environment and to managing the golf course with wildlife in mind."

By joining and participating in the ACSP, Thornberry Creek at Oneida will be involved in projects that enhance habitat for wildlife and preserve natural resources for the benefit of the local community. These projects may include: placing nesting boxes for cavity-nesting birds such as bluebirds and swallows, utilizing integrated pest management techniques, conserving water, and maintaining food and cover for wildlife.

"The Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program benefits both people and wildlife," said Sluiter. "It's a great way for the managers of developed properties and environmental organizations to work together to become better stewards of land and natural resources."

After the environmental plan is approved, properties in the program may apply for certification in Wildlife and Habitat Management, Chemical Use Reduction and Safety, Water Conservation, Water Quality Management, and Outreach and Education by demonstrating that they have met minimum requirements for each category. For more information on golf and the environment, visit www.golfandenvironment.org.

Audubon International is an environmental organization dedicated to educating, assisting, and inspiring millions of people from all walks of life to protect and sustain the land, water, wildlife, and natural resources around them. In addition to business, Audubon International also provides programs for golf courses, schools, communities, and new developments. For more information, contact Audubon International, 46 Rarick Rd., Selkirk, NY 12158, USA, (518)767-9051, e-mail them via the Internet at acsp@audubonintenational.org, or visit their website at www.audubonintenational.org.

next three years to add to the already 1025 individuals it serves now.

OHA's budget is mainly funded through grants. "Our operational expenses plus rent receipts are packaged into our yearly budget. It's completely grant funded (with) no tribal contribution," Wheelock said.

Rent calculation within OHA has seemed to cause confusion among community members. A full sheet of rent deductions along with family composition creates rent amounts that differ for each family.

"We can charge no more 30 percent of a person's adjusted income," said Wheelock. "In reality, it's closer to 15 – 19 percent. If they have three kids you would deduct $2400 on their adjusted gross income for each kid, if they were an elder an additional $400 would come off."

Deductions are also available for school related, daycare and medical travel costs.

In lieu of renting from OHA a growing list of community members are waiting to join the programs Home Buyer program. The program offers a home for purchase on tribal land that is leased through the land office. It has a no interest loan and a $100 per month administrative charge.

"We build the units for the family then they own it after 15 years. (They) pay 15 percent of their adjusted gross income for their payment and its just for sticks and bricks," said Wheelock. "The labor cost is paid by grant, that's why it's affordable. You can't beat the Home Buyer program"

OHA's application procedure is simply a paper process. Once an individual fully completes the application they are placed on the waiting list. The waiting has also provided confusion for some who see others apply after them but be granted housing sooner. Like rent, family composition and availability of certain unit sizes play a major role.

"The demand for one and five bedroom is really high. The easiest is three bedrooms," said Wheelock.

Movement of current tenants who have outgrown their current unit must be accounted for as well.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Webster finds niche with 'It's S.E.W. Me Designs'

Business specializes in bags with Iroquois designs

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Sunny Webster knew at an early age a job behind a desk crunching numbers all day was not in her wheelhouse. Fashion and design were her calling.

Webster is the owner of It's S.E.W. Me Designs, a business focused on handbags with Iroquois flare.

It's S.E.W. Me Designs is based in Chicago where Webster received her Bachelor's Degree at the Illinois Institute of Art.

"(I started) with purses about two years ago," Webster said. "I live in a large city so they kind of had funky designs and (I also) made retro bags. The wampum belt bags started for the (Oneida) powwow last year."

Like most small business owners, it took some time for Webster to find her target market.

"In the last year I found out that making purses with the wampum belt seemed to be my niche," she said. "My people are my niche."

Webster is focused on purses, bags and wallets but can see more items added to her product line.

"I plan on to start making ribbon shirts for this year's powwow," Webster said. "I made one for a friend and it seems really popular. I really want to expand into more items. We are going to start doing quilts but I will start with quilted bags and go from there."

Webster looked at her mother when she was young to keep her creative juices flowing.

"My mom was a really good sketch artist. She influenced me to be really creative with myself," Webster said.

Many of Webster's custom products and designs can be found on Facebook by searching for It's S.E.W. Me Designs.

Tehassi HILL for CHAIRMAN

Shekoli, my name is Tehassi Hill,
I am running for Chairman of our Oneida Nation here in Wisconsin.

I humbly request your support and vote at our Nation's first Primary that will be held on May 7, 2011.

I was elected to the Oneida Business Committee in July 2008. I have previously sat on the Land Commission, the Election Board, and the Oneida School Board. I was an Electrician for the Oneida Department of Public Works for 3 years prior to my seat on council. I graduated from the Oneida Nation High School, and immediately went on to own and successfully operate a small business for six years. I love our Nation, I love our people, and I love what we stand for as Ukwehuwe – the original people – we have a responsibility to our Mother Earth.

In my current position on council, I have assisted in the preparation and development of the 2033 Land Acquisition Plan, which I presented to GTC. I also assisted in the development of the Community Development Planning Committee that I currently chair. This is only a small percentage of my responsibilities as Councilman.

Look for me in upcoming articles.

Vice-Chairwoman's Corner...

Kathy Hughes
Vice-Chairwoman

I attended the MAST Impact Week in Washington DC, March 28 & 29. MAST is the Midwest Area of Sovereign Tribes and every year a MAST meeting is held in D.C. to not only have a meeting but so Tribal leaders can do face-to-face lobbying with our congressional representatives. At our meeting, we discussed a wide range of issues such as water rights, organic gardening/farming, historic preservation, Asian Carp, nuclear Plants and legislative issues such as the budget, Carcieri Fix, energy, economic development, health care, government contracting, passports and a judgeship in Oklahoma.

That is a lot of territory to cover in just a day and a half. But these are fairly common aspects of the MAST agendas. Many of these are ongoing issues that will continue to come up over the year. Some will be resolved by Congress, others we are looking to the administration to accommodate through regulation changes.

The presenters for these issues were key staff from areas such as the Senate Finance Committee, the House Sub-committee on Indian Affairs, the Office of Indian Energy, the Director of the Indian Health Service, the Assistant Secretary of Indian Affairs, the Division Chief for Indian Reservation Roads and the Associate Director for the Office of Intergovernmental Affairs for the White House.

We also met with New Jersey Congressman, Frank Pallone, Minnesota Congresswoman, Betty McCollum, and Michigan Congressman Dan Benishek. It is always the intent of MAST to meet, as a body, with congressional delegates directly to express our concerns and get their understanding and/or support for the MAST positions.

Work continues on the Affordable Care Act to which the Indian Health Care Improvement Act is a part. As you know, there are many challenges to the ongoing implementation of this Act. It is our intent now to make sure that whatever Congress does with the ACA that they don't destroy the IHCIA along with those actions. We have continually spoke to the importance of being able to provide for the health care needs in Indian Country and the documented disparities on almost all levels clearly supports the need for this to take place.

The focus of much of the discussion in Washington DC is a budget that cuts the deficit. In order for that to occur there must be cuts to many of the programs we rely on to maintain daily operations on the reservations. We are closely monitoring the discussions and reviewing any bills that are brought forward for the impact on our operations. Health Care has received increases this past year that have only brought us up to 45% of the level of need for funding. The target is to receive 55% for level of need. Saying that, the MAST adopted a resolution stating the goal should be 100% of level of need. The Federal government has a trust responsibility to address this need for Indian Country. We are not a special interest group but a domestic sovereign nation recognized in the United States Constitution under Article 1.

The work I do on the various national Committees for the CDC, CMS and HHS will continue as long as I am able to represent the Oneida Tribe. As a part of these bodies I have been able to impact changes to regulations that have had a direct effect on our ability to provide services here at our clinic with a budget impact worth more than a million dollars. This work can be very demanding at times when put alongside of what also needs to be taken care of here at home. But when I see the results being put into place here it definitely makes it worth while. Many of you may not be aware of the changes as they can not be seen because it is just an ongoing part of our operations now. An example of this would be with our contract health dollars and the application of Medicare-like rates. Deanna Bauman worked for many years trying to get this regulation change into effect and her work is still talked about on the National level as a result. It is unfortunate it couldn't occur before she retired but I continued her fight with all her associates across the Country and we finally met with success. The application of this one change has had a multi-million dollar impact on our operation. Many Tribes are cutting off services before the end of the fiscal year because they are out of money. Fortunately, we have not had to do that drastic of a cut-back because of the utilization of these changes to their best effectiveness.

The days ahead are worthy of your attention. What takes place in Washington DC is going to impact what is taking place here in Wisconsin. And all will trickle down to Oneida. Our battle will continue to maintain our funding streams at the highest levels possible.

Letters & Opinions...

From Oneida Seven Generations Corporation

An open letter to members of the Oneida Nation from Oneida Seven Generations Corporation

We are concerned, and somewhat suspicious, that groups from outside of Wisconsin, and outside of Brown & Outagamie Counties, have descended on our area to voice their "concern" and opposition to our proposed Pyrolysis-based, waste to energy facility.

They use misinformation, insinuation and distorted "facts" to scare the public.

We wonder what their real motive is; what is their hidden agenda? Is it simply to oppose anything that is Oneida driven?

OSGC's mission is to promote and enhance business and economic diversification for the Oneida Nation. This proposed renewable energy facility will do just that, while providing a safe and sustainable alternative to land filling.

We cannot stress enough that this facility:

- Is not an incinerator
- Will not produce toxic ash
- Will reduce garbage going into our landfills
- Will be funded by Oneida Seven Generations Corporation

Is endorsed by:

- The Oneida Business Committee
- The City of Green Bay
- Sustainable Green Bay
- U.S. Department of the Interior
- Wisconsin Bioenergy Initiative at UW-Madison

- Will meet all federal, state and local standards for health and safety – or it will not be allowed to be built or operated. It is that simple.

Don't be fooled. Don't believe the misinformation and false statements being circulated by those who want to see an Oneida project fail.

For the facts, go to: www.osgc.net or www.wte.org.

Showing Resilience

First of all I would like to say thank you to all of my family, friends, community and native people through out the country that have prayed, supported and helped me and my family.

My name is Mick Escamea. My native name is tehawahwiyaks. I am a "koono" of the wolf clan. I am the father of three children and husband to the same woman for 13 years. I have been blessed with a strong mind, spirit and body that has carried me to many places as a fancy dancer, collegiate football player, wrestler, MMA and fine artist. I thank you for your love and prayers. I also thank the haters that pushed me to work harder. That is the reason I am writing this letter because I must come clean with you. I use to drink Jack Daniels right out of the bottle. I did bumps, crystal meth, coke, and LSD everyday.

Although I was a teenager, I was totally out of control and suicide came to mind. A native man blessed me with a feather and instructed me what I needed to do. I began my sobriety and spiritual cleansing. In the past 23 years I fell a few times, but I got back up. Today and for the rest of my life I have pledged to help our native people. Today my fire burns bright. I am happy, healthy and active. As for the haters, this is the path of the wolf, not the path of the hater so you can kiss my Indian grits.

Mick Escamea

Lady T-Hawks Community Support

Thank You Oneida for your support throughout our 10/11' season.

Words can not express what it meant to have our community support us every step of the way through Regionals. The Turtle School was packed for both Regional games and you traveled to Kimberly to help us get through the hardest game of our season which is something we will always remember. Although we did not win, we were not defeated. We played hard with grace and dignity the entire season and never let up, not once. Thank you so much to our Family for your love, support, and words of encouragement when at times we were discouraged, tired, and needed some reinforcement. The success would have not happen without you and for that we are forever grateful. Thank you to Bob Ganka and the school system for standing behind us every step of the way. Our teachers are truly amazing. Thank You Lisa Rauschenbach for working so hard every step of the way for us. We truely appreciate and are so grateful to you. Thank You!

Melinda Danforth
Councilwoman

It has been a great honor to serve the Oneida people, and I have once again decided to run for a Council position on the Oneida Business Committee. The previous years have been an awesome experience, and again would like the opportunity to advance my ideas and serve the Oneida people. Please vote on Saturday May 7th in Oneida's historic primary.

Cobell Settlement – First Deadline Approaching

The Cobell Settlement is a result of years of litigation that accuses the federal government of mismanagement of its trust responsibilities to effectively manage Individual Indian Trust beneficiaries. Oneida Tribal members have had questions as to whether or not they qualify for this settlement.

The settlement will affect the following individuals:

- Those who had an Individual Indian Money (IIM) account anytime from approximately 1985 through September 30, 2009, or
- Had an individual interest in land held in trust or restricted status by the U.S. government as of September 30, 2009.

There are important deadline dates approaching, please go to www.IndianTrust.com for more information.

Region 5 Tribal Operations Committee

The Region 5 Tribal Operations Committee (R5TOC) is a committee comprised of representatives from tribes located in the Minnesota, Wisconsin & Michigan regions. R5TOC partners with the U.S. EPA Region 5 officials and staff to enhance the protection of human health and the environment in Indian Country and facilitate the implementation of tribal environmental protection programs. Last month, I was honored to be elected as Chairperson of this Committee and have begun to fulfill my responsibilities by ramping up the structure to fit the Tribes needs. Understanding that we have only one year left under the Obama Administration, my focus will be to build sustainable relationships and program practices that will benefit the Tribes no matter who is in office, in so that we are able to bring Indian Country's initiatives to a reality.

Prisoner Reentry Program Update

I am pleased to announce the recently established prisoner reentry program has taken its next step in development and is hiring the program staff. Even though this step is still in the final stages of completion, it takes us one step closer to getting the program up and running. We have been receiving many calls regarding this program, and are anxious to begin administering it on the ground. Please continue to watch for updates in the Kalihwisaks.

Frequently Asked Questions
Oneida Tribal General Election Primary

How will the election process be different for the 2011 General Election?

In 2011, a Primary Election will be held. In years past there was no primary election.

What is a primary?

Excerpts from Oneida Tribal Election Law:

2.12-2. There shall be a primary election for Business Committee positions whenever there are three (3) or more candidates for any officer positions or sixteen (16) or more candidates for the at-large council member positions.

(a) The two (2) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for each officer position shall be placed on the ballot.
(b) The fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for the at-large council member positions shall be placed on the ballot.
(c) Any position where a tie exists to determine the candidates to be placed on the ballot shall include all candidates where the tie exists.

2.12-3. The Election Board shall cancel the primary election if the Business Committee positions did not draw the requisite number of candidates for a primary by the petitioning deadline set for the primary.

2.12-4. In the event a candidate withdraws or is unable to run for office after being declared a winner in the primary, the Election Board shall declare the next highest primary vote recipient the primary winner. This procedure shall be repeated as necessary until the ballot is full or until there are no available candidates. If the ballot has already been printed, the procedures for notifying the Oneida public in section 2.5-11 and 2.5-12 shall be followed, including the requirement to print a notice in the Tribal newspaper if time lines allow.

Why have a primary?

To give members a chance to select from fewer candidates or the Business Committee positions in the General Election.

Will there be a primary for all vacancies?

No. The primary election is for Business Committee vacancies only.

When will the primary be held?

On Saturday, May 7, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

If there are only two candidates running for an officer position, will a primary still be held for that position?

No. The primary is designed to get the top two candidates for each officer position. If only two applicants run for that position, each applicant will automatically be placed on the General Election ballot as a candidate.

If a candidate didn't advance in the primary, can I write their name on my ballot at the General Election?

No. Write-in candidates are not allowed.

When will the Caucus be held?

On Saturday, March 12, 2011 at the Norbert Hill Center at 1:00 p.m.

Is the Caucus just for vacancies within the Business Committee?

No, the Caucus will be for ALL vacancies of all boards, committees, and commissions with elected positions to be filled at the 2011 General Election.

When can I submit application for candidacy?

Officially this is done at the Caucus by being nominated and submitting the required application by the deadline date to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

If I can't attend the Caucus, can I still submit my application to be a candidate?

Yes. You will need to complete a petition and submit the required application by the deadline date.

How long do I have to submit an application to become a candidate?

All applications are due by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, March 18, 2011 to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

When is the General Election?

On Saturday, July 16, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

When can I begin campaigning?

Whenever you wish.

Excerpt from Oneida Election Law: 2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:

(a) Placement of campaign signs:
(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's permission.
(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.
(3) No campaign sign shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.

(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.

(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.

(d) Enforcement. The Zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.

(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Can I vote by absentee ballot?

No. Article III Section 2 of the Constitution states "All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin who are 21 years of age or over shall be qualified voters provided they present themselves in person at the polls on the day of election."

Will the Milwaukee voting site be open for both the primary and general election?

Yes. Business Committee Resolution 03-13-2002-O states: "NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that an approved facility; compliance with the Oneida Election Law, 2.8-0, Section B, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is hereby designated as a second polling site for Oneida triennial elections, beginning with the July, 2002, election." The SEOTS Building is located at 6820 West Wedgewood Drive, Milwaukee, WI.

Public Hearing Notice

11:30AM • Norbert Hill Center (BCCR)

May 26, 2011

Purpose:
Amendments to the Child Custody, Placement and Visitation law to Address a Parent Move to require a parent with physical custody of a child to provide notice to the other parent prior to moving outside of the state. The Amendments also provide a mechanism for the non-custodial parent to object and a hearing to be held. The Amendments are based on a request submitted by the Oneida Appeals Commission.

Purpose:
Oneida Tribal Regulation of Domestic Animals Ordinance Amendments.
Purpose: Oneida Tribal Regulation of Domestic Animals Ordinance Amendments. The purpose of these amendments is to grandfather in those individuals who have more animals than allowed under the Tribe's law, if they had those animals on the land before they became subject to the jurisdiction of the Tribe. The amendments would also allow an individual to operate a kennel on land zoned residential, if he or she obtains a permit from the Land Commission which allows the kennel. Finally, the amendments clarify the type of land the Ordinance applies to and allows individuals to appeal fines and citations to the Environmental Resource Board.

Purpose:
Amendments to Address Guardians Ad Litem Appointments and Conflicts of Interest.
The intent of these amendments is to prevent conflicts of interest in the appointment of guardians ad litem. The provisions for appointing a guardian ad litem are located in the Child Custody, Placement, and Visitation law. Under the amendments, a person would be disqualified for appointment as a guardian ad litem for a particular case if he or she is related to an interested party, an actual party, a Commissioner for the proceeding, or to an appointing Commissioner. Amendments to the Paternity law and Child Support law are also included in order to reference the Child Custody, Placement and Visitation law's standards for guardian ad litem appointments.

Purpose:
Hunting, Fishing and Trapping Law Amendments.
The purpose of these amendments is to update the Hunting, Fishing and Trapping Law for the 2011-2012 season. The Amendments would allow ten and eleven-year olds to obtain a sportsman license to hunt after completing a hunter safety course, if he or she remains within arms grasp of a mentor while hunting; obeys all hunting laws and regulations; and obtains the necessary licenses, permits and/or tags. The Amendments also outline the requirements that a person must meet in order to be a mentor to a ten or eleven-year old hunter
In addition, the Amendments would allow tree stands to remain up until April 1st, as opposed to two weeks after the end of archery season; require a buck to have at least 4 points in order to be harvested; limit a designated hunter to hunting for one elder or disabled person; legalize colony traps; require individuals to obtain a permit before possessing or releasing birds for dog training purposes; and allow non-Indians to obtain a predator's license to hunt fox, coyote and raccoon on the Reservation.

Purpose:
Purpose: Indian Preference in Contracting Law Adoption
The Indian Preference in Contracting law would replace the current Oneida Indian Preference Law, which was originally adopted in 1998 and last amended in 2003. The purposes of the law are to 1) expand the application of preference in contracting, thus increasing economic opportunities for tribal businesses, and 2)to prevent increased Tribal costs due to misuse of Indian preference entitlement.

Purpose:
Amendments to the Per Capita Ordinance
The intent of these Amendments is to:
- Adopt a fine of 1/3 of the balance of the trust account to penalize those individuals who submit fraudulent proof of a diploma when claiming their trust account funds.
- Prohibit someone who is dually enrolled in the Oneida Tribe and another Tribe from being eligible for a per capita payment.
- Outline how a Tribal member may refuse a per capita payment or trust account payment.
- Clarify how prior payments may be claimed and how they are distributed.
- Prohibit a per capita payment to a Tribal member whose date of death occurs before the payment is distributed.

Purpose:
Voluntary Severance Law Adoption
The purpose of this law is to govern voluntary severance by creating the authorities and responsibilities of various Tribal entities when a voluntary severance is available to employees of the Tribe. The Law allows the Oneida Business Committee to reduce the Tribe's workforce, based on financial conditions, through the enactment of a voluntary severance. Under the Law, the Human Resource Department and the Executive Managers are responsible for informing employees of the voluntary severance and making the final determination as to whether an employee is eligible to receive a severance. The intent of the Law is not to terminate employees based on performance issues and applies only to those employees who voluntarily resign from the Tribe.

Public Hearing Process Testimony:
Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.
Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or Peril Huff, Legislative Reference Office at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.
If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via email tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 920-869-4376*.*

Vote for Change

Let your Voice Be Heard

Elect Arlene L. DANFORTH

Secretary – OBC

Mother: Evelyn (Hill) Danforth
Father: Leander Danforth
My uncle is Julius Danforth, former Oneida Nation Chairman

There are many issues our Nation needs to address.

Where will we end up if the Oneida Nation continues to function in its current capacity?

We need strong and effective new leadership to design and implement the necessary changes that will affect our government in a positive manner for the future.

Financially, the spending needs to stop! How many times do we have to say that? The Business Committee approved the spending on a consultant group to work with the employees of the Oneida Community Health Center that cost us approximately $450,000.00. Were there alternative measures that could have been taken? Check the records out to see who on the Business Committee voted for this.

We need to ensure enrolled Tribal members are given the first opportunity for jobs. How long have we asked for this?

We also need to provide raises and better benefits to the employees that work for us. This must be done on our part. I can only refer you to the September 18th, 2010 Business Committee minutes to see which committee members voted against the employee raises.

My commitment is to the people of the Oneida Nation. I will make my voice known to protect the Tribe' assets. I will demand "overall" accountability. I will do all I can to promote change for the betterment of the Nation.

Sekoli, this is my immediate family. We have another son, Nathan, who has his own immediate family with his wife Ashley and two daughters, Channel and Eva. Our extended Oneida family is very much cherished, loved, and appreciated by us.

Gary L. JORDAN for COUNCILMAN

Actions as elected officials create consequences or benefits for our immediate and extended families. Which path we choose must be determined by a vision, mission, moral & ethical values, and Oneida Nation priorities. Focusing on our vision and mission, while maintaining moral & ethical conduct, will create many benefits and help us steer clear of embarrassing financial, social, and political consequences for the Tribe.

I was on the OBC when "we" created these initial foundational themes in the early 1990's. Since leaving office in 1999 as the OBC Vice Chairman, my associates and I have been blessed to work for other Tribal operations on HR activities and economic development. My main forte is that of revenue generation via calculated economic growth. Proper economic development eliminates the need for being in the crisis mode and chopping budgets.

If elected, I plan on working with our GTC and the OBC, on two major revenue generation ideas that I'll bring to the table that will create at least 300 more jobs and an estimated increase in gross sales of over $130 million. Oneida has a "specialized" set of workforce skills that we are overlooking. With proper vision and direction by the leadership, the sky is the limit.

As the State and Federal dollars begin to dry up due to their never ending spending, Tribes will lose additional grant dollars. Hence, it is important to get moving right now economically to generate more revenue to offset the lost grant money.

I will fight to retain every Oneida job while in office. There are way too many economic opportunities locally that will increase our employment base by the hundreds, rather than laying off Oneida workers. We need an increase in wages, healthcare/OHC, public safety/OPD, social services, education, elderly services, housing, 401k match, veterans assistance, public works infrastructure, language program, and many other budgets, not a decrease!

I have both education and proven experience that will benefit the Oneida People for generations

"When they get their GED, they get $250 … If they do three computer classes, they get a $50 Wal-Mart card, when the kids get a C-average, we'll help them pay for their driving test," said Huff.

TANF also addresses the needs of someone returning to the workforce.

"We sat in a room here and were thinking 'Ok, when you start a job, what are all the things you need to stay employed that you can think of,'" said Huff.

TANF can help with uniforms, tools, license fees, gas, childcare and so on.

According to Huff, the TANF staff is currently working with their biggest caseloads.

"You're seeing people now because of the economy walk in the door who never walked in the door before. Their hours are cut, and they went from full-time to part-time and they don't have health insurance anymore, or they need the FoodShare, and that's what we're here for," said Huff.

On the other side of the coin, after working for TANF for 28 years, Huff has seen families who continue to need assistance generation after generation.

"It's a cycle, and sometimes it's hard to get out of that cycle," she said. "It's a fear of getting off (assistance), fear of losing your benefits."

While the goal of the TANF program is to move families off of public assistance to independence, Huff states the TANF program continues to help families up to six months after finding work.

"We don't cut them off right away. That's a misunderstanding that people have that when they get a job, that all their benefits end, and that's not true," said Huff.

Huff states she gets calls from past clients years down the road asking for advice.

"You get the ones that are successful, and that's what makes the job all worthwhile," said Huff.

Nicholson had contacted Huff to ask about transferring from her current job to a different department with better hours.

"I would like to thank the TANF program and Justine Huff for helping me and my family and my kids," said Nicholson.

The mother of four children ages 7 to 18, Nicholson hopes her struggle to get her degree will encourage her children to do the same.

"I want them to know I want them to graduate, because you need that," she said.

She's also happy that her parents who have passed would be proud of her accomplishments.

"Keep making them proud; keep making my kids proud, too," she said.

Did you know the FoodShare program was formerly known as the Food Stamp program?

Did you know that the FoodShare funding comes from the federal government's United States Department of Agriculture (USDA)?

Did you know that the Oneida Tribe contracts with the State of Wisconsin just like counties do, to operate the FoodShare and BadgerCare programs and these programs have been in existence since 1977 in our community?

The Tribe does not pay these benefits or staff salaries out of tribal dollars however, the program is part of the overall tribal budget.

Did you know some of the Tribes of Wisconsin are the only Tribes in the United States that can operate the FoodShare and BadgerCare (formerly Medical Assistance) programs within their communities?

Scams are No Joking Matter; Don't Become an April Fool

Distributed By Ken Hess

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist for Wisconsin

Being the butt of an April fool's joke is fine when it's good-natured fun. But no one wants to fall victim to a scam artist or identity thief.

Ken Hess

You may think you're safe simply by not carrying your Social Security card with you and not providing your personal information over the Internet or by email. But scam artists have become shrewd. Never reply to a phone call or email claiming to be from Social Security and asking for your Social Security number or personal information.

Identity theft is one of the fastest-growing crimes in America. If you think you've been the victim of an identity thief, you should contact the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) at www.ftc.gov/bcp/edu/microsites/idtheft. Or, you can call 1-877-IDTHEFT (1-877-438-4338); TTY 1-866-653-4261.

Misleading advertisers sometimes victimize some people who receive Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits. Often, these companies offer Social Security services for a fee, even though the same services are available directly from Social Security free of charge. These services include getting a:

- corrected Social Security card showing a bride's married name;
- Social Security card to replace a lost card;
- Social Security Statement; and
- Social Security number for a child.

Some direct scammers suggest that Social Security is in dire financial shape and that people risk losing their Social Security or Medicare benefits unless they send a contribution or membership fee to the advertiser.

If you receive or see what you believe is misleading advertising for Social Security services, send the complete mailing, including the envelope, to: Office of the Inspector General, Fraud Hotline, Social Security Administration, P.O. Box 17768, Baltimore, MD 21235. Also, advise your State's attorney general or consumer affairs office and the Better Business Bureau.

Learn more about identity theft at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10064.html. Read about misleading advertising at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10005.html

Please don't let a scam artist or identity thief make an April fool out of you.

Key deadline approaches for Native Americans in $3.4 billion Indian trust settlement

Washington, D.C. – March 28, 2011 – The Court-ordered process of notifying individual Indians of their legal rights in the historic $3.4 billion class action Settlement, Cobell v. Salazar, is coming to a close. The Settlement resolves claims related to Individual Indian Money (or IIM) accounts and land held in trust by the federal government for the benefit of individual Indians.

Class Members all over the country have either received detailed information about their legal rights and options via U.S. Mail or through an extensive media campaign, which included Native American print media, television and radio ads, and online advertising.

Class Members who received a formal notice in the mail about the Settlement and who are currently receiving IIM account statements do not have to do anything to receive payment. Individuals who believe they should be part of the Settlement but did not receive a notice in the mail or are not receiving IIM account statements need to fill out a Claim Form as soon as possible, available at the Indian Trust website or by calling the toll-free number.

Class Members who wish to keep their right to sue the federal government over mismanagement claims covered by the Settlement must exclude themselves from the Settlement by April 20, 2011. Class Members can also submit written comments or objections about any Settlement terms that concern them by April 20, 2011.

The Settlement provides a $1.5 billion fund to compensate an estimated 500,000 affected individual Indian trust beneficiaries who have or had IIM accounts or own trust land. The Settlement creates two groups of Class Members eligible to receive money from the fund—the Historical Accounting Class and the Trust Administration Class.

- The Historical Accounting Class comprises individual Indians who were alive on September 30, 2009, who had an open IIM account anytime between October 25, 1994 and September 30, 2009, and whose account had at least one cash transaction.
- The Trust Administration Class comprises individual Indians alive on September 30, 2009, who had an IIM Account at any time from 1985 through September 30, 2009, recorded in currently available electronic data in federal government systems, as well as individual Indians who, as of September 30, 2009, had a recorded or demonstrable interest in land held in trust or restricted status.
- The estates of deceased Class Members will also receive a Settlement distribution if the deceased beneficiary's account was open as of September 30, 2009, or their land interest was open in probate as of that date. Other eligibility conditions and requirements for each Class are detailed in the Settlement Agreement.

Under the Settlement Agreement, $1.9 billion will fund a Department of the Interior program to buy fractionated interests in trust or restricted land from willing sellers to benefit tribal communities and aid in land consolidation. Depending on the level of participation in the land consolidation program, up to $60 million will be set aside to provide scholarships for higher education for American Indian and Alaska Native youth.

The website www.IndianTrust.com and toll-free number 1-800-961-6109 are available to provide more information about the Settlement and the legal rights of Class Members. Individuals who are unsure whether they are included in the Settlement should visit the website or call the toll-free number for more information.

April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month

The first official Sexual Assault Awareness Month (SAAM) was observed nationally in 2001. The color of the ribbon that represents Sexual Assault is teal blue. The intent of the campaign is to raise public awareness about sexual assault against women, men and children and to add power and momentum to prevention efforts, support for survivors, and strengthen response across the country.

Sexual Assault in the US carries some alarming numbers, especially for Native American women. According to the latest figures, one out of every three Native American women will experience sexual assault in her lifetime. They are at least 2.5 times as likely to be sexually assaulted in their lifetimes as other women in the U.S. (Amnesty International report 04/25/07). Here in our community, Wise Women Gathering Place, a non-profit organization, works to promote peace, respect and belonging for everyone. We have programming to address healthy relationship development, healthy and inclusive group participation practices and response to families who have survived domestic violence and abuse. We work to prevent violence, abuse and assault by teaching facts about those things. We also teach some history about how sexual abuse was perpetrated against Native children in the past and the natural response that followed those traumas and how the effects still impact our communities today.

Another fact is that 86 percent of reported rapes and other sexual assaults against Native American women are committed by non-Indian men who are rarely prosecuted, according to the report, "Maze of Injustice: The Failure to Protect Indigenous Women from Sexual Violence in the USA." The reasons for this are complicated and vary from community to community and state to state. In many cases, the laws do not carry over from state or county to Tribal lands and perpetrators may not be subject to Tribal law enforcement and, since the crime was committed on Tribal lands, nearby county or state law enforcement may not pursue because of jurisdiction. On some reservations, perpetrators have actually been drawn there by this knowledge for the purpose of assaulting women, flaunting the law and having no fear of being brought to trial.

Recently, July 2010, the Tribal Law and Order Act (amendment to HR 725[8]) passed giving police more authority in seeking prosecution of non-Natives who commit crimes on Native lands.

On a more individual level, it is important to remember: Always Ask. No means No; Silence does Not equal consent; and only Yes means Yes.

If you have questions or need help regarding sexual assault or abuse, there is help in the community. Legal Notice

Important information about the $3.4 billion Indian Trust Settlement

For current or former IIM account holders, Owners of land held in trust or restricted status, or their heirs

There is a proposed Settlement in Cobell v. Salazar, a class action lawsuit about individual Indian land held in trust by the federal government. This notice is just a summary. For details, call the toll-free number or visit the website listed below.

The lawsuit claims that the federal government violated its duties by (a) mismanaging trust funds/assets, (b) improperly accounting for those funds, and (c) mismanaging trust land/assets. The trust funds include money collected from farming and grazing leases, timber sales, mining, and oil and gas production from land owned by American Indians/Alaska Natives.

If you are included in the Settlement, your rights will be affected. To object to the Settlement, to comment on it, or to exclude yourself, you should get a detailed notice at www.IndianTrust.com or by calling 1-800-961-6109.

Can I get money?

There are two groups or "Classes" in the Settlement eligible for payment. Each Class includes individual IIM account holders or owners of land held in trust or restricted status who were alive on September 30, 2009.

Historical Accounting Class Members

- Had an open individual Indian Money account ("IIM") anytime between October 25, 1994 and September 30, 2009, and
- The account had at least one cash transaction.
- Includes estates of account holders who died as of September 30, 2009, if the IIM account was still open on that date.

Trust Administration Class Members

- Had an IIM account recorded in currently available data in federal government systems any time from approximately 1985 to September 30, 2009, or
- Owned trust land or land in restricted status as of September 30, 2009.
- Includes estates of landowners who died as of September 30, 2009 where the trust interests were in probate as of that date. This means you have asked a court to transfer ownership of the deceased landowner's property.

An individual may be included in one or both Classes.

What does the Settlement provide?

- A $1.5 billion fund to pay those included in the Classes.
- A $1.9 billion fund to buy small interests in trust or restricted land owned by many people.
- Up to $60 million to fund scholarships to improve access to higher education for Indian youth.
- A government commitment to reform the Indian trust management and accounting system.

How much can I get?

- Historical Accounting Class Members will each get $1,000.
- Trust Administration Class Members will get at least $500.
- If you own a small parcel of land with many other people, the federal government may ask you to sell it. You will be offered fair market value. If you sell your land it will be returned to tribal control.

If you believe you are a member of either Class and are not receiving IIM account statements, you will need to call the toll-free number or visit the website to register.

What are my other rights?

- If you wish to keep your right to sue the federal government about the claims in this Settlement, you must exclude yourself by April 20, 2011.
- If you stay in the Settlement you can object to or comment on it by April 20, 2011. The detailed notice explains how to exclude yourself or object/comment.

The U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia will hold a hearing on June 20, 2011, to consider whether to approve the Settlement. It will also consider a request for attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses in the amount of $99.9 million. However, Class Counsel has fee agreements that would pay them 14.75% of the funds created for the Classes, which could result in an award of $223 million. The Court may award more or less than these amounts based on controlling law. If approved, these payments and related costs will come out of the Settlement funds available for payment to Class Members.

If you wish, you or your own lawyer may ask to appear and speak at the hearing at your own cost. For more information, call or go to the website shown below or write to Indian Trust Settlement, P.O. Box 9577, Dublin, OH 43017-4877.

Govenor Walker denies funding for file sharing system

By Todd Richmond
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Gov. Scott Walker's budget plan denies funding for a high-tech file-sharing network that allows officers to transmit documents electronically and detect criminals' movements across jurisdictions.

The lack of money could cripple the Wisconsin Justice Information System. Contributions to the network have lagged, but the move could force dozens of police departments to revert to a pen-and-paper system and close down inter-agency connections the system's proponents say are crucial for resource-strapped investigators trying to connect the dots in a post-Sept. 11 world.

"To lose that WIJIS gateway because of funding is just ... it would be like, OK, here you got a horse. Today we're going to give you a brand new car. And then next week we're taking away the car and giving you a mule," said Gillett Police Chief Gary Pemrich. "If we lose it, someone could very well get hurt."

The network was envisioned as a Google for cops. It enables officers to transmit citations to prosecutors and judges from squad car laptops, saving the time it would take to drive to the county seat and hand deliver the paperwork at the courthouse.

The system also bridges law enforcement agencies' databases, enabling police across Wisconsin to access millions of internal files from other agencies. Documents include court records, arrest records, incident reports and prosecutors' confidential files.

The links allow police to access layers of information beyond standard criminal background checks, which provide only arrest and charging records. Incident reports and prosecutor files offer police deeper, more detailed information about suspects, including details about contacts with police that didn't result in an arrest or charges.

A northern Wisconsin sheriff's department might respond to a burglary, run the suspect's name through the network and learn he's under investigation in Milwaukee for drugs or threatened someone in Green Bay. That information could help deputies deal with him on the street as well as tie him to similar unsolved crimes.

The system links to an FBI database that contains information on police contacts that don't generate arrests or charges. That allows Wisconsin officers to scour the country for background on suspects. About half the states have similar networks.

"Since 9-11, you need to have access to real time justice information to have any hope of making patterns," said Brenda Ray, the networks' interim director.

The state Office of Justice Assistance started building the system in 2006 using federal Homeland Security and criminal justice grants. But the network has been operational now for four years, making it harder to win federal start-up dollars, agency officials said.

Police television shows like "NCIS" have left the public with the impression agencies have all-encompassing data files available at the swipe of a finger, Ray said, but in reality "we barely have enough money to keep the lights on."

OJA has requested about $2 million in state money to maintain the system. The agency has proposed diverting a percentage of a criminal surcharge set up to fund a Democratic mandate to collect racial data from traffic stops to WIJIS.

But many Republicans have opposed collecting racial data, saying racial profiling isn't a problem in Wisconsin. Walker's budget eliminates all funding for racial data collection, eliminating that potential funding stream for WIJIS. Walker's spokesman, Cullen Werwie, said the state can't afford to pour money into WIJIS in the face of a $3.6 billion deficit.

"His budget proposal makes the tough decisions necessary to reduce overall government spending," Werwie said in an email.

It's unclear what a lack of state funding would mean.

OJA officials are still searching for federal dollars, but they say there's no guarantee any will be available. Federal grants are meant to get projects started, not as a steady funding stream.

At best, OJA may have to put efforts to add more information to the system on hold. The agency had hoped to add detailed probation and parole records soon. At worst, the system could shut down.

The network has yet to really catch on with police. All but two of Wisconsin's district attorneys make their files accessible, but only about 170 of the 650 or so law enforcement agencies have opened up theirs.

La Crosse County Sheriff Steve Helgeson's agency was one of the first to join, but stopped using it in 2009.

The concept looked promising, the sheriff said, but the network hasn't gained momentum. Too few agencies, especially his neighboring departments in western Wisconsin, whose information is the most valuable to his agency, have joined, he said. And agencies that participate don't share enough data, he said. His county has a common record management software system many of the smaller jurisdictions use, he added.

"It just hasn't seemed to be as valuable as it sounded like it would be in the beginning," he said. "I was pretty excited, but after it rolled out, it seemed to sputter."

Still, supporters say losing the network would set police work back decades.

The Milwaukee Police Department, the state's largest, just went online with it late last year. Deputy Inspector Mary Hoerig, MPD's project manager for WIJIS, said the project offers a way to build trust between agencies.

"We're sharing 90 percent of our data with other jurisdictions in the state of Wisconsin," she said. "The whole concept, the transparency, 20 years ago that was unheard of. It just opens up so much information about faces and places we didn't have before."

Pemrich, the Gillett chief, said he has four full-time officers. WIJIS' e-filing component saves them from driving the 25 miles to Oconto, the county seat, to drop off paperwork, he said.

The network allows his agency to leverage larger jurisdictions' manpower, he said. His officers can scan other investigators' narrative reports and notes, gathering deep background on criminals that can make them safer, he said.

"If you take WIJIS out of the picture, there is a monumental waste of tax dollars that has been invested and now it's gone," the chief said. "It's just unbelievable it would even be considered."

Wis. gov's budget would end registration stickers

MADISON, Wis. (AP) _ Gov. Scott Walker's budget calls for doing away with registration stickers on vehicle's license plates.

Walker, a Republican, estimates the move would save about $800,000 over the two-year spending plan through printing and mailing costs.

State Transportation Secretary Mark Gottlieb told the Legislature's budget committee on Monday that the stickers are anachronistic. Rep. Dan Meyer, an Eagle River Republican, asked Gottlieb ending the stickers would make life harder for police to check for expired registrations.

Gottlieb countered that he's heard people steal registration stickers off plates and the only reliable way to determine if a vehicle is properly registered is to run the license plate number.

Stevens wins fifth term as NIGA Chairman

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

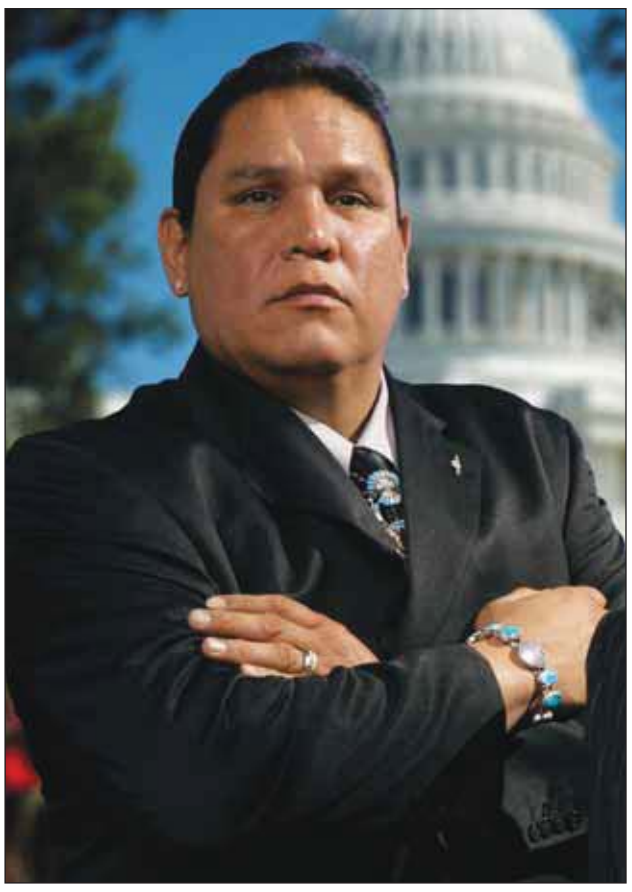
Ernie Stevens, Jr. has won his fifth term as National Indian Gaming Association (NIGA) Chairman at the 2011 Tradeshow and Convention being held in Phoenix April 3-6.

"Today I start my 11th year," said Stevens on Wednesday, April 6.

Stevens won by a wide vote margin, which he says indicates the trust Native American leaders have in him.

"The leadership in Indian Country overwhelming appreciates my commitment to work and to respect to Indian communities throughout this country," he said.

The economy is one big issue NIGA is tackling.



"We don't want to wait for our economy to get better, we have to make it better," said Stevens. He states gaming generates 500,000 jobs nation wide, most with good benefits.

NIGA has made it a priority to educate the new members of the US legislature.

"We'll have legislative days in the summer where we'll continue to interact with our senators and congresspersons," he said. "It's a key component that we're proactive in our education process."

Stevens has set his own goals for the next two year term.

"What can I do for Indian gaming? What can I do to help the tribal leadership move in a direction that looks to the future of not just gaming, but economic development and other areas where we can impact our communities in the future," he said.

Ernie Stevens, Jr. has won his fifth term as National Indian Gaming Association Chairman.

NIGA has been working to analyze internet gaming and the effects and opportunities it poses for tribes.

"We have tribes who support and understand it, tribes who want to go through with it, and tribes who oppose it," said Stevens.

NIGA helped defeat legislation in December that would have benefited mainstream gaming, but left Native gaming behind, according to Stevens.

"We responded to that and worked to educate people why that legislation was not appropriate for Indian Country," he said.

Stevens credits his work ethic to the examples set by his grandmother Maria Hinton and parents Marjorie and Ernie Stevens, Sr.

"I will work from now throughout my entire career every single day," he said.

Immunity bid fails for Mohawk guilty of gun charge

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) ~ Federal prosecutors say even members of an Indian nation's militia can't carry guns if they're convicted felons.

Victor Lazore pleaded guilty last week to a federal charge of possessing weapons - two rifles and a shotgun. Police found the guns, two of them loaded, during a traffic stop last summer on the St. Regis Mohawk Reservation near the Canadian border.

The 25-year-old Lazore was convicted on state felony drug charges in 2005 and is barred from having weapons.

He told police he had the guns because he was part of the Indian nation's militia and had been out hunting squirrels. He said he was exempt from U.S. laws as a member of the tribe's "national security force."

Sentencing is set for August 26.

Bill lowering car insurance levels passes

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ A bill designed to lower car insurance rates is headed to Gov. Scott Walker.

The Senate passed the bill on Tuesday. It has already cleared the Assembly and an earlier nearly identical version had also passed the Senate earlier this year.

Insurance would still be mandatory under the Republican bill, but motorists would have to purchase less coverage liability and uninsured drivers.

The bill would wipe out higher minimums Democrats approved in 2009. Republicans maintain those levels have made car insurance more expensive.

Most of the changes took effect in 2010 after more than 20 years of no changes.

The bill would reduce the minimum coverage for liability and uninsured drivers insurance. The changes would take effect six months after Walker signs the bill which he support.

Oneida Students Represent Indian Community School at AISES Science Fair

Science Fair Participants; Christian Chojnacki, Christopher Alexander, Raena Roman, Kateri Doxtator-Oneida & Louie Doxtator

By Mark W. Powless

The American Indian Science and Engineering Society (AISES) recently held their annual science fair, March 24 through March 26, in Albuquerque, New Mexico. The science fair featured Native youth (grades 5-12) from across the country that presented science projects and competed for cash prizes and scholarships.

Representing the Indian Community School (ICS) of Milwaukee, five youth attended the event as a result of winning their school's science fair. Louie Doxtator (Oneida), Kateri Doxtator (Oneida), Raena Roman (Oneida), Christopher Alexander (Ojibwe), and Christine Chojnacki (Ojibwe) all won their respective categories at the ICS Science Fair and earned their trip to the AISES event.

Louie and Kateri partnered on a project in the Chemistry category that aimed to determine the disinfecting capabilities of natural disinfectants versus chemical disinfectants. As a component of the project, the students grew E. coli bacteria and administered lemon, aloe vera, and two different types of soaps individually to determine the effect on the E. coli. For their efforts, the Doxtator team received the silver medal at the AISES science fair. Raena Roman (silver) and Christopher Alexander (gold) also received medals for their respective projects.

When asked about the experience, Louie stated that Albuquerque is a great place and a beautiful city. In addition, he "ate the most delicious pizza ever!" Overall, the science fair was a great experience and he hopes to do it again sometime. He recognized his family, his teacher Mrs. Anita Leary, ICS, and his partner Kateri as the people deserving the most recognition and thanks for their support and contributions.

For future science fair participants, Louie outlined five tips for success. First, prepare all project materials and presentations before hand. Second, keep calm and composed during project presentations. Third, be prepared to answer questions by the judges, and if you don't know the answer, just answer that you don't know the answer. Fourth, black out all brand names included in the project. And fifth, be respectful towards all judges.

Oneida Culture and Community Fund Raiser

Join SEOTS for a recognition of Oneida culture and community at UWM's Greene Hall (3347 N. Downer Ave., Milwaukee) on Saturday, May 21st. Tribal members will share their stories of community and the Longhouse dancers will provide an exhibition of dancing and singing. Corn Soup and Indian Tacos will be available for sale, plus exciting door prizes.

VOTE!

The Primary Elections for the Oneida Tribe will be held on May 7. For your convenience, SEOTS (6811 West Morgan Avenue, Milwaukee) is a polling location. The Primary Election will narrow the list of candidates to the top two vote-getters for each officer position and the top 15 vote-getters for the five at-large council member positions.

her Loony Balloon project, "It was for the fun of it, to see what happened. To be able to watch a balloon blow up without having to use my own air."

Upon arrival at the Albuquerque Convention Center the students set up their displays and prepared for judging. During the judging period three category judges, each looking to rank the student's projects, as well as various award judges, who were looking to grant specific awards to certain projects, visited the students. Louisa Mehojah says of the judging, "I was nervous. I was scared, I was worried if I was going to do good or not."

The Oneida students had nothing to be nervous about, three of the students placed in their perspective categories. Two of the students, Guadalupe Martinez and Ululani Nunies, won second place awards and one student, Louisa Mehojah, won first place. Along with placing in their categories Ululani Nunies won three special awards and Guadalupe Martinez won one special award, bringing the students award total to seven awards received.

The competition consisted of 251 other Native American Students from across the country, which included numerous tribes from 20 states.

The students are hopeful for a repeat performance at next years AISES National Science Fair. Guadalupe Martinez, who will be an ONHS Senior next year says, "My whole schedule is pretty full so probably on the side. But I would like to do it again." Louisa Mehojah also hopes to compete against her younger brother next year. Sheila Stevens is not sure of her schedule for next year so for now she is up in the air. Ululani Nunies, a current ONHS Senior, looks forward to being enrolled at Haskell Indian Nations University next year.

The students would like to thank their teachers (specifically Becky Nutt), their families, school, and community for their support.

Staff from the Oneida Nation School System volunteered to be chaperones that included Yvette Peguero and Laura Studee. Parent volunteer chaperones were Jack and Debbie Mehojah, along with their son, Jack Jr. ONES Principal Yvette Peguero reflects on this years trip, "Every year we take kids to nationals, every year we place. So we do a good job, our kids do well. We're very proud of all of them."

Home Building Opportunity - HBO

It may not feel like it but spring is not far away. Now is the perfect time to begin researching the necessary steps for a home building project.

Does the Oneida Tribe have vacant land available for residential home building projects? The answer is yes and here is a listing of the properties currently available:

All new Home Building Opportunity properties will be advertised for a minimum of thirty (30) days with an application deadline.

NEW HBO PROPERTY

- N7505 Olson Road : Applications will ONLY be accepted May 5, 2011 – 4:30 p.m. on May 19, 2011

Application packets can be obtained at the Division of Land Management. Part of the application process is that a pre-qualify letter from a financial institution must accompany the other application documents. A good place to start the research for your home building project is to find out how much financing you will be able to obtain.

If you have any questions regarding:

- How the HBO application process works
- How to apply for vacant land
- Details regarding financial options
- Considerations in planning a home building project
- Details regarding leasing land from the Oneida Tribe

Please feel free to contact our office at 920-869-1690 with questions about the HBO.

NWTC to raise scholarship funds for students in need

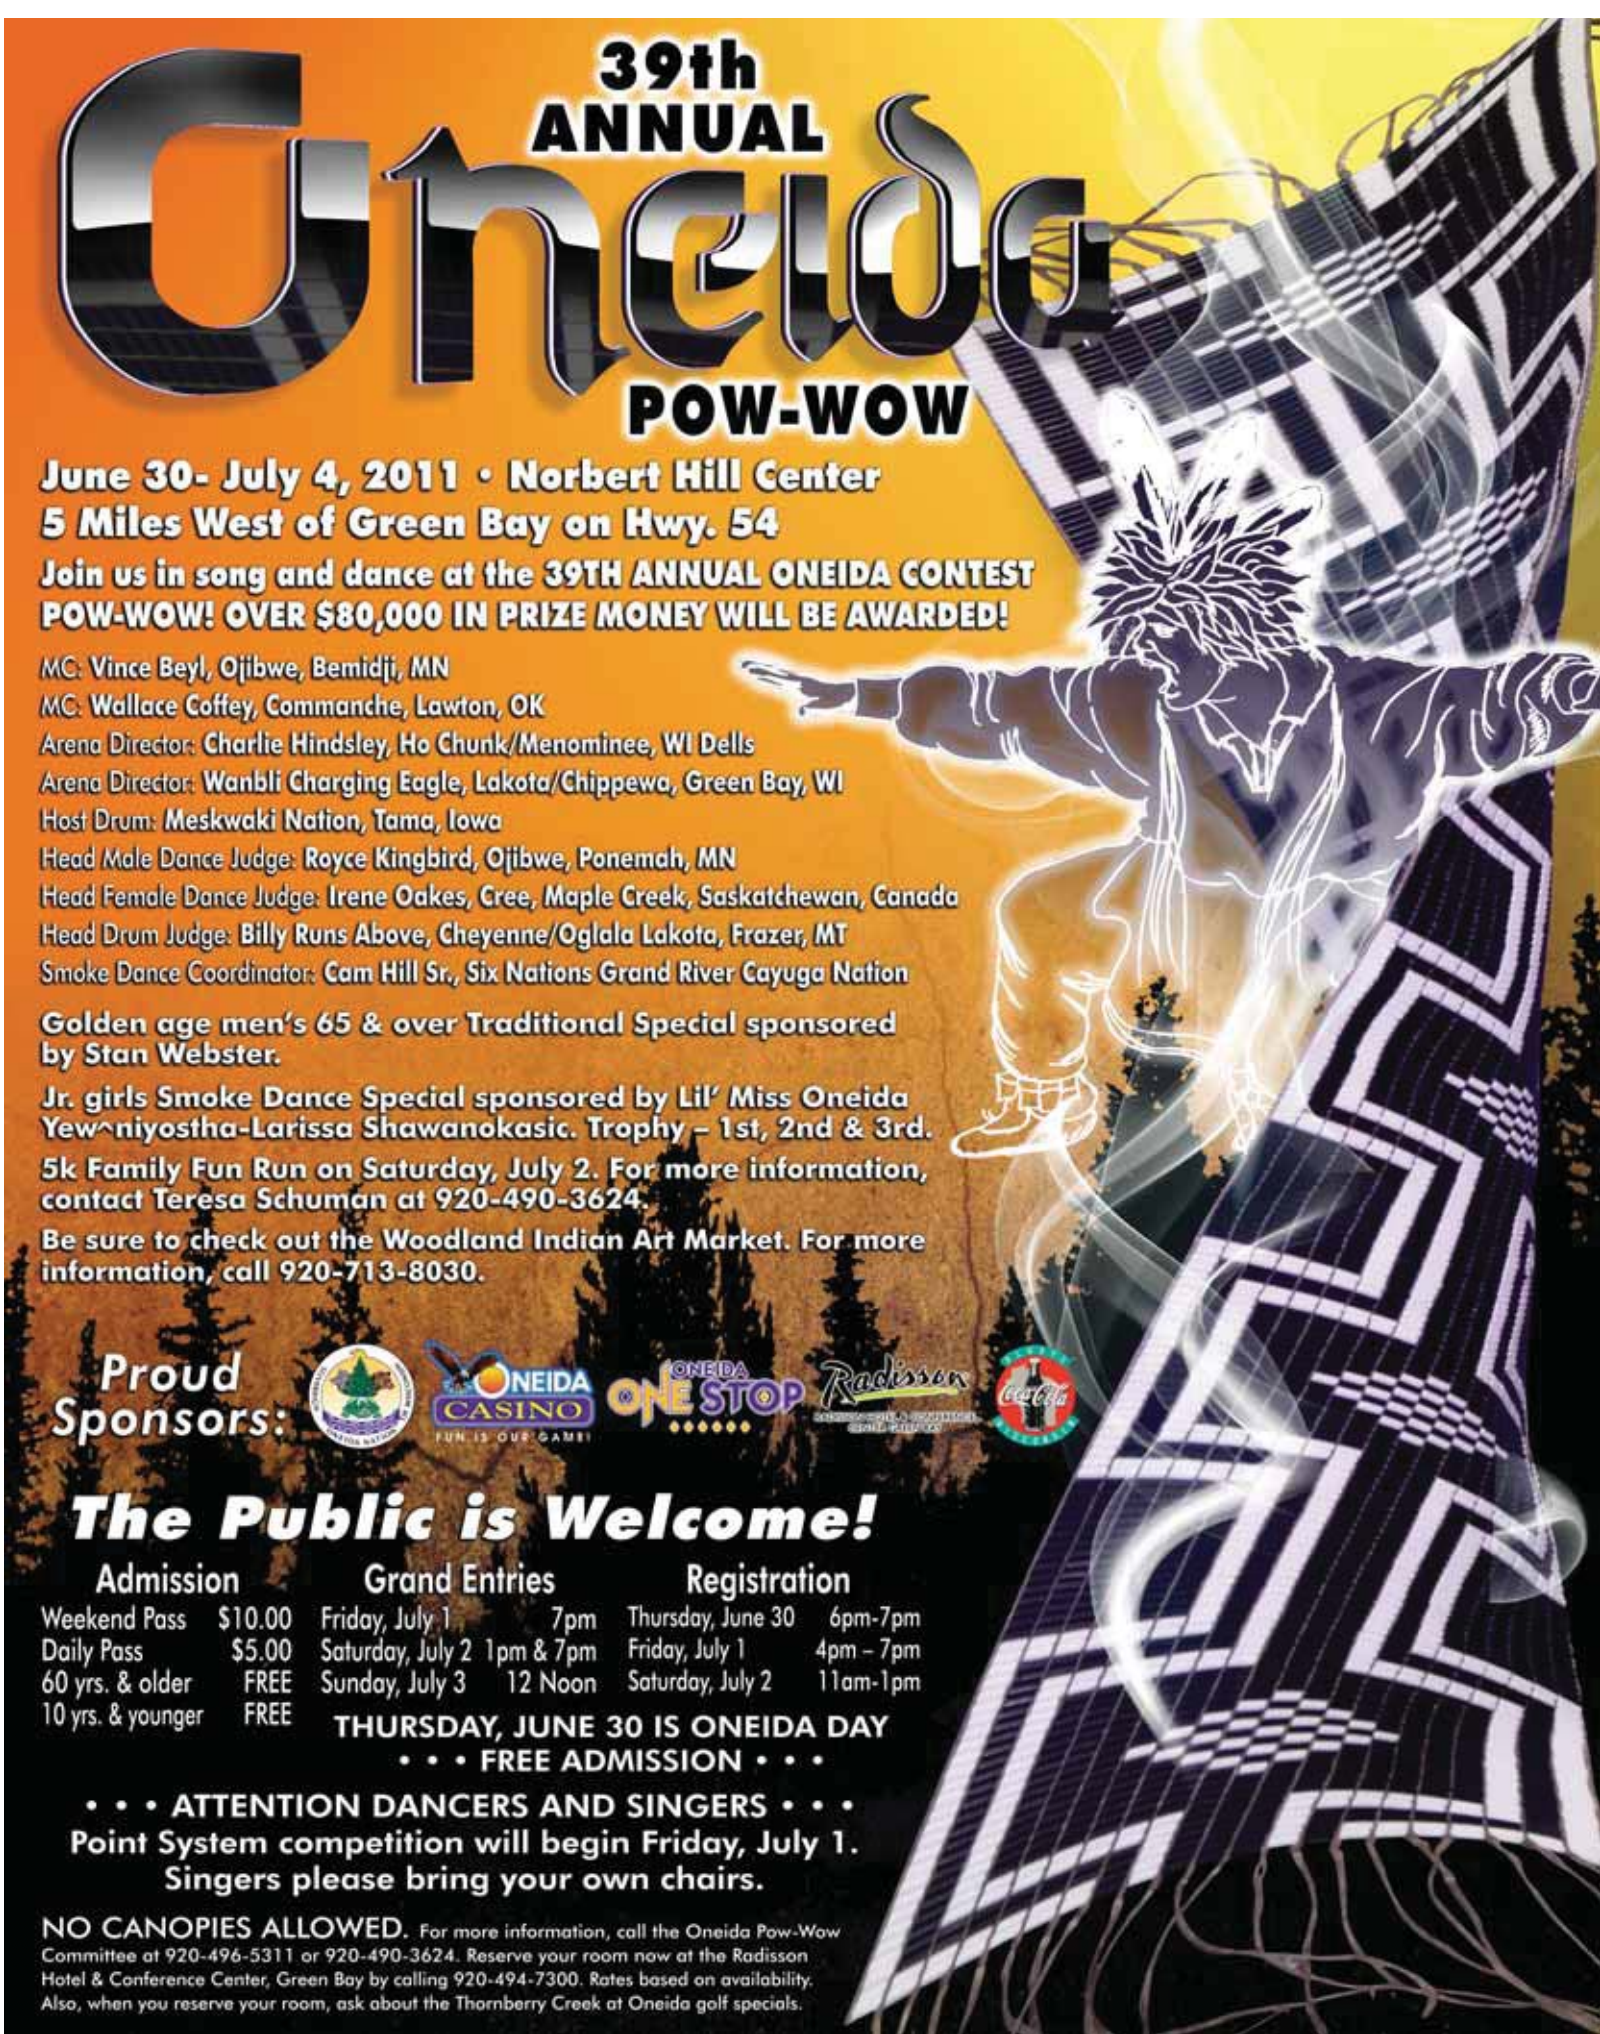
(Green Bay) The Northeast Wisconsin Technical College Educational Foundation will hold the fifth annual "A Day for NWTC" fundraising campaign on Wednesday, April 20, 2011. Community and NWTC volunteers will visit approximately 250 businesses throughout the district to promote the importance of technical education and to seek their financial support for much-needed student scholarships.

While last year's campaign raised over $80,000, only 400 out of more than 1,500 student applicants received scholarships. This year's scholarship applications are expected to exceed 2010 numbers.

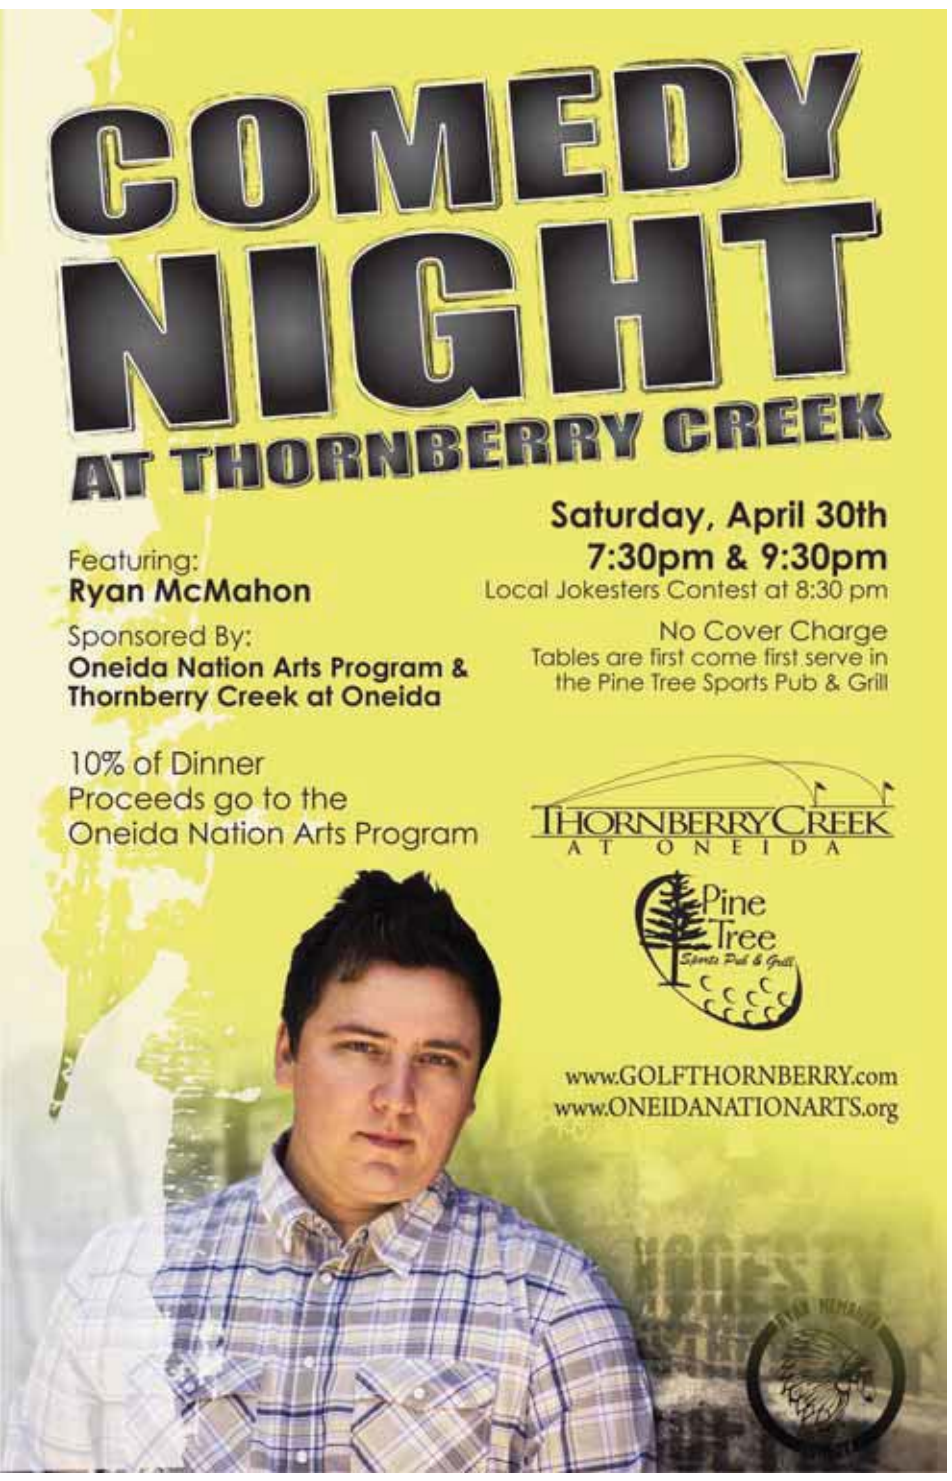
Businesses contributing to A Day for NWTC receive a return on their investment in several ways. A contribution of $500 or more allows a business to create a scholarship in the company's name. The business can also determine scholarship criteria, such as the program of study for which the scholarship will be awarded. In addition, the business will be honored at a scholarship awards banquet attended by more than 600 community members.

Nicolet National Bank is proud to be a consistent contributor to A Day for NWTC. According to Bob Atwell, CEO, "NWTC does outstanding work in the trenches changing peoples' lives. Tuition assistance to needy students at NWTC is an investment in our future that provides a manifold return. We are honored to be part of this effort."

Eighty-eight percent of 2010 NWTC graduates were hired within six months of graduation and more than 95 percent of them got jobs in Wisconsin. According to Sandy Duckett, vice president of College Advancement at NWTC, "These facts speak volumes about the quality of our graduates and the high caliber of businesses throughout our area that are committed to growth and success, and to the vitality of our community."



Wis. Dells to host 2011 Leadership Wisconsin Conference



The 2011 Leadership Wisconsin Conference April 19 to 20 at Chula Vista Resort, Wisconsin Dells, will address the latest and most comprehensive leadership training content. Ryan McMahon is a comedian / actor /writer that is making a name for himself as one of the most dynamic Native American comedians working in Canada and the United States today. His live show combines standup, improvisation, and sketch comedy weaving stories and characters in an original style of comedy he calls – Indian Vaudeville.

The Oneida Nation Arts Program and the Thornberry Creek Golf Club presents Ryan McMahon on Saturday, April 30, for two shows, 7:30 pm and 9:30 pm, at Thornberry Creek Golf Club, 4470 N Pine Tree Road Oneida, WI. Admission is free. A percentage of net food sales will be donated to ONAP.

McMahon has mass cross over appeal as he looks to define/re-define what "Indian Comedy" is through destroying stereotypes and facing them head on. Not one to shy away from any subject matter – he's managed to create a name for himself as a fearless, highly original and thought provoking comic.

McMahon's show is fast paced, brutally honest, and probably unlike most live comedy shows you've seen before. His style is loose, the characters are wild. McMahon mixes a traditional standup comedy sensibility with a loose improvised slacker style that all mashes together with characters, multimedia, music and hilarity.

After his first set, ONAP will host a joke telling contest, monitored by Conrad King, band leader of the Rockin' Daddy's. The audience will choose who the local top 3 best joke tellers during the intermission. Prizes awarded to the top 3 contestants: $30 for first place, $25 for second place, and $20 for third place. Sign up for the joke telling contest on April 30th before the show.

Mother Earth Water Walk Returns and begins April 10

As the northern snows begin to melt and further south spring rains fall, our Mother Earth awakens and new life begins. At this time of renewal Anishinaabe grandmothers, women and men, and youth from Canada and the United States will continue walking for our waters. The Mother Earth Water Walk began in 2003 in answer to question—"What will you do?"

The 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007 Mother Earth Water Walks encircled Lake Superior, Lake Michigan, Lake Huron, Lake Ontario, and Lake Erie respectively. In 2008 the water walk revisited Lake Michigan. The 2009 Mother Earth Water Walk stretched from Kingston, Ontario to the Atlantic Ocean along St. Lawrence River.

The 11,525 miles or 18,549 kilometers were walked to call attention to the sacred gift of water, the source of our life, the source of all life. The past walks also raised awareness of the need to take care of the water, and to help our Mother Earth who is struggling to survive and to provide for all her children.

Each of the 24,113,700 steps taken was a prayer for the water, for Mother Earth, for the animals, the birds, the insects, the trees and for us, all two leggeds. Together the walks were one prayer for life.

This spring the Water Walk returns and the prayer continues. The 2011 Water Walk unites all the waters of our Mother Earth. Water from the vast Pacific Ocean, from the Gulf of Mexico, from the Atlantic Ocean and from Hudson Bay will be gathered in copper pails and carried by hand to the shores of Lake Superior. Ocean water from the four directions will travel the miles with Anishinaabe women and men walking side by side.

The western water walk begins Sunday, April 10 in Aberdeen, Washington and travels through the States of Washington and Montana, the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitboa, and the States of North Dakota and Minnesota before arriving in Wisconsin.

On Wednesday, April 20, the southern water walk will leave Gulfport, Mississippi traveling through the States of Mississippi, Tennessee, Illinois, Iowa and into Wisconsin.

Walkers from the East will leave Machais, Maine on Saturday, May 7. Their walk will take them through the Provinces of Quebec, Ontario and into the States of Michigan and Wisconsin.

Churchill Manitoba is the beginning point for the Northern Water Walk. Water from Hudson Bay and the water walkers will travel, on Saturday May 21 by train toward the south to Winnipeg. Their route will carry the sacred water through Manitoba, Ontario and into Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The walkers, journeying over 10,400,000 steps and carrying the healing and sacred salt water from the four directions will converge June 12 in Bad River, Wisconsin. The water will then be united in Lake Superior, where the first Water Walk began.

The Anishinaabe, also known as the Ojibwe, Odawa and Potawatomi, are the caretakers of the eastern woodlands and Great Lakes, the largest freshwater system on Earth. Anishinaabe women, as givers-of-life, are responsible for speaking for, protecting and carrying our water.

All people are encouraged and welcome to participate in and to support the 2011 Water Walk as it passes through their Provinces, States and communities.

Scholarships... & Internships...

Phuture Phoenix scholarship

Scholarship application deadline April 15

GREEN BAY - Area high school seniors have until April 15 to apply for a $1,000 University of Wisconsin-Green Bay Phuture Phoenix scholarship.

Scholarships are made available to qualified students who plan to attend UW-Green Bay in the fall of 2011. The $1,000 scholarships are renewable each year the student attends UW-Green Bay.

"College access is more critical today than ever, because our world and our workplaces are changing so rapidly, so dynamically," said Phuture Phoenix Director Kim Desotell. "Through the Phuture Phoenix program we are saying that we will help students reach for their dreams."

Scholarship awards will be based upon the applicants' prior involvement in the Phuture Phoenix program through mentoring, tutoring, or participation in the annual October Tour Day as a fifth-grader. The scholarship will also be based on financial need and proof of admission to UW-Green Bay.

The awards are made possible through the generosity of local donors supporting the Phuture Phoenix program. Applications are available in high school guidance offices, at the UW-Green Bay Institute for Learning Partnership (Cofrin Library 750), and at www.uwgb.edu/phuturephoenix/.

The award-winning Phuture Phoenix program is a university/community enterprise that began in 2003 from an extended conversation between Cyndie Shepard, the wife of former chancellor Bruce Shepard, and University Trustee Ginny Riopelle about establishing a mentoring program that could help students in at-risk schools stay on course for college.

It has since served more than 10,000 school children from elementary schools with significant low-income populations. Later this month Silver Lake College will join UW-Eau Claire and Western Washington University in replicating the Phuture Phoenix program.

The cornerstone event of Phuture Phoenix is an autumn tour of the campus for nearly 1,300 fifth-graders attending high-needs schools in the area. Giving them tours are hundreds of UW-Green Bay student volunteers.

Since its inception Phuture Phoenix program has grown well beyond a field trip. Each year UW-Green Bay students go to middle and high schools to serve as positive role models and mentors for nearly 1,000 at-risk students.

"This will be our second year of awarding scholarships to Phuture Phoenix participants. Many of the applicants and scholarship recipients will be the first members of their families to attend college. It is a real pleasure to see these students receive assistance in their goal of obtaining a college education," said Janet Lieb, community volunteer and chairperson of the scholarship committee.

Thinking of Going To College This Fall? Let the Higher Education Department help!

We will be offering a financial aid planning workshop on Saturday April 5, 2010 from 6:00pm - 7:30pm at the Community Education Center, located at 2632 S Packerland Drive, Green Bay, WI 54313.

We will go over the basic financial aid process, the Oneida Higher Education Grant process, and help students complete the 2011/12 FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) So please bring all 2010 tax and income information with you.

Please call us at (920) 869-4471 with any questions.

Candidates advised to finish GED this year

The GED (General Educational Development Testing Service) will be introducing a new series of exams on January 1, 2012. GED candidates who have begun testing under the current series are being urged to try to pass all five tests by December 31, 2011, otherwise, they will be required to retake the entire new exam series.

If you or someone you know has begun GED tests now is the time to complete. It would be a good idea to review before testing if you have not tested or studied in a while. The ONCEC is open to help you. Our hours are 8 to 8 Monday through Thursday; 8 to 4:30 Friday; and 8 to 3 Saturday. Occasionally we have a day off so check our monthly calendar.

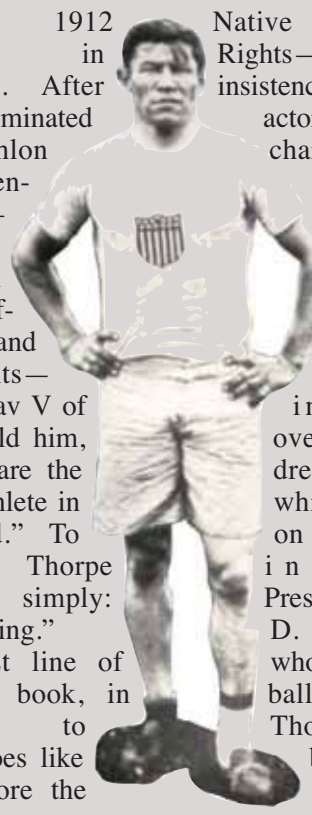
Jim Thorpe: World's Greatest Athlete

By Denis Gullickson
Thunderhawk Times

Jim Thorpe.

The name itself conjures up the image of a fleet-footed athlete dodging tacklers on an ancient gridiron, stealing home plate, tossing a javelin a seeming mile, hurdling fences at breakneck speed, acing a tennis serve, firing shot after shot through the center of a bulls eye, and... winning a dance contest.

What? You mean Thorpe was also a champion dancer?



Yep. Turns out to be true—as are dozens of other facts. And the task facing anyone who wants to tell the story of "The Greatest Athlete of the Twentieth Century" is separating the facts from the dozens of myths that abound.

In the process a book idea was born way back before 1975.

That book, Jim Thorpe: World's Greatest Athlete, is written by author, Robert W. Wheeler, who spoke to Oneida Nation High School students on Thursday, March 17 in the Oneida Business Committee Conference Room.

According to Wheeler, there really wasn't much in terms of athletics that Thorpe couldn't do. He excelled at over thirty sports. So much so, that there were few that could equal Thorpe in any one sport, but certainly no one who could boast of the prowess he demonstrated in every popular sport of his day.

Still, Thorpe remained unassuming. One true story comes after he vanquished most comers at the 1912 Olympics in Stockholm. After Thorpe dominated the decathlon and pentathlon—finishing first in nine of fifteen track and field events—King Gustav V of Sweden told him, "Sir, you are the greatest athlete in the world." To which Thorpe responded simply: "Thanks, king."

The first line of Wheeler's book, in reference to Thorpe, goes like this: "Before the turn of the last century, a star rose into prominence and radiated with so much splendor that nothing could eclipse it."

That would make for some tough cleats to fill.

But there's far, far more to the Thorpe story than the exploits of one more superior jock. Few people know, for instance, that Thorpe was the first President of the National Football League. He was also a staunch advocate of Native American Rights—including an insistence that Native actors play Native characters in Hollywood films.

In sorting out fact from fiction, Wheeler interviewed over two hundred people while working on the book—including President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who played football against Thorpe while both were in college.

Wheeler also had many sitdowns with members of the Thorpe family as well as Thorpe's boyhood friends. He was privileged to be given access to Thorpe's personal papers.

Wheeler lives in Dallas, TX. He was founder of the Jim Thorpe Foundation and is credited by Sports Illustrated with "primary responsibility for the restoration of Thorpe's [1912] Olympic Awards."

ONHS students were impressed by the presentation, by Wheeler, and, most of all, by Jim Thorpe. "That was pretty cool," said Devan Little, ONHS sophomore. "I didn't know all that. And the fact that Jim Thorpe was Native American was pretty cool, too."

Besides speaking to Oneida students at the high school and Turtle School, Wheeler also made a presentation at the College of the Menominee Nation. His book is still in print and widely available on amazon.com as well as other online outlets.

My Scoop

Putting an End to Bad Decisions

By Billie John
Thunderhawk Times

Many students do plenty of different things after school and on the weekends. Some of the actions are good, and some are not so good.

From many other schools in our area, I have heard and seen that students from around the area—not only Natives—are out smoking and drinking with their friends.

How can we put a stop to this?

Parents, make sure your child is actually going where they say they are going and doing what they say they are going to do, and making good decisions.

April a Big Month for History Research

By ONHS social studies instructor Laura Studee
Thunderhawk Times

History Research class has been working hard on a documentary titled "A Government of Our Own" which describes the impact that the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934 had on the Oneida government.

The documentary is ten minutes in length and stars historians and history enthusiasts from around the Oneida community. It will be competing against other documentaries at the University of Wisconsin - Green Bay on April 9th, 2011 at National History Day. Wish us luck and watch for the results in the next issue of "Thunderhawk Times."

Superintendent Sharon Mousseau On ONHS Science Fair Success

By Thunderhawk Times Staff
Thunderhawk Times

Over the past few issues, we have featured some of the projects and winners in this year's science fair competitions.

Oneida Nation School System Administrator, Sharon Mousseau, had this to say regarding the projects and the winners:

"Congratulations to our National Science Fair winners! All of our attendees are winners to advance to the National level and I hear you had a great experience in Albuquerque, despite the late start, due to the storm. Yaw^ko for putting forth your best efforts to represent us in a positive light at a National Science Fair, which carries on the traditions of science fair attendance by Oneida Nation School System students!"

Jimmer Fredette

By JoJo Santiago
Thunderhawk Times

In Monday's NCAA basketball championship game, UConn's Huskies whipped the Butler Bulldogs, 53-41. Critics have said that—for a championship game—it wasn't much.

One highlight from the NCAA men's basketball season and the NCAA tournament was the play of Brigham Young's Jimmer Fredette.

Fredette led the nation in scoring at 28.5 points per game while shooting 40.4 percent from 3-point range, a number more impressive because of the shots he lets fly from well behind the line.

He received all but one vote from the 65-member national media panel that selects the weekly Top 25. The voting was done before the NCAA tournament.

Fredette became one of the most popular players in recent memory as teams that lost to BYU were "jimmered."

He is BYU's first All-American since Danny Ainge in 1981.

"If you go out and play your game and have confidence in yourself, you can accomplish great things," Fredette said. "That's what I've always said in my head, and it's worked out."

Maple tapping time of year

By Rachel Ninham
Thunderhawk Times

What's fun about being outside in the woods in the spring? How about being in the woods with friends learning about your culture?

Every year, students from ONHS go outside and collect sap. Once they have enough sap, they boil it down to a warm, tasty maple syrup that is perfect for your fired cornbread.

This tradition is delicious fun for students and families and it brings people together.

"Parents Who Host, Lose the Most"

By Thunderhawk Times Staff
Thunderhawk Times

With the ONHS prom set for Saturday, April 16 and many other area proms just a few days and weeks away, an information event was held on Monday, April 4 in the OLC Green Room for parents.

By attending the "Parents Who Host Training," parents were able to get a free ticket to the ONHS Prom and a light lunch.

"More importantly," according to the presenter, parents could "learn the laws and consequences of hosting an underage drinking party or providing alcohol to someone who is under 21."

The program's goal was to show parents and community members how they could "make the community can make Prom Night safer for our youth."

Yearbook. "SNAP, SNAP!"

By Shanna Jourdan
Thunderhawk Times

Becky Anderson is the Oneida Nation High School art teacher and she oversees the production of the yearbook every year for all the staff and students.

I asked her how the yearbook is going this year and she said, "I am just waiting for a new program to get on the computers so I can finish editing all the pictures."

The year book should be done in about three weeks or about May 1.

Staff and students usually get to buy the yearbook by the end of May.

I asked her how long it takes to make a yearbook and she said," It takes about one half of the school year taking pictures, and the second half of the year to organize all the pictures together."

Becky also puts all kinds of ads out there.

Becky said she puts out about 1200 dollars worth of ads all over, and the ads help for the cost of the yearbook to stay down.

This year the yearbook will have about 100 pages and is going to be sold for $15.00.

Stroke risks fade when women stop taking estrogen

By Lindsey Tanner
AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO (AP) ~ Strokes and other health problems linked with estrogen pills appear to fade when women quit taking them after menopause, the first long-term follow-up of a landmark study found. It's reassuring news for women who take the hormone in their 50s when menopause usually begins.

The latest study bolsters previous evidence that concerns about breast cancer and heart attacks are largely unfounded for those who take the hormone for a short period of time to relieve hot flashes and other menopause symptoms.

Estrogen-only pills are recommended just for women who have had a hysterectomy, and the study focused only on that group. About 25 percent of women in menopause have had hysterectomies. Other women are prescribed a combination pill of estrogen and progestin because for them, estrogen alone can raise the risk for cancer of the uterus.

The study results don't really change the advice doctors have been giving for several years now: Take hormones to relieve menopause symptoms in the lowest possible dose for the shortest possible time.

The women in the study took estrogen for about six years and were evaluated for about four years after stopping. Slightly increased risks for strokes and blood clots that were found while they took the pills disappeared during the follow-up. Unfortunately, the bone-strengthening benefit of estrogen disappeared, too. Once women ended it, they had just as many hip fractures during the follow-up as women who'd taken dummy pills.

The research also found that women who started taking estrogen-only pills in their 50s fared better after stopping than women who'd started in their 70s - an age when hormones are generally no longer recommended.

"Our results emphasize the need to counsel women about hormone therapy differently depending on their age and hysterectomy status," the researchers said in reporting the study to be published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The new results are from 10,739 participants in the estrogen-only part of the federal government's Women's Health Initiative study - research which shook up conventional wisdom about health benefits of hormones for menopausal women. Study of the estrogen-progestin group was halted in 2002 when risks for heart attacks and breast cancer were linked with the combination hormone pills. The estrogen-only study was halted in 2004 after stroke risks were seen in that group.

The troubling findings prompted many doctors to stop prescribing the pills to prevent chronic health problems and led millions of women to quit taking them.

Doctors now generally recommend hormones only to relieve hot flashes, night sweats that disrupt sleep and vaginal dryness in the lowest possible dose for the shortest possible time. Dr. Jacques Rossouw, who directed the initial research at the National Institutes of Health, said the estrogen follow-up results reinforce guidance "that women can use it shortly after the menopause for a limited period of time and then stop."

When the research began in the 1990s, doctors were still prescribing hormones after menopause, based on the belief the pills were good for bones, the heart and had other benefits beyond relieving menopause symptoms. So the women in the WHI study were taking hormones after menopause, rather than using them to relieve symptoms.

The women in the new study were in their 60s on average, nearly a decade past the age when most women enter menopause. So the overall results don't necessarily apply to the average U.S. woman now weighing the pros and cons of taking hormones.

One surprising twist in the results: The younger estrogen-takers actually had a lower risk for heart problems, breast cancer and death than those taking dummy pills. Researchers don't know why and say women should not use that as a reason to take hormones. They hope answers may be found in further research.

The results suggest that for every 10,000 women in their 50s taking estrogen for a year, there would be 12 fewer heart attacks and 13 fewer deaths than among women not on estrogen, said Dr. JoAnn Manson, a study co-author and chief of preventive medicine at Harvard's Brigham and Women's Hospital.

However, using the same comparison for women in their 70s, there would be 16 extra heart attacks and 19 extra deaths for those on estrogen versus those not taking the pills, she said.

"It's really powerful and compelling evidence," Manson said.

Breast cancer also appeared to be less common in women who'd taken estrogen than among those on dummy pills. An editorial accompanying the study notes that those findings contrast with many studies linking estrogen pills with an increased breast cancer risk.

Andrea LaCroix, the study's lead author and a researcher at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle, said it's possible that estrogen didn't have a harmful effect on breast tissue in women studied because they were taken well after menopause when women's naturally occurring estrogen levels have declined.

Dr. Graham Colditz, a Washington University researcher who co-wrote the editorial, noted that duration of estrogen use as directed was pretty short during the study, averaging about 31/2 years, and most women started taking the hormone years after a hysterectomy or after menstrual periods ended.

"The results really don't directly translate to how we see women getting hormone therapy in the real world of current American medicine," Colditz said.

Looking for Artstreet entries

GREEN BAY, WIS. - The Artstreet planning committee is looking for an official design for the 2011 Artstreet festival of the fine arts. Celebrating 30 years in downtown Green Bay, Artstreet will be held Friday through Sunday, August 26, 27, and 28. A $300.00 cash award will be presented to the creator of the winning Artstreet 2011 image.

The design should reflect what Artstreet is: a festival that combines art, music, dance, literature, theater, ethnic foods and children's activities. Artistic concepts which convey the spirit of the Artstreet event are welcome. The look should be fresh, creative, imaginative, original, fanciful, bold, eye-catching, unique, different, and novel. This image will be used on t-shirts, posters and in publicity materials for the event.

All entries must be received by Monday, April 25, 2011. The winning design will be unveiled at the Northeastern Wisconsin Arts Council's annual Awards Gala held on Thursday, May 12th.

Anyone interested in submitting a design may receive more details and an entry form by contacting the Artstreet office at (920)435-5220 or info@artseventsinc.com.

Senior recognition banquet set

On Wednesday, May 4, 2011 the Menominee Johnson O'Malley program will be sponsoring the 34th Annual Senior Recognition Banquet for the Menominee Seniors who will graduate in May or June of 2011. The banquet will be held at the Menominee Casino Resort beginning at 6:30 p.m. Opening ceremony, dinner and awards is being planned. If you have a scholarship or special award you would like to present please contact us so we can put you on the program.

The purpose of the Senior Recognition Banquet is to recognize all graduating Menominee seniors for their achievements and to give community appreciation for these young people who will one day be the decision-makers of our community.

Panel to hear plan to cap fees in $3.4B settlement

By Matt Volz
Associated Press

Attorneys in the government's $3.4 billion settlement with American Indians over mismanaged royalties are "stonewalling" a congressional panel as they ask a judge to more than double their fees in the case, the committee's chairman said Tuesday.

Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, is co-sponsoring legislation to cap the attorneys' fees at $50 million.

He said in a hearing before the House Subcommittee on Indians and Alaska Native Affairs, which he chairs, that "it smells" for the plaintiffs' lawyers to now make the argument that they deserve $223 million, after the settlement limited their fee request to $99.9 million.

Young said both the plaintiffs' attorneys and the Obama administration officials who negotiated the settlement refused to testify Tuesday on the proposal and have stymied previous attempts to gather information about how the fees were structured.

"Today, the Plaintiffs are stonewalling the efforts of this Committee to get to the bottom of the fee controversy in their refusal to testify or to respond to numerous written inquiries over the last year seeking information about their fees," Young said.

If Congress passes the legislation, it will void the settlement, plaintiffs' spokesman Bill McAllister said Tuesday. Congress had a year to vet the terms of the settlement before it approved the deal in December, he said. Now it's back under the authority of a federal judge and out of the panel's hands.

"Political interference in the judicial process would harm 500,000 individual Indians, undermine our system of government and jeopardize the settlement in its entirety," the plaintiffs' attorneys said in a statement.

The federal government never would have agreed to a $3.4 billion settlement with American Indians if it knew the plaintiffs' lawyers would try to more than double their fees, Young said. Even $100 million is too much, he added.

Other subcommittee members echoed the belief that $223 million in fees is too high. But some said the bill by Young and Republican Rep. Doc Hastings, chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee, to cap the fees could scuttle the settlement and possibly leave hundreds of thousands people without any award at all.

With a court hearing on the issue scheduled for June 20, it would be premature for Congress to vote on the proposal, said ranking subcommittee member Dan Boren, D-Okla.

"The last thing we need to do is unwind decades of work, tons of work, on behalf of individuals," Boren said.

No action was immediately taken on the bill. Young said he hoped the proposal would give some direction to the U.S. Justice Department as it works through the issue in court.

The settlement ended 15 years of litigation between Native American landowners and the federal government.

The plaintiffs, led by Elouise Cobell of Browning, Mont., claimed the individual accounts of hundreds of thousands of Indians were mismanaged by the government for more than a century, costing them billions of dollars in royalties.

The settlement calls for $1.5 billion to go to individual Indian account holders - a number that will likely end up between 300,000 and 550,000. Another $1.9 billion would be used by the government to buy broken-up Indian lands from individual owners and then turn those lands over to tribes. And an additional $60 million would go to a scholarship fund for Indian students.

The plaintiffs' attorneys agreed in the settlement not to request fees in excess of $99.9 million. But on Jan. 25, lead attorney Dennis Gingold filed a petition with the judge in the case saying that agreement doesn't prevent the judge from awarding more if he determines the amount is far below the standards in such a case.

Gingold said a fee award of $223 million, plus costs and expenses of $1.27 million, is "in accordance with controlling law" and within the court's discretion. The plaintiffs' attorneys "toiled for 15 years with an enormous risk they would not be paid for their work," Gingold wrote.

The Justice Department in a February court filing called the $223 million proposal "grossly excessive," and said it went against the $99.9 million provision in the settlement.

"They touted that binding commitment repeatedly to Congress and to class members to persuade Congress to enact the legislation," Justice Department attorneys wrote.

Only two people testified before the panel Tuesday, and both said they believe the attorney fees should be capped.

Richard Monette, a University of Wisconsin-Madison law professor and former tribal chairman of the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa, said the plaintiffs' attorneys should have revealed it to Congress and others in the lawsuit if they had some kind of agreement to recover more than $99.9 million in fees.

"We unnamed class members are owed huge obligations when a class settlement is made," he said.

The only other witness to testify, Patricia Douville of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe of South Dakota, said the money the settlement will bring makes it hard for impoverished residents of Indian Country to turn it down, even if the settlement is a bad deal.

"I don't think it's fair for the settlement to dangle a carrot in front of a starving rabbit, and that's what this is doing," she said.

ACLU sues Baton Rouge school system over long-hair suspension

By Janet McConnaughey
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS (AP) ~ A 13-year-old Native American student who was suspended because of his long hair should be exempt from a Baton Rouge-area school system's dress code for religious reasons, the American Civil Liberties Union claims in a lawsuit filed Thursday.

Seth Chaisson, a sixth-grader at Juban Park Elementary School in Denham Springs and a member of the United Houma Nation, began growing his hair in August after attending a pow-wow and learning more about his religious and cultural heritage, attorney Katherine Schwartzmann said.

Under the system's dress code, "Male hair length must be of even distribution. The hair may not extend below the plane of the shoulder nor down upon the eyebrow in front, nor down below the earlobes."

Schwartzmann said in an interview that Seth's hair doesn't hang over his collar, and he combs it to the side to keep it out of his face. "Of course, because he's not going to cut his hair, at some point it will be in violation of the policy," she said.

Chaisson received six reprimands, two suspensions and a 3-hour hearing last week, but still hasn't received a guarantee from school system that he won't face more punishment, his attorney said.

The suit names as defendants Livingston Parish Schools Superintendent Bill Spear, principal Jeff Frizell and the nine school board members.

A statement emailed by Spear said the system respects all students' religious beliefs but has made a detailed investigation and feels "the District's policy and proffered exemptions will not substantially burden the student's free exercise of that belief."

Schwartzmann said she doesn't know of any exemptions that have been offered. "We don't know what they're talking about," she said.

The boy - referred to as "Minor Doe" in the lawsuit because of a federal court rule against identifying minor plaintiffs but identified by the ACLU – "has a sincerely held belief that the strength of a man is in his hair" and that "hair is an extension of the spirit and to cut it is akin to bodily dismemberment. A lock of hair is only to be severed during a period of mourning to signify the loss of a part of oneself after the death of a close loved one," according to the suit.

The Houmas don't impose any religion and therefore don't require boys and men to grow their hair, but many members of the tribe, including many members of Chaissons' family, do not cut their hair because of their beliefs about its importance, the suit said.

"It seems that the reason we've not been able to resolve this is that the School Board fundamentally questions Seth's religious beliefs," Schwartzmann wrote in an email Thursday. "As you can imagine, it would be personally difficult for anyone to feel like they have to prove to the government that their religious beliefs are sincere. It is especially hard on a 13 year old child to be made to do that. But Seth's beliefs are firm, and he is willing to defend those beliefs."

Spear said pending litigation kept him from saying what exemptions were offered, whether Schwartzmann's statement about apparent disbelief in Seth's sincerity was accurate, or whether a headband or hairband might resolve the impasse by keeping Chaisson's hair out of his eyes.

In 2008, St. Tammany Parish eventually acceded to a request for a similar exemption from the ACLU of Louisiana and the Native American Rights' Fund of Boulder, Colo., for a 5-year-old kindergarten student who wore his hair in a braid down his back.

The principal at the boy's elementary school first said Curtis Harjo would have to cut his hair. The superintendent then said he could attend school only if he wore his hair in a bun. The ACLU argued that would suggest that the boy had to hide his religious beliefs, and the superintendent reversed her decision.

Appeals court rules eagle feathers only for American Indians

By Brian Skoloff
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) ~ Restricting use of eagle parts and feathers to members of federally recognized American Indian tribes for religious purposes does not violate the religious freedoms of non-Indians seeking the same right, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday.

The Denver-based U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals found that such a prohibition, under the Bald and Golden Eagle Protection Act, does not violate the federal Religious Freedom Restoration Act.

Tuesday's ruling comes after several cases in which non-Indians, and one man from a tribe that is no longer recognized by the federal government, sought the right to use feathers in their religious practices.

Federal law requires that eagle carcasses be sent to the National Eagle Repository in Denver, Colo., and that any tribe member wishing to use eagle feathers or parts in ceremonies apply for a permit to do so. The court noted that the repository "receives significantly more requests than it has available eagle carcasses" so there is already a long waiting period to fulfill permits.

All the cases noted in Tuesday's ruling weighed freedom of religion against the government's ability to protect the eagles and help maintain the centuries-old religious practices of Native Americans.

Federally recognized tribe members agree the law should restrict access to eagle parts to those whose ancestors have been practicing such ceremonies for centuries.

"As native people, we appreciate that others want to understand our philosophies, understand the sacredness of things. And I understand that many non-natives are looking for spirituality and looking for something sacred to hold onto," said Lacee A. Harris, a Northern Ute medicine man and mental health therapist in Salt Lake City.

However, Harris likened non-Indians' wanting to possess indigenous sacred objects to an outsider entering a Christian church and trying to perform that religion's ceremonies.

"To us, this is a very sacred thing," he said.

The cases cited in Tuesday's ruling include that of Samuel Ray Wilgus Jr., who claims to be an adopted member of Utah's Paiute Indian Peak Band.

During a traffic stop in 1998 near the town of Fillmore, about 150 miles south of Salt Lake City, authorities seized more than 100 eagle feathers from him. He was later charged with possessing the feathers without a permit, and pleaded guilty with the provision that he could appeal.

Wilgus was sentenced to 100 hours of community service, but maintained that it was a violation of his religious freedoms.

The district court then found that the act did indeed violate Wilgus's rights.

The appeals court now overturns that ruling.

"We are sensitive to the sincerity of Wilgus' religious beliefs, and we do not question either the authenticity or the weight of his religious experience among Native Americans," the court wrote.

However, it noted, that "in light of the options before the federal government, the regulations at issue are the least restrictive means available."

"It's totally discriminatory to say I don't have the right to practice my religion the way I have been taught, and by the rights I have been given by Native American spiritual leaders because I can't prove that I am Indian under the law, because I am white," Wilgus said Tuesday. "I thought we all had the right to religious freedom in this country."

Wilgus' lawyer, Joseph Orifici, said he will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"It not only discriminates against my client, but it discriminates against any Native American who lives in this country who is not a member of a federally recognized tribe," Orifici said.

However, department lawyers previously argued that demand for eagle feathers far exceeds the federal government's supply, and that exemptions to the law should only be provided if it doesn't undermine the intent of the statute.

Other similar cases in the last decade included a New Mexico man who is a descendant of Chiricahua Apaches, a tribe no longer recognized by the federal government, and another Utah man who claimed he was given an eagle feather by a Hopi religious leader. Both men had their feathers seized and were prosecuted.

Casting Call: Lacrosse Film Seeks Out Native Talent

Just like football has The Blind Side, baseball has The Bad News Bears, basketball has Hoosiers and hockey has The Mighty Ducks, lacrosse is finally going to get its own movie - CROOKED ARROWS. It's a chance to celebrate the sport alongside those who play it and love it, and to also to introduce "the Creator's Game" to millions of people who have never played or enjoyed the game.

The movie is about a Native American high school team's unlikely journey to the prep school championship and will star mostly Native American actors and lacrosse players. "My personal goal is to get a solid representation of Oneidas an opportunity to be in this film," says Ernie Stevens III, the film's co-producer. "This is our game, and we need to represent ourselves and the sport. Either way, it is my goal and duty as producer to make sure this is a film that Indian Country will be proud of as a whole."

Our first round of Open Call auditions for Native American male actor/lacrosse players ages 16-24 is set for Thursday, April 28 in conjunction with the North American Indigenous Image Awards, and just prior to the Gathering of Nations weekend in Albuquerque, New Mexico. "I know a lot of Oneidas go to this event, so I would encourage any and all young men in this age range to go and attempt to make an impact. This is our chance to show what our young lacrosse athletes can do."

We have an all star team of producers who will make sure that this film is seen by millions, and that it will go down in history as the pinnacle sport film of this generation. Mitchell Peck has produced dozens of successful films, including the big budget sci-fi western coming out next month, Priest, based on the graphic novel. Todd Harris was the producer behind the recently academy award nominated film The Kids Are Alright, as well as other successful independent films like Jeepers Creepers and Bottle Shock. Our casting director Rene Haynes has cast a lot Hollywood movies including the TWILIGHT films, Dances With Wolves, Into The West, and may others. We are also partnered with Sports Studio, who has teamed up with the production teams of some of the most commercially successful sports films like The Natural, Ali, Any Given Sunday, and many others. With a team of hugely successful individuals such as this, it will serve as a prime opportunity to get noticed and potentially launch a career in Hollywood!

Go to www.crookedarrowsmovie.com or visit Crooked Arrows on Facebook to get the information you need to audition on April 28, or be seen by Rene and our sports casting partners Sports Studio via video submission. I'm very excited to be a part of this historic movie, and hope that you will join our CROOKED ARROWS tribe as we bring this great movie to theatres all across the country and the world next spring!

Please feel free to contact Ernie Stevens III for any questions about the film and casting event. He is also willing to hold a "practice audition" for anyone who plans on going to the casting call, and to assist with video audition submissions. Ernie can be reached at 920-819-4552 or erniestevensiii@hotmail.com.

Eating Green - What Does it Mean?

By Lindsey Merkel
Dietetic Intern

Sustainable, local, organic and natural food are terms we are seeing more and more as we walk through the store and read the news. But what does it all mean?

Sustainable means able to be continued, maintained and balanced. In regards to food production, sustainability is about being able to continue growing food indefinitely. It is about managing the land and the resources necessary to grow food with regard for the future. Sustainability is not a new concept.

Many of the "new" innovations in agriculture are borrowed from historic concepts, such as the three sisters model of planting. As you know, in the traditional method of growing corn, beans and squash together the corn stalk acts as a pole for the shoots bean to climb and the squash sprawls out around them to act as a ground cover and help control weeds. The beans fertilize the soil for the corn.

Sustainable food is good for more than just the consumer. It actually enhances the environment by improving the health of the soil rather than depleting it. Ecosystems are respected, because sustainable production recognizes the importance of being part of the land rather than the sole owners of it. Resources are used responsibly by not using more than can be replaced with methods such as composting, so that waste is reduced and sometimes eliminated.

People have to consider the long-term viability of their foodsystems and communities because it is a matter of survival. Many people believe that the Americans foodsystem is unsustainable. Experts cite reasons such as ecological destruction, dependence on dwindling fossil fuels, erosion and degradation of soil, and excessive use of synthetic pesticides and herbicides as some of the reasons why the way we produce food must change.

Social involvement is encouraged in a sustainable foodsystem. Community is built through partnerships of mutual respect because it is recognized that well cared for workers produce better work. Economic viability is ensured when workers earn a living wage and when consumers value the food that is produced. Ethical issues must also be balanced in order for food to be truly sustainable. The systems of production must evolve to remain vital forever because people will always need food.

One way that production is shifting is the transition towards organic foods. Organic foods are certified by the USDA to be grown without synthetic pesticides, synthetic herbicides or synthetic fertilizers. Organic livestock must be free from synthetic growth hormones and antibiotics. Livestock also must have the opportunity to graze and move, which is not the case on many other farms. Organic farming improves the health of the soil, and a growing body of research is showing that organic foods have a higher levels of antioxidants than conventionally grown foods.

Local foods are generally defined as either grown or processed within 100 miles of the point of sale. More foods are being labeled as local within the grocery stores, and definitions do vary. You can find a large variety of local foods at farmer's markets, which will start up in June.

A great resource for learning more about local foods is the Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems (OCIFS) group. They are ready to help you out with knowledge and motivation. You can get in contact with them by calling 920-869-4530.

Tsyunhehkwa is another excellent resource right within the community. You can find locally produced corn products and a wellspring of knowledge at the store. The farm is certified Organic. They will be selling seeds and starts for your garden soon. Eating green is not as challenging as you might think!

If you are interested in joining the local food movement, growing your own is an excellent idea! Here are five great crops for beginners that are perfect for early spring

Spinach will survive a frost, and some people say an especially cool night improves its flavor. You can grow "baby" spinach quite quickly, or wait for a larger yield as the leaves mature.

Snow Peas can be planted as soon as the ground is thawed, thus their name. They need a fence or a trellis to grow up, and can make an interesting display growing in pots and climbing your porch railings.

Carrots are very satisfying to pull from the earth when they are ready! Be sure to give them large waterings only about once a week to promote deep root growth; small frequent waterings promote shallow roots. Try impressing your friends with yellow, red or purple carrots this season!

Lettuce should be grown in a place that only gets part sun, otherwise it will dry out or become bitter. Take care to water it frequently. Some people say that it tastes best when harvested in the morning, before it has been exposed to much sun that day.

Radishes are one of the quickest growing vegetables you can find! They help keep your soil loose and aerated, and can easily withstand a frost. Be sure not to leave them in the ground too long, unless you like those hot, pungent sort of flavors. If so, try using the greens in a salad for a bit of a kick!

Hawaii Week: Attendees play musical chairs to a Hawaiian song for a Hawaiian basket.

Submitted by Isabel Parker

Housing tenants, staff, and community members joined in a vacation day at the Three Sisters Community Center.

All month they went somewhere different every week, this long wintery month.

They started out in Hawaii, Mexico, China, then back to Oneida.

Hawaii week the first week, Hawaiian food, music, prizes, raffles during lunch hour for all places. People danced, had fun. Mexico had Spanish food, music, games, prizes, and the video Selena. China served Chinese food, people actually used chopsticks, raffles during lunch hour. Chinese music was playing through out the afternoon and free raffles.

Finally back to Oneida, with Corn Soup, Fry bread, a movie and pictures on Oneida History.

A very special 'Thank you' to the following who participated and supported this long vacation month:

Rudy Jadeen Webster for Hawaii week – supplies

Maria Skenandore & Angela Polanco for Mexico week – art work

Eric Boucher – art work for Hawaii

Michelle Jordan – Oneida Housing, China kitchen help

Jackie Ninham – YES Program, China kitchen help

Brenda Lynk – Frybread preparation

The events were sponsored by the Oneida Housing Authority.

Representatives from 17 schools along with 57 participants attended the fair, representatives offered to answer questions, describe program overviews, and offer information on their respective institutions. The event was intended to aid adults in choosing a school to further their education or help those looking to finish a previous degree; the Oneida Higher Education department hosted the event.

Bismarck to host tribal colleges national conference

BISMARCK (UTN) – American Indian students attending the nation's tribal colleges and universities will converge on Bismarck in April for their annual student conference.

The American Indian Higher Education Consortium (AIHEC) Student Conference is set for April 16-19 at the Bismarck Civic Center. It attracts 1,200 students, faculty and administrators involved in American Indian higher education.

The gathering features a series of friendly competitions that test the level of student accomplishments in the range of learning offered at the nation's three-dozen tribal colleges, located in 14 states primarily in the western part of the nation.

Keynote speakers include Jodi Gillette, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs; Hattie Kaufmann, National TV News Correspondent; Kathleen Merrigan, Deputy Secretary of Agriculture, and actor Val Kilmer, who will make a special presentation as the author/raconteur Mark Twain. Kilmer's Twain presentation is set for 8 p.m. Sunday, April 17 in the Bismarck Civic Center Arena.

The conference is headquartered at the Bismarck Civic Center Exhibit Hall, where the majority of the student competitions will take place.

A welcoming powwow is scheduled for the exhibit hall beginning at 7 p.m. Saturday, April 16. Archery competition will take place at the Nishu Bowmen Complex on Riverwood Drive. Volleyball will be played at the World War Memorial Building. Some other events are scheduled for the United Tribes Technical College campus.

The gathering also includes two days of professional development workshops starting Sunday, April 17 with a session about cultural strengthening as a core component in suicide prevention. Other topics include native health, student retention, transfer to four-year colleges, and career planning. Workshops will take place at the University of Mary's Butler Center for Lifelong Learning, located near the Civic Center at 505 South 7th Street.

Conference details, including a daily schedule, lodging, and vendor information are posted at http://aihec.sittingbull.edu/.

The event is hosted and planned by the member colleges of the North Dakota Association of Tribal Colleges: Cankdeska Cikana (Little Hoop) Community College, Fort Totten; Fort Berthold Community College, New Town; Sisseton Wahpeton College, Sisseton, SD; Sitting Bull College, Fort Yates; Turtle Mountain Community College, Belcourt; and United Tribes Technical College, Bismarck.

Registered participants will receive a packet of information containing a conference booklet that lists schedules and locations for all activities and events.

Higher Education grateful for event turnout

Oneida Higher Education would like to express our gratitude to all those who came out to support our Annual Adult College Fair on March 24, 2011 at the Radisson Inn Conference Center. With 17 colleges and approximately 57 participants, the event was a success. We would also like to congratulate our raffle prize winners: Vanessa Cardish, Colin Jordan, and Tamar Cornelius. Congratulations! We would also like to extend a "thank you" to the staff at the Radisson Inn who assisted prior to and during the event. You all were a great help! We hope all those who participated in the fair were able to find some quality programs that fit their educational goals and needs at some of the represented schools. If you have any questions about the fair or related to Oneida Higher Education feel free to contact us at 920-869-4033 or via email (highered@oneidanation.org).

New Cardiovascular Pieces of Equipment at Oneida Family Fitness

Oneida Family Fitness is pleased to introduce our new line of cardiovascular equipment Matrix.

"Matrix Fitness Systems' goal is clear: To make commercial fitness equipment that stands out, rises above, and sets new industry standards in the process. Well, we've done just that. But that's just the beginning. Each time we introduce a new product we immediately start asking "How can we make it better?" Perhaps that's why our machines attract more attention and require less maintenance than anything the competition has to offer. "

The pieces of equipment will include the following:

• MX-T7XE | Treadmill
• MX-T5X | Treadmill
• MX-A7XE | Ascent Trainer™
• MX-E7XE | Elliptical
• MX-R7XE| Recumbent
• MX-S5X | Stepper

Some of the great benefits of this line of equipment are as followed:

• Integrated 15" touch screen display with FitTouchTM Technology
• Vista ClearTM Television Technology - the most vibrant picture quality in the industry
• Compatible with iPod
• Integrated 3-speed personal fan

A big thank you to the IHS-SDPI Diabetes Prevention Program Cooperative Agreement for providing us this new equipment for the Oneida Organization, Community and their families.

General Tribal Council meets for special meeting

GTC focuses much of meeting attention to Oneida Seven Generations Corporations renewable energy project set for the city of Green Bay

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

A spirited General Tribal Council (GTC) put a small dent in a packed agenda during the April 11 Special GTC Meeting.

A resolution seeking discussion on the Oneida Tribe's relationship with Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) and possible action was moved to the front of the agenda.

The submitted resolution asked that the GTC direct the (Oneida) Business Committee (OBC) to report on potential damage to government-to-government relationships as a result of corporate actions with discussion on how as a government we will respond to it.

It also asked that the GTC request discussion on the terms of the tribe's agreement with OSGC and the potential of changing that agreement to bring about reporting to the OBC and the GTC on legal, political, and fiscal matters.

At the center of the discussion portion of the meeting as the history and current status of OSGC's proposed renewable energy project in Green Bay.

Staff from OSGC presented a detailed outline of activity that lead to the project moving locations multiple times and the financial terms of the project.

Chairman Rick Hill ruled multiple motions out of order after he found them to pierce the corporate veil that protects the tribe from any liability regarding OSGC projects. The motions were requesting financial reports and audits along with action by the GTC to determine the retention of OSGC. After a legal opinion was formed by the tribe's legal counsel Hill proceeded to rule the requests out of order.

A motion was then overwhelmingly accepted by a voice vote to accept OSGC's presentation.

The remaining agenda was tabled, which included tabled items regarding Indian Preference in hiring along with amendments to the Vacation and personal Day Accumulation policy. It also included the Trade Back for Cash of Vacation and Personal Time policy changes and resolutions that ask that GTC voting will not require two-thirds majority to change law and a request to double the size of the grass-fed beef herd at the Tsyunhehkawa farm were tabled. No date was set to have the items not heard brought before the GTC.

The next GTC meeting is scheduled for Monday, May 23 at 6 p.m. at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center. The tabled items along with two petitions are on the meeting agenda.

Agreement reached with Ashwaubenon

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Tribe made a service agreement with the Village of Ashwaubenon official by signing the document on Friday, April 15 at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center.

The three-year agreement will pay the village $305,209 during the first year with the remaining two years determined by an equation set out in the agreement. Funds for the agreement will come from the tribe's gaming compact with the state. It calls for no opposition from the village regarding the tribe's desire to place land into federal trust status and that the tribe agree not to permit any gasification or waste-to-energy facilities within the village boundaries.

According to tribal chairman Rick Hill, the Oneida Tribe was one of the first tribes to compensate local municipalities for services utilized by tribal members that are offered by municipalities.

The agreement outlines payments to the village for governmental services they provide to the tribe. The agreement also acknowledges governmental services provided by the tribe to the village.

Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin's Chairman Rick Hill (seated left), and Village of Ashwaubenon President Mike Aubinger (seated right) sign a service agreement on Friday, April 15 at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center. The agreement recognizes services each provide to their constituents.

"In this case there is overlapping jurisdictions here and that it's been recognized through our treaty of 1838 and this document here that the Oneidas have this territory," said Hill. "I really appreciate the leadership (Village of Ashwaubenon President) Mike (Aubinger) and his people have provided and the people that negotiated this out (came) to reason for what's best for all constituents."

Aubinger recognizes the benefit of having a positive relationship with the Oneida Tribe.

"I the big scheme of things what happens in the Oneida Tribe of Indians can benefit the Village of Ashwaubenon and what happens in the Village of Ashwaubenon can benefit the Oneida Tribe of Indians," he said.

Currently the tribe has similar agreements in place with Brown and Outagamie Counties, and the City of Green Bay. Negotiations are currently underway to replace a past-expired agreement with the Town of Oneida. The two remaining municipalities with overlapping jurisdiction with the tribe, the Village of Hobart and the Town of Pittsfield, have no agreement with the tribe.

"This serves as a really good example of government-to-government relationships. We are honored and pleased to have such good neighbors as Ashwaubenon," Hill said.

Bad River Chair gives State of the Tribes address

By Jason Smathers
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ A Chippewa tribal leader warned state lawmakers Tuesday about the dangers posed to the environment by a proposed mine in northern Wisconsin.

Mike Wiggins Jr., the chairman of the Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, said during the annual State of the Tribes address that a push to mine for iron ore in northern Wisconsin could have drastic effects on ground water and other aspects of the environment.

"The tribes are compelled through a unified value system ... to see beyond ringing endorsements and ultimately well beyond industrialization. Especially industrialization with unquantified and undetermined environmental risks."

Gogebic Taconite wants to spend more than $1 billion to develop an open-pit iron ore mine. It

Oneida Business Committee Wrap: April 13, 2011

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Controversy from the National Indian Gaming Association (NIGA) Convention held in Phoenix, Arizona April 3-6 led to a lively Oneida Business Committee (OBC) meeting on Wednesday, April 13 at the Norbert Hill Center.

In attendance: Chairman Rick Hill, Vice-Chairwoman Kathy Hughes, Treasurer Tina Danforth, Secretary Patty Hoeft, and Council Members Ed Delgado, Melinda Danforth, Ron Tehassi Hill and Brandon Stevens.

Excused: Councilwoman Trish King.

The OBC passed a resolution to retro-approve the appointment of OBC Chairman Rick Hill as a NIGA Delegate. Treasurer Tina Danforth was the original delegate who would have voted for the NIGA chairperson on behalf of Oneida.

In a February 9 OBC meeting, for which Treasurer Danforth was excused, the OBC voted to endorse Oneida Nation of Wisconsin citizen Ernie Stevens, Jr. as NIGA chairman.

Despite the endorsement, Treasurer Danforth was seen by others attending the convention wearing a campaign button supporting Ivan Makil for NIGA chair.

Councilman Brandon Stevens, son of Ernie Stevens, Jr., stated at the OBC meeting that Treasurer Danforth failed to answer a NIGA roll call held on the first day of the conference on the first call. Councilman Stevens answered the second call as alternate. Danforth stated she answered the second call simultaneously with Councilman Stevens.

Concerned that Treasurer Danforth would not vote for Ernie Stevens Jr., the OBC passed a resolution on April 5 via electronic polling (e-poll) to appoint Chairman Hill as the delegate to NIGA.

At the April 13 OBC meeting, Councilman Ed Delgado objected to the use of the e-poll.

"We're not supposed to be making important decisions like this through email. We're supposed to meet in public to make these decisions," said Delgado.

Chief Council Jo Anne House stated e-polls have been used in the past to make decisions in a time sensitive manner such as letters and grants.

"This would have been an appropriate action to take by the Business Committee. It followed the precedent for taking e-polls for the process," said House.

OBC Secretary Patty Hoeft made a motion for the Law Office draft rule to prohibit e-polls and retroactive action by the OBC.

"Many governments across the globe actually are dealing with this same thing …the rise of new technology … and the past practice of this Business Committee, even before 2005, found it very easy; it was a convenient way to get something done with, rather than having to wait," said Hoeft. "But I think because of this incident … we can't allow it, there's not enough trust in this organization."

The resolution passed.

On a side note, Ernie Stevens Jr. won the NIGA councilman seat by a vote of 121-14.

The OBC made quick work of several other agenda items.

Secretary Hoeft gave the oath of office to Election Board Alternates Sunshine Skenandore, Raeann Skenandore, Henrietta J. Cornelius, Vicki Cornelius, Michele Doxtator, Lori Hill, Lisa Liggins and Susan House.

The OBC passed a resolution accepting the 2012-2014 Transportation Improvement Plan.

Board, Committee and Commission quarterly reports

The OBC accepted reports form the Environmental Resource Board, Oneida Election Board and the Oneida Gaming Commission.

Standing Committees

The OBC approved the March 16 minutes of the Legislative Operating Committee (LOC) along with amendments to the Per Capita Law, the Child Custody, Placement and Visitation Law, Indian Preference Law. Guardians Ad Litem, Zoning and Shoreland Protection law, PP&P reinstating Personal Day Accumulation, Domestic Animals Ordinance, and the April 2011 LOC quarterly report.

The Per Capita Law amendments are intended to create a process to penalize individuals who submit fraudulent proof of a high school diploma to claim their trust account funds. Anyone attempting to do so could be fined one-third of the balance of their account.

The OBC took a moment to congratulate Senior Attorney Scott Wilson on his appointment to Governor Scott Walker's administration as administrator of the Division of Intergovernmental Relations, and to thank him for the work he's done for Oneida.

"We look forward to working with you in the future and Governor Walker and wish you all the best," said Chairman Hill.

The OBC accepted the April 8 Finance Committee minutes, and the March 3 Community Development Planning Committee minutes.

Travel

A travel report from Vice Chairwoman Kathy Hughes about MAST Impact Week in Washington, DC was accepted, as was a request from Treasurer Danforth to travel to the Native American Bank board meeting April 20-21 in Denver, Colorado.

General Tribal Council

The Committee approved scheduling a special General Tribal Council (GTC) meeting for Monday, August 29 for the FY12 Budget, and approved an agenda packet for the May 23 GTC meeting.

Follow-ups/BC directives

The OBC accepted a report on potential sites for the placement of the Oneida Enrollment Office, and a report on the Secretarial Election

Governor Walker approves improvements in Brown County

Work on WIS 54/172 roundabouts has begun

(Green Bay) As part of his efforts to create jobs and make sure Wisconsin is open for business, Governor Scott Walker, recently signed a $2.2 million contract to construct dual-lane roundabouts on WIS 172 at the entrance to Austin Straubel Airport/Oneida Casino/Radisson Hotel and at the intersection of WIS 172 and WIS 54. Construction began on Monday, April 18.

The contractor is RC Excavating, Inc., Suamico.

The approximately $2.2 million project will improve safety and operational efficiency at both of these intersections. Work will be done in two stages. Stage one will involve building the WIS 172/airport/casino roundabout, expected to be completed by mid-July. The WIS 54/172 roundabout is being built from mid-July to mid-September.

Traffic will be impacted during this project. Approximately 21,000 vehicles travel through the WIS 172/airport entrance daily, while approximately 16,300 vehicles travel through the WIS 54/172 intersection.

Starting April 18 during stage 1, WIS 172 will be closed from 0.5 miles west of South Point Road to 1 mile east of the County GE. Eastbound WIS 172 traffic will be detoured from the WIS 54/172 intersection eastbound on WIS 54 and southbound on County EB to the WIS 172/County EB intersection. Westbound WIS 172 traffic will be process. The Committee also accepted a report on the 2011 US Indigenous Games that will take place in Milwaukee July 10-14.

New Business/Requests

Councilman Delgado made a motion for the secretary to bring back a report on putting GTC meeting videos on the Oneida website. The new website will have a login for Oneida citizens. He also asks that video of the judiciary meeting from February 5 be made available. The motions were approved.

The OBC also approved a sub-agreement with the Nature Conservancy; to change the deadline of the voluntary resignation severance pay program from April 15 to April 19; approved the appointment recommendations of Marlene Garvey, Chris Cornelius and Al Manders to the Oneida Environmental Resources Board; approved Lois Strong to the Oneida Police Commission; changed the terms of the Oneida Powwow Committee from one year terms to three year terms and extended the term Tonya Webster; approved an evaluation of Community Synergies, LLC; and approved the RJ Reynolds Retail Marketing Plan.

Additions

The OBC approved a deal with the tribes insurance provider UMR that will save money on organ transplant surgeries by going through an in-network provider.

Executive Mangers Reports

The Committee accepted a bi-monthly report from Chief of Staff Bill Gollnick and approved a service agreement with the Village of Ashwaubenon.

The OBC also accepted reports from the Oneida Land Claims Commission, and the Chief Council report.

New Business/Requests

Councilman Delgado's motion was passed to review the job descriptions of the Legislative Aides and Executive Assistants within 30 days.

The OBC also approved a one year contract for Attorney Arlinda Locklear; accepted banking services summery, approved the Wisconsin State Transportation Cooperative Agreement; and addressed concerns over the Oneida Community Health Center. Councilman Delgado made a motion to identify equipment that was used by the now defunct urology, allergy, and ear nose and throat departments and see that it's sold properly.

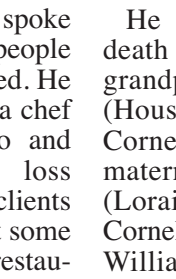
A request for the Oneida Veterans Colorguard to Haskell's graduation ceremony was sent to the finance committee.

Vice Chairwoman Hughes made a motion to send a complaint from a tribal member about the use of the Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services (SEOTS) facilities to the General Manager Debbie Thundercloud for follow up which was approved.

The OBC approved contracts for Attorneys Rebecca Webster and Patricia Stevens Garvey.

The OBC accepted a presentation on Treaty to Trust to Carcieri: The Economic Future of Indian Lands as FYI.

There was no support for a Visa credit card which was sponsored by Tina Danforth.



The OBC approved relinquishments of tribal citizenship.

A personnel complaint was made but did not get any support to move forward. Councilwoman Melinda Danforth moved to accept the memo and evaluations to be placed on the next OBC agenda which was accepted.

Passing On...

Budice Jr., Edward 'Ed,' 'Eddie' Rocco

January 22, 1966 – March 16, 2011

Edward ("Ed," "Eddie,") Rocco Budice Jr. (age 45), died unexpectedly in his sleep on Wednesday, March 16, 2011. He was born January 22, 1966 to Mary "Rags" Cornelius (Neenah), and the late Edward R. Budice Sr. (Chicago).

Edward lived with his family in Chicago until he was 11 years old at which time they moved to the Neenah/Menasha area where he graduated from Neenah High School. Edward became a professional Industrial Sandblaster & Industrial Painter and had his own business. Edward ran a Limousine business during his off-season and escorted many famous Packer players around the state and various high rollers from casino to casino. He lived in Aspen and Telluride Colorado, for many years, and became a professional Bull Rider, as well. Edward enjoyed being physically fit and liked to body build. He also liked to train others in the sport. He began to be a body guard from time to time, and spoke of some famous people for which he worked. He also learned to be a chef while in Colorado and prepared weight loss meals for private clients and also worked at some high-end spa type restaurants in the area. Edward loved the life in Colorado.

Edward loved his dogs, which were "the kids." They went everywhere with him. He is survived by three of his dogs, Nibbles, Kid, and Buster. He was preceded in death by his dog Bo whom he tried desperately to save from a severe illness. He rescued three of his dogs as strays in need of immediate medical care and one from a rescue shelter. Other than his dogs, Edward was an eternal bachelor, vowing never to settle down. He went where his work took him. He was too much of a free spirit to be tied down to a traditional family.

Edward was getting ready to go on his next adventure to San Diego, California, where he was going to housesit for a friend, who had a new house on the beach. Edward enjoyed playing golf and was eager to take his clubs with him. He planned on getting plenty of use out of them.

On a list of things to do for his trip was found one special notation. It said, "say good bye to Bill and wish him well." He and his brother often did not see eye to eye, but he loved him and wanted the best for him all the same.

Edward is survived by his mother, one brother William "Bill" Budice (Appleton) and his niece Maya Woller (Menasha). Edward is further survived by his maternal aunt, Dorthy Tabor (Arizona), his maternal uncle Dempsy (Marie) Cornelius (Neenah). Many close cousins and friends. Two especially close friends: Sue (Scott) Atkinson (Neenah), and Dan Schreurs (Kimberly).

He was preceded in death by his maternal grandparents Delia (House) and Harvey Cornelius (Oneida); maternal uncles: Leo (Lorainne Buhrnam) Cornelius (Green Bay), William (Gerry) Cornelius (Neenah), and Hayward (Mary Ann) Cornelius (Milwaukee); maternal aunts: Rebecca (Kenneth) House (Chicago), Ruth (House) Grover (Chicago), Margie (House) Antos (Chicago); and two cousins, Ingrid Grover (Chicago), and Harvey Zember (Menasha).

A funeral service celebrating Edward's life, was held at 11am on Saturday, March 19, 2011 with Deacon Deborah Heckel officiating.

RYAN FUNERAL HOME 305 N. Tenth Street, De Pere, assisted the family with arrangements. Please go to www.ryanfh.com to send online condolences to the family.

With Sincere Gratitude

The Family of Gerald Orie...

...wishes to thank and extend our sincere appreciation to all who supported us during our loss of our dear Jerry. We are honored for your kindness, help, and assistance in helping our Dad on his journey to the Creator's world.

Special thanks to Sonny Hill who provided a strong base of understanding and support we all need. Yawʌkó to Matt Cornelius and the Oneida Tribe for providing the wood from Conservation and the beautiful garden plants sent. Thanks to Rev. Lonnie Johnson for your words of hope and your stories of our family members. Thanks to Winnifred Thomas, Ron and Janice McLester, and CFW Wheelock for your very kind labors in providing a warm and comforting place, and food to nourish all the family and friends who came for the meal. Thanks to the Firekeepers and the Pall-bearers, Simon, Don, Rick, and Dennis. And thanks to all who sent the beautiful flowers and plants. Special thanks to Porkie John, Casey Smith, and the Eagle Singers for bringing the healing music of the Drum to us. To Paul, Joe, Don, Jonise, Mary Jo, Swanzie, and Earl for providing the food for the meal.

We give a big thank you to the Menominee Tribal School for all of their assistance, food, flowers, and your kindness that we appreciate. Thanks also to the Ryan Funeral Home for all of your help and compassion.

Many thanks to all who came from near and far and for being there for Jerry over the years. In love, honor, and respect we look up to you with much gratitude.

Hobart board denies cemetery tax appeal

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

The Village of Hobart denied an appeal made by the Holy Apostles Church for recovery of unlawful tax of a cemetery at a Village Board Meeting Tuesday, April, 12.

The issue came before the board during a meeting on March 7 when a decision was tabled for the April 12 meeting.

Village assessor Mike Denor determined in his 2007 assessment that all but four acres of the 27-acre cemetery was not being used exclusively for cemetery use. "If it is clearly plotted for future grave sites and clearly a continuation of burial plots then it is exempt. This is more about the area that's primarily woods with trails in it," Denor said as he clarified his reasoning behind his decision to deem the land taxable.

Diocesan administrator for the Episcopal Diocese of Fond du Lac, Matthew Payne, challenged that argument by stating that trespassers walking on the land had created the trails. Payne further stated that the land was bought as cemetery land and has never been intended otherwise, "As we continue to add graves as time goes on and we move further and further back into that land, that doesn't show any other purpose than use as a cemetery. We haven't used it for any other purpose at all since we purchased it in 1908."

"When the initial assessment was made, there was no change ever shown as to what made it taxable. Which was a violation of the statute," Payne said referring to the previous attempts at taxing the land. The land had been assessed for taxes in two previous occasions, once in 1950 by Brown County and again in 1983 by Hobart. In both cases the diocese appealed the decision and the land was returned to tax-exempt status.

After much deliberation Village Board Trustee David Dillenburg stated that he trusted Mike Denor's assessment of the land and made the motion to deny the appeal. The board voted unanimously to deny the appeal and the motion carried.

has purchased an option to lease the mineral rights on 22,000 acres in Ashland and Iron counties. A NorthStar Economics study commissioned by Gogebic Taconite claims the mine would create thousands of jobs, including many long-term jobs.

The Bad River Band reservation is located on more than 125,000 acres of land in Iron and Ashland Counties, just north of the proposed mine.

Wiggins said job creation must be balanced with environmental preservation to save state treasures for future generations. He urged lawmakers to keep the lines of communication open to ensure cooperation between tribal and state government on economic development.

"The tribes are hopeful that we can find a balance between bringing an end to this recession while still exemplifying the environmental stewardship that is intertwined in our history - from Chief Buffalo and our ancestors who signed our treaties to John Muir, Aldo Leopold, Gaylord Nelson and Sigurd Olsen."

Wiggins also thanked the Legislature for resolving past issues, citing a bill passed last year that allows the state Superintendent to ban American Indian mascots at state schools. He also said the Legislature has taken tribal input on a measure that would require all voters to show photo ID at the polls. Wiggins said he believed the final bill would allow tribal ID to be used at the polls as well.

Tuesday's speech was the seventh State of the Tribes address, which updates the Legislature on the status of Wisconsin's 11 tribal reservations.

through family," said Kendrick.

The 10 minute video was one of three videos chosen out of 15 at the 2011 Northeastern Wisconsin Region's National History Day competition held April 9 at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

"We felt scared for a long time because like we were trying to organize and edit things, and then it all fell into place … first place," said Kanani as Kendrick and Noelle started laughing.

The trio made a documentary as part of their history class taught by Laura Studee.

"We chose documentary because it seemed like a challenge, and it was a challenge," said Kanani. "In the beginning of the semester, we struggled with finding a topic."

The students turned to the Oneida Cultural Heritage Department and with the help of Historical Researcher Nicolas Reynolds settled on telling the story of the IRA.

"Nic helped us a lot, the whole crew at Cultural Heritage," said Kanani.

"Especially?" coaxed Studee.

"Loretta Metoxen," Kanani and Noelle said at the same time. Loretta Metoxen is a historian at Cultural Heritage.

"We learned a lot … through interviews and stuff, they taught us a lot," said Noelle.

The budding documentarians shot interviews and old photos on a Flip camera and edited the video on Movie Maker.

According to Studee, the judges praised the originality of the student's video.

"We like to be different because (other students) always do the same thing like the (Kennedy) assassination," said Noelle.

"And flappers, they're overrated," added Kanani.

"Lambeau Field," said Kendrick.

"The Berlin Wall was a big one, there were two films on the Berlin Wall," said Studee.

The winners of the state competition will move on to the 2011 Kenneth E. Behring National History Day Contest will be held June 12 – 16 in Washington, D.C.

"It will be regional, and then state, and then national," explained Studee.

"And then internationals," said Kanani.

"And then universal," said Kendrick.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Mother and daughter expand expertise

Oneida Homespun Harvest, Inc. fills niche in crafting world

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Mother and daughter team Amelia Cornelius and Kim Nishimoto are branching out with their new business Oneida Homespun Harvest, Inc. to expand their vast crafting repertoire

"It was a business that was already formed, and we were going to get a really good deal," said Nishimoto.

The duo purchased an industrial hem stitch machine that punches holes in fabric while simultaneously sewing around the holes to keep the fabric from fraying.

"The purpose of it is for crocheters to add an edging … to make it more like it's homemade and something you personally did. It's just now coming back, but most of the companies are based in Utah," said Nishimoto. "We're the only ones out in this area in the Midwest."

Oneida Homespun Harvest creates bibs and baby blankets with decorative crocheted edgings, and also sells kits for people to crochet themselves.

"If (the fabric's) not hemstitched, then they would have to punch a hole through with a crochet hook, and that just takes a lot more time. This is tons easier," said Cornelius. "It could be used for (powwow) shawls, because the holes are already there."

Nishimoto does most of the crocheting, though Cornelius contributes.

"Every time I go shopping, I'm looking for something that looks like it would be really cute for a baby," said Cornelius who found a pattern with little green turtles.

"Perfect for around here," she said.

The new business incorporates other items the two are known for, specifically their cornhusk dolls.

"I've been doing them since I was 12," said Cornelius who learned from her grandmother.

In 1987, Cornelius and Nishimoto worked together to create dolls for the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

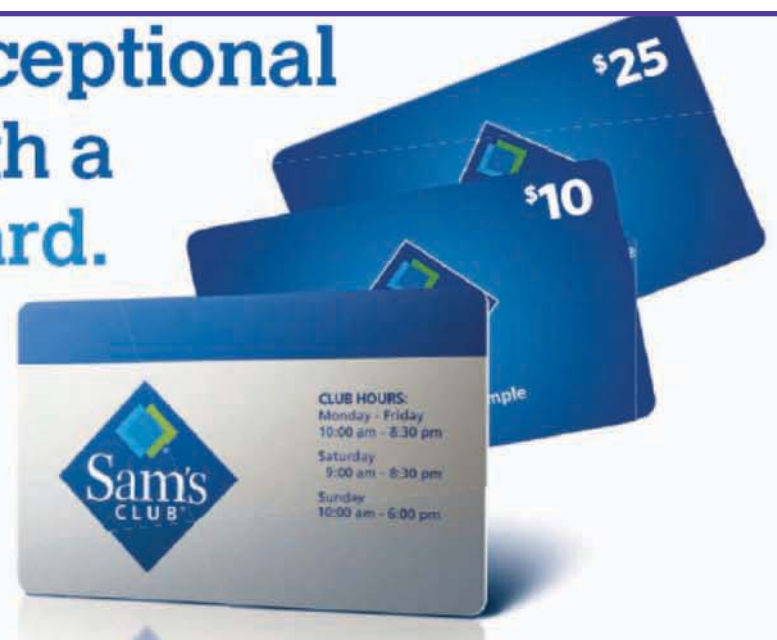
Amelia Cornelius and daughter Kim Nishimoto display cornhusk dolls and crocheted baby items from their business Oneida Homespun Harvest, Inc.

Cornelius stated Nishimoto does most of the sewing on the doll's outfits, and then Cornelius does the beading.



"And then they come back to me, and I put hair on them" said Nishimoto.

Their dolls can be seen in shadowboxes at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center and at Marriot Hotels in Washington DC and California. A display of Oneida Chiefs can be viewed in the entrance of the Norbert Hill Center. The duo also makes dolls on a smaller scale.

"We did a wedding doll for the top of a wedding cake," said Cornelius.

Montana tribes look to stop megaloads

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) _ Two Indian tribes are asking to take part in a lawsuit aimed at preventing the hauling of oversized equipment through Montana to the oil sand fields in Alberta, Canada.

The Missoulian reports that Western Montana's Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, as well as the Nez Perce of Idaho, filed a motion in District Court in Missoula on Wednesday asking to have their say in the lawsuit against the state Department of Transportation.

Missoula County and three environmental groups say the department failed to analyze or disclose potential adverse effects in its environmental assessment of Imperial Oil/ExxonMobil's transportation plan. The MDT denies the claims.

The tribes say they share many of the concerns of the plaintiffs, but have some of their own that might not otherwise be addressed in court.

Imperial/Exxon is apparently modifying its original proposal to send 207 oversized loads from Lewiston, Idaho, to the Canadian border in north-central Montana. Still, the companies continue to seek clearance to ship more than 100 loads up U.S. Highway 12 through the Nez Perce Reservation in Idaho.

Yurok tribe buys forest in Humboldt County

KLAMATH, Calif. (AP) _ A Native American tribe is acquiring more than 34 square miles of ancestral land on Northern California's Redwood Coast.

The Yurok Tribe says it completed the purchase Thursday of the Humboldt County property from the Green Diamond Resource Company.

Tribal Chairman Thomas O'Rourke says the acquisition marks the long-sought return of the tribe's ancestral land and more than doubles its territory on the lower Klamath River.

O'Rourke says tribe plans to create a salmon sanctuary and use tribal management practices to protect wildlife habitat and restore water quality.

The tribe bought the land with help from the nonprofit Western Rivers Conservancy and $18.75 million from a state clean water fund.

The property is home to Chinook salmon, coho salmon, rainbow trout and several imperiled bird species.

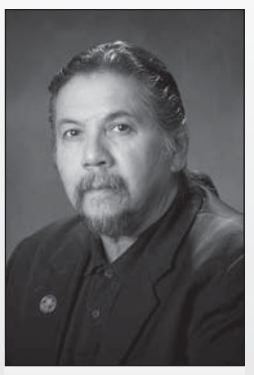
Housing Update

On April 14th, I attended a Housing Task Force meeting. The Task Force received a report from Housing Director Dale Wheelock which included many new housing initiatives including (1) the building of many new rental and home ownership housing units, and (2) the development of new regulations which will allow more Tribal members to become eligible for Oneida Housing Authority services. The new regulation, hopefully to be developed and implemented in the very near future, will provide more housing opportunities for Tribal families who have been financially devastated by today's poor economy.



Wage Petition Update

In February, Tribal elder Yvonne Metivier submitted a petition to increase employee wages by .75 cents per hour for all employees earning $60,000 and below. She says it's been years since Tribal employees have received a raise. She's right on that issue. The General Tribal Council will consider her request at the July Semi-annual Mtg.

The Business Committee and Tribal administration is currently reviewing a 1.8% wage increase for 2012. That 1.8% proposal may change before it comes before GTC (date to be determined by the new Business Committee). Under the 1.8% proposal:

- A Slot Tech, whose average wage is $18 per hour, would receive an approximate .32 cent an hour wage increase (a $12.80 weekly increase).
- A top executive, whose wage is perhaps $65 per hour, would receive an approximate wage increase of $1.17 per hour (a $46.80 weekly increase).

Note: If I were still a young man and making the wage of a Slot Tech, and if I still had young children to feed, clothe and maybe even buy diapers for, I would have absolutely no problem choosing the .75 cent an hour increase over the 1.8% proposal and would tell the Business Committee to stop wasteful spending, to carefully examine all of the Tribe's spending proposals, and to find the financial resources to provide our Tribal employees with a fair increase after years of being neglected. As a Business Committee member, I hope we can find a compromise.

Councilman

Biomass "Waste to Energy" Update

The position of my Office on the Seven Generations Biomass project from the get-go has been that this a great opportunity for our Oneida Tribe to take a leadership position in clean energy development. My responsibility as a member of the Business Committee is to ensure that the project is profitable and safe, safe for our workers who will be our own people, and safe for our mother the Earth (Ohw^tsya). Some say that asking questions is dangerous or detrimental to the Tribe. I strongly disagree. Well anyway, through my research and asking questions, this is how I understand that the process will continue. The project will continue to be under evaluation by the Department of Energy. The DOE will provide a report in the near future, and may either recommend that the project is viable with little or no harmful environmental effects, or the DOE will conduct a more comprehensive environmental assessment which could take up to a year. I have provided this subject to the membership to let our people know that the entire Business Committee is hopeful that the Biomass Waste to Energy Project is successful. Some of us may worry more than others about the Project's economic or environmental impact, some of us may ask more questions than others, but none of us want this project to fail. And finally, I would hope that some of the personnel at the Seven Generations Corporation would be a little more respectful towards members of the Business Committee the next time they come before the Oneida people to report as the Business Committee has always been respectful to all of them.

Thanks for reading.

Letters & Opinions...

Looking at the Statistics

It's interesting how statistics can be slanted. The article states that 70% of the respondents consider the Reservation an excellent or good place to live. The stats shown in the article also states that only 20% of the respondents consider the Reservation an excellent place to live while 22% consider the Reservation a Fair or Poor place to live.

The article states that 65% of the respondents consider the Reservation is an excellent or good place to raise a family. The stats shown in the article also states that only 18% of the respondent consider the Reservation is an excellent place to raise a family while 26% consider the Reservation a Fair or Poor place to raise a family.

Thirdly, the Reservation as a retirement location; 23% of the respondents consider it an excellent location whereas 26% of the respondents consider it a Fair or Poor place to retire.

It looks like there is a need to re-evaluate the survey. There's only 1% difference between Excellent and Fair. And the most percentage under the Good category is 50%. Not too good of a report card grade.

But I must say that the article is attempting to show that living on the Reservation is better than living in Brown or Outagamie counties. Which I can't argue with since there's no statistics shown to prove the writer's assertions.

It's disappointing that this submission was not edited before it was made a part of the newspaper and it speak volumes about the Oneida Statistics Office.

Patricia Grace

Statistician's Response

Good Morning Patricia,

I am responding to your inquiry to the Quality of Life article. I have attached the article for your reference. All of the ratings were based on a 4-point scale: excellent, good, fair, and poor. This forces the respondent to choose either a positive (excellent or good) or a negative (fair or poor) rating.

For the Reservation as a place to live, 20% rated it excellent and 50% rated it good which equals 70% rating it excellent or good. For the Reservation as a place to raise a family, 18% rated it excellent and 47% rated it good which equals 65% rating it excellent or good. For the Reservation as a place to retire, 23% rated it excellent and 45% rated it good which equals 68% rating it excellent or good.

There is no attempt to sway the readers in any way. The goal of the article is just to present the results of the survey. In future articles, departments within the organization will add what initiatives they are working on to respond to the perceptions of members.

I am not quite sure if I have alleviated any of your issues with the article, but I would be happy to meet with you to discuss them. Feel free to call me.

Thank You for the Support

I would like to thank the people who made it possible for me to travel abroad this past October to France. Thank you to my mom (Linda Dallas) and my dad (Allen Danforth), my grandparents (Rosemary John, Dennisson "Jr." Danforth, Milton and Nadine Dallas) and Cathy L. Metoxen who held fundraisers for me, the Oneida community, and all of the people who donated their time & energy to ensure I made it. It was a success.

In France I spent five days with a host family and the other five days touring Paris with my peers. While with my host family, I visited the Grand Lafitte Shopping Center, the Notre Dame Cathedral, & and the Castle of Versailles. Later I regrouped with my classmates to see many more castles & monuments. The highlight of my trip was when we attended a candle lit dinner on the Eiffel Tour. All and all, my experience(s) of being fully immersed into the French have allowed me to reach a better understanding of their rich culture, language, and customs. If it wasn't for my family, friends, and Community's support my dream(s) would not have come true. My trip was worth every penny earned.

Merci beaucoup (thank you very much)

Alana Dallas

OBC Forum...

Shekoli,

I am very excited to address you at this time as a Candidate of the 2011-2014 Oneida Business Committee. I would like to say "Yawʌko" for all of the encouragement, wisdom, and knowledge I gained from the entire community throughout my tenure as a current member of the Oneida Business Committee. Your continued support is greatly appreciated and does not go unnoticed. Please remember to Vote Saturday May 7th, 2011 in Oneida Nation's first ever Primary Elections, being held from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. at the Oneida Health Center and at the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee, WI.

Oneida Chamber of Commerce

My office is working with a group of Oneida Business owners to establish an Oneida Chamber of Commerce. They are seeking formal recognition as a Chamber of Commerce from the Tribe and the State of Wisconsin. They have formed a board of directors, along with bylaws and a mission. It is my intent to create a positive beneficial relationship between the Oneida Chamber and the Organization to help Small Business owners with technical support and assistance. As we work on an MOA to officially recognize and work with Small Business we are revamping the Small Business Loan program for improvements. The new Business Committee will have a set of metrics to gauge the success and struggles of entrepreneurs that utilize the Loan program.

Brandon Stevens
Councilman

The Mission of the Oneida Chamber of Commerce is to promote the development of the Oneida private sector and to assist Oneida Citizens and other business owners who want to create a better quality of life through entrepreneurship.

Objectives of the Chamber:

* To encourage Oneida and Native American entrepreneurship
* Strengthen alliance of Oneida businesses to increase success of contractual relationships with the Tribe and its corporations and create a more diverse reservation economy.
* Establish a familiarity of each other's businesses to promote business opportunities.
* Provide services and support to Oneida businesses

Oneida Seven Generations Corporation (OSGC) Biomass Update

I was very pleased to see the support that our General Tribal Council showed for the Oneida Seven Generation's Biomass project and to the current members of the Corporation. I believe it is most important that the GTC witness the due diligence that OSGC puts forth when they analyze their business ventures. It is also important to keep in mind that this corporation is wholly owned by the Tribe with new leadership. It was reassuring that all the logical questions and concerns were answered by the presentation OSGC and their panel provided. The GTC asked very intelligent questions and I am pleased to see that our people are concerned about this issue. The Corporation is vested in this community not only from a business stand point, but also from a personal stand point. Every member of this Corporation has family on the reservation and would not do anything to harm their family, their people, or our land. Please keep all facts in mind when discussing the Biomass Project. Any questions or concerns regarding Oneida Seven Generations Corporation or the Biomass Project you are more then welcome to contact my office or the Oneida Seven Generations Office at (920) 347-0500

Frequently Asked Questions
Oneida Tribal General Election Primary

How will the election process be different for the 2011 General Election?

In 2011, a Primary Election will be held. In years past there was no primary election.

What is a primary?

Excerpts from Oneida Tribal Election Law:

2.12-2. There shall be a primary election for Business Committee positions whenever there are three (3) or more candidates for any officer positions or sixteen (16) or more candidates for the at-large council member positions.

(a) The two (2) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for each officer position shall be placed on the ballot.

(b) The fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for the at-large council member positions shall be placed on the ballot.

(c) Any position where a tie exists to determine the candidates to be placed on the ballot shall include all candidates where the tie exists.

2.12-3. The Election Board shall cancel the primary election if the Business Committee positions did not draw the requisite number of candidates for a primary by the petitioning deadline set for the primary.

2.12-4. In the event a candidate withdraws or is unable to run for office after being declared a winner in the primary, the Election Board shall declare the next highest primary vote recipient the primary winner. This procedure shall be repeated as necessary until the ballot is full or until there are no available candidates. If the ballot has already been printed, the procedures for notifying the Oneida public in section 2.5-11 and 2.5-12 shall be followed, including the requirement to print a notice in the Tribal newspaper if time lines allow.

Why have a primary?

To give members a chance to select from fewer candidates or the Business Committee positions in the General Election.

Will there be a primary for all vacancies?

No. The primary election is for Business Committee vacancies only.

When will the primary be held?

On Saturday, May 7, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

If there are only two candidates running for an officer position, will a primary still be held for that position?

No. The primary is designed to get the top two candidates for each officer position. If only two applicants run for that position, each applicant will automatically be placed on the General Election ballot as a candidate.

If a candidate didn't advance in the primary, can I write their name on my ballot at the General Election?

No. Write-in candidates are not allowed.

When will the Caucus be held?

On Saturday, March 12, 2011 at the Norbert Hill Center at 1:00 p.m.

Is the Caucus just for vacancies within the Business Committee?

No, the Caucus will be for ALL vacancies of all boards, committees, and commissions with elected positions to be filled at the 2011 General Election.

When can I submit application for candidacy?

Officially this is done at the Caucus by being nominated and submitting the required application by the deadline date to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

If I can't attend the Caucus, can I still submit my application to be a candidate?

Yes. You will need to complete a petition and submit the required application by the deadline date.

How long do I have to submit an application to become a candidate?

All applications are due by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, March 18, 2011 to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

When is the General Election?

On Saturday, July 16, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

When can I begin campaigning?

Whenever you wish.

Excerpt from Oneida Election Law: 2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:

(a) Placement of campaign signs:

(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's permission.

(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.

(3) No campaign sign shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.

(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.

(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.

(d) Enforcement. The Zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.

(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Can I vote by absentee ballot?

No. Article III Section 2 of the Constitution states "All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin who are 21 years of age or over shall be qualified voters provided they present themselves in person at the polls on the day of election."

Will the Milwaukee voting site be open for both the primary and general election?

Yes. Business Committee Resolution 03-13-2002-O states: "NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that an approved facility; compliance with the Oneida Election Law, 2.8-0, Section B, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is hereby designated as a second polling site for Oneida triennial elections, beginning with the July, 2002, election." The SEOTS Building is located at 6820 West Wedgewood Drive, Milwaukee, WI.

Hard-Working Dedicated

• Independent • Knowledgeable • Positive Leadership •

I am running for the Oneida Business Committee and I would greatly appreciate your vote and support.

I bring a wealth of experience to this position. I have been involved for more than 20 years in Oneida public policy and smart governance issues - and not always necessarily as a candidate for public office - but as a person dedicated to bringing people together around good solutions.

Over the years I have served the Oneida people in various capacities. On many occasions I have volunteered and worked side-by-side with many honest and hard-working Oneida people that desire to build a better Oneida Tribe. To see more about my campaign & previous work, visit here: Oneida1.com

In Oneida, we need bold budget reforms that promote a commitment to providing advance services (housing, social and health programs) for the Oneida people. Likewise, many good Oneida employees have not received pay raises for several years. It's getting harder for our people to live in an environment where all cost (gas, food, electricity) are rising except for their wages. We need to address the wage issue.

With new leadership and bold reforms, we can turn Oneida around. The truth is, I am not running against anyone, I am running for something, and that's to serve the Oneida people.

If elected, I will serve the Oneida people with a level of energy that gets things done. There is no cause that I'd rather fight for, and I'd be honored to have your support.

Respectfully,
Vince DelaRosa

Taking a look at Housing: Addressing Social Issues

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Housing Authority (OHA) is well aware of the ramifications of behavioral issues related to housing needs so they are reaching out to those in need.

At numerous staff levels within OHA, individuals and families that appear in need are often extended help.

"If something comes up and is brought (our) way (we) make the connections and go from there," said Scott Denny, OHA's Housing Coordinator. "(We) make referrals to internal and external services, we will use the likes of Social Services and Behavioral Health."

The OHA also employs multiple case workers who perform assessments to better identify which resources would be best suited to assist a family or individual. A Resident Opportunities and Self Sufficiency Coordinator receives referrals from OHA staff and works at a more intimate level to offer assistance. The grant-funded position also organizes training and educational sessions that are geared to create a better-rounded individual.

Starting next month OHA will be offering a series of educational sessions highlighting credit, budgeting, the responsibilities of renting, home buying education, and home maintenance.

"There are a lot of things that OHA is doing at socially responsible level and we are trying to go beyond the 'we-supply-you a physical place at an affordable price'," said Denny.

He is quick to point out that if behavioral issues aren't addressed social issues will not be solved by simply providing housing.

"When people are having problems with (social issues), yes, when they get in (here) they are looking for a physical unit, yes, not having a physical unit is a problem, but if we take that same family that is having these issues and put them in a unit and nothing is there to help support that family they just get kicked out of here," he added.

Every OHA client isn't the classic case for in-depth counseling or training says Denny.

"We want to see the best for each individual and family, when you see these problems out there you can provide a means to help themselves or to stand by and do nothing," said Denny. "The reality is these are the problems. To me to sleep better at night you have to say you have done what you can do. If a family has chosen to not take the avenues that you shed light on exist, you can't help that. If I can show you five avenues you can travel down, I owe it to you."

OHA is also taking a stand to provide a safe environment for their clients. They complete background checks on each individual applying for housing assistance along with a five-year waiting period for any individual convicted of a felony along with any drug charge being immediately disqualified from housing.

"We see housing related problems to be more than just not having the inventory. People are dealing with issues all the time that become barriers or challenges and reasons why they cant obtain housing here or elsewhere. That's why we are doing this," said Denny.

CORRECTION

The child dependent allowance is $480 per child when adjusted income is determined and OHA rent calculated.

NWTC to host annual car show

(Green Bay) - Students and staff at Northeast Wisconsin Technical College are revving up for the 25th Annual NWTC Auto Club Car Show and Swap Meet. The event will be held Sunday, May 1, from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., on the NWTC Green Bay campus

Last year approximately 6,500 people attended this family event that features fun for everyone. Car enthusiasts will love the hundreds of fabulous show vehicles, including muscle cars, antiques, classics, street rods, custom trucks and cycles.

Kids can have fun with games and activities such as face painting, sidewalk chalk, a coloring contest, a piston toss game, and a ring toss game. Everyone can enjoy food, refreshments, music, and the chance to win dozens of raffle and door prizes. Tools, vehicle parts, model cars, and other auto-related items will be for sale in the swap meet area.

Admission for the Car Show & Swap Meet is just $3.00 per person; $1.00 off with donation of non-perishable food item. Children under 12 and senior citizens will be admitted for free. All proceeds will go toward the NWTC Automotive and Scholarship programs.

It is my goal...

...to reach out to my Oneida membership in the next several weeks to hear your concerns and thoughts about how our government should move forward. It is my hope that most of this community will share the same concerns that I have in regard to a responsible government. I am concerned about honest and open government, fiscal responsibility, planning for the future, and better communication. As a candidate, I pledge to enter this campaign with honesty and professionalism. I invite anyone who would like to know my official positions to contact me.

Several people have encouraged me to run for Tribal Secretary. The main reason I have declared my candidacy is because I have the best interest of the Oneida Tribe in my heart. I have a very good position in management at the Radisson, so I am not running because I need a job. I am running because I care and I can make a difference. I am someone who knows what it's like to be a bingo worker, a waitress, a blackjack dealer, and a receptionist. I value our front line workers for the work they do and I know they have a hard time making ends meet. Our front line workers need to make better wages. We don't need another wage study that explains what we already know. We need to utilize the many studies that have already been done, as there is no need to reinvent the wheel.

As we approach the upcoming election, I will continue to utilize social media as one of my forms of communication to share my thoughts, my concerns, and my goals for the Oneida Nation.

I am asking for your support and encourage you to be involved in the upcoming election by excercising your right to vote. Together, we can and will make a difference.

Oneida youth go behind the scenes at Lambeau Field

Submitted photo

Ten Oneida youths, along with eight members of the Oneida Police Department, had the opportunity to go on a behind the scenes tour the Green Bay Packers facility.

Submitted by Matthew Ninham
OPD Community Resource Officer

On March 6th, 2011 Oneida Police Officers sponsored a Tour with 10 kids from our community of Lambeau Field.

Community Resource Officer Matthew Ninham was able to contact Rueben Zayas who works security for The Green Bay Packers and he was gracious enough to invite the group to Lambeau Field. Rueben also had his good friend and Director of Security Operations for The Green Bay Packers Jerry Parins, help him give a personal behind the scenes tour of Lambeau Field. They both expressed what a privilege it was for them to give the kids and Officers who escorted them, a personal tour.

They showed the group the weight room, took them through the tunnel and onto the field, the jersey & equipment room, the Super Bowl trophy display area, basketball court, and locker room. This was possibly a once in a lifetime opportunity and an opportunity to see what most people don't get a chance to see on the normal tour. Jerry and Rueben shared many stories and shared some of the history of The Green Bay Packers. Our thanks go out to Rueben and Jerry as well as the Green Bay Packer organization for their generosity and kindness they showed by allowing us a behind the scenes look of The World Champion Green Bay Packers! I also wanted to thank The Oneida Recreation Center for making there van available to transport all the kids. The kids were very excited and I could tell by the smiles on their faces. What a great time they had.

Social Services: Income Maintenance Program facts

Did you know the FoodShare program was formerly known as the Food Stamp program?

Did you know that the FoodShare funding comes from the federal government's United States Department of Agriculture (USDA)?

Did you know that the Oneida Tribe contracts with the State of Wisconsin just like counties do, to operate the FoodShare and BadgerCare programs and these programs have been in existence since 1977 in our community? The Tribe does not pay these benefits or staff salaries out of tribal dollars however, the program is part of the overall tribal budget.

Did you know some of the Tribes of Wisconsin are the only Tribes in the United States that can operate the FoodShare and BadgerCare (formerly Medical Assistance) programs within their communities.

In the last 7 months, FoodShare (FS) benefits provided to families were:

I ASK FOR YOUR VOTE

For two terms, you elected me as an Oneida Business Committee Councilman. I've done my best to serve you, the Oneida people. I stand on my record of service.

Now, I ask for your support as I run for Tribal Chairman.

LEADERSHIP

Over the years I've been blessed with knowing Indian leaders whom I feel were throwbacks to our history as Indian people. Our past leaders, many now gone, never considered their personal interests and wealth above the well-being of the people. These were leaders the people could trust and depend on. They made decisions that served the elderly, the ill, and the children who came first and above all else.

Today, leadership responsibilities have increased. Oneidas are in need of opportunities for fair employment at fair wages, educational opportunities, affordable housing and quality health care. Our veterans deserve the continued benefits and recognition they earned while in the service of our country.

GENERAL TRIBAL COUNCIL

As the Chairman and as the record shows, I will continue to support the GTC. Your work as Tribal members participating in your governmental decision making has allowed the Oneida Tribe to practice a unique form of democracy very few people in the world are able to participate in.

As Chairman, I will keep the GTC meetings orderly and get the work of the people accomplished.

OUR RESOURCES

As Oneidas, we participate in Indian gaming. Aside from Federal and State grants, the Tribe uses gaming profits to fund per capita payments, educational scholarships, GTC stipends and other initiatives. But we must be diligent. As Chairman, I will serve the people.

The record shows that I have voted for the projects that will benefit all of the people. In making decisions about investments, and fully aware that our track record has not provided the results we hoped for, I make sure that I get all the answers needed to protect the resources for all the people. Always for the people.

Oneida softball builds toward future

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

The game of softball has been present in the Oneida community for decades. Played by men and women of all ages for competition, recreation, or even a fun activity at a summer family reunion. But one aspect of softball has been missing from the community, an Oneida High School softball team. Well, Oneida High School Physical Education teacher Cecily Dawson has gotten the ball rolling on an Oneida girls softball team.

The formation of an Oneida softball team actually started last spring after a few high school students expressed some interest about playing the sport. Cecily Dawson recalls, "We started, but we just didn't have enough people, we had six. So the kids who played last year never got to play an actual game." Because most of the girls did not have a lot of experience playing softball, the team used this time to work on their skills beginning with the basics. However, a whole season of drills and practice with no games can get old in a hurry.

Now that another spring has rolled around, the team looks to take another step forward. "The goal being this year is to just get the program off the ground," Dawson says of the program's growth. This season the program has four games scheduled against a few junior varsity teams of smaller schools as well as a scheduled scrimmage against Menominee. The team will also travel to the UWGB campus to the watch the college's softball team in action.

Prior to the teams first game, five of the nine players had never played in a game, so naturally there are a few aspects of the game that require some getting used to. Despite the lack of experience the team showed significant improvements during the first game, which they lost 18-4 against Oconto Junior Varsity. The team now has 11 players on their roster and was lucky enough to gain three players who have pitching experience in Jessica House, Rachel Ninham, and Lakota Martinez.

ONHS Freshman Lakota Martinez delivers a pitch during the Thurderhawks' April 14th game against Oconto Junior Varsity.

The team played their second game on Thursday, April 14th, a rematch against Oconto junior varsity. Although they lost the game (17-4) improvements continued to be made. As the girls continue to improve, the games become more fun. For now Coach Dawson intends on keeping the game fun, "This year is just to teach them some skills, show them that it's fun. We keep it pretty light in order to keep it fun."

Learning to play the game of softball is a skill that will fit nicely into the Oneida community by not only providing a healthy springtime activity, but also continuing the tradition of talented Oneida softball players. Cecily Dawson observes, "Since I came to Oneida I was aware a lot of people played softball. A lot of women played softball. So these girls need to learn how to play because they're going to grow up and if they live here they're going to want to know how to play." If the program continues to grow there is no doubt that they will gain a fan following in the community. Oneida Nation High School Junior Shanna Jourdan hopes for just that, "It's fun, it's a learning experience. Next year hopefully they have it and I'll still be playing and we can help represent Oneida."

The team had a rough outing in their third game against Stockbridge in which they lost 22-1. The team also has a couple of scheduled games coming up: Monday, May 2 vs. Stockbridge JV at Stockbridge High 4 p.m.; Monday, May 9 vs. Menominee JV at Menominee High 4 p.m.

Green Bay Elite cheers for a cause

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Cherokee Greendeer stands silently at the front of the Green Bay Elite All-Stars practice facility. In front of her is a blur of summersaults, hand springs and back flips that give way to an impressive human pyramid all choreographed to a blaring mix of dance music. The music cuts out and the cheer routine comes to an abrupt end, all of which seemed flawless to a casual onlooker. But Cherokee has a list of tweaks for the cheering squad, "More extension with your arms and keep the movements crisp." This attention to detail is what makes the Green Bay Elite All-Stars one of the best and most decorated cheer programs in the area.

As another successful cheer season nears its end the Green Bay Elite All-Stars host an annual showcase at their facility, showcasing each cheer level's routine. "We travel around the country, a lot of times our competitions are in Indianapolis or Chicago, so it gives a chance for the families to come and see them. We also try to do a benefit with the event," explains Coach Cherokee Greendeer. This year the program chose to help Families with Cancer because a couple of families involved in the program are dealing with cancer; also a Hobart family whose home recently burned down. Cherokee states, "We just wanted to make sure they are taken care of with goods and other things."

With the end of the cheer season in sight the Green Bay Elite program looks forward to the final competition of the year, the Worlds Cheering Competition, which Cherokee describes as the "Olympics of cheerleading." The cheering levels range from one through five, with five being the highest level. For those at the fifth level of cheering the Worlds Competition offers up a bit of pressure to perform and carry on the success of the Green Bay Elite All-Stars.

However, the program does more than create award-oriented cheering squads; teams are also formed for those not interested in traveling or for those looking to learn the sport of cheerleading without the pressure of competition. The program teaches all levels from beginners that meet once a week, to intermediate, to advanced levels of cheering. Green Bay Elite offers participants the option of being highly involved in the sport or use it as a recreational activity.

Cherokee also hopes to recruit more Oneida Tribal citizens to the Green Bay Elite program, aside from the few that already participate. "We're very excited we have about six or seven (Oneida Tribal citizens) in our program. They range from our beginner team all the way to our advanced team. So we do as much as we can and the family support is huge. But we would love to have more."

Authors Collins and Alexie make list of most challenged books

By Hillel Italie
AP National Writer

NEW YORK, New York (AP) ~ Author Suzanne Collins didn't expect everyone to approve of "The Hunger Games."

"I've read in passing that people were concerned about the level of violence in the books," Collins said of her dystopian trilogy that's sold more than a million copies. "That's not unreasonable. They are violent. It's a war trilogy."

In what's become a virtual rite of passage for young adult sensations, a Collins novel has made its first appearance on the American Library Association's annual top 10 list of books most criticized in their communities. "The Hunger Games," the title work of Collins' series about young people forced to hunt and kill each other on live television, has been cited for violence and sexual content. In recent years, J.K. Rowling's "Harry Potter" books and Stephenie Meyer's vampire novels also have been on the association's list.

"Hunger Games" ranked No. 5 this year and was joined Monday by Meyer's "Twilight" (No. 10), which debuted on the list last year, and Sherman Alexie's "The Absolutely True Diary of a Part-Time Indian," winner in 2007 of the National Book Award for young people's literature. Criticisms of Alexie's novel include language, racism and sexual content.

"It almost makes me happy to hear books still have that kind of power," Alexie said. He laughed at the idea his work might be harmful, noting that he receives fan mail every day from readers thanking him for his story of a bright but bullied teen estranged from his fellow Indians on the Spokane Reservation and from the rich white kids at the high school he attends.

"And there's nothing in my book that even compares to what kids can find on the Internet," he said.

Alexie acknowledges one disappointment; his book only ranked No. 2, trailing "And Tango Makes Three," a picture story by Justin Richardson's and Peter Parnell about two male penguins who hatch a donated egg and raise the baby penguin. It's the fourth time in five years "Tango" has been No. 1, with reasons for criticism including the book's discussion of homosexuality.

The library association reported 348 challenges to books in 2010 and at least 53 outright bans, with other challenges and bans likely undocumented. The ALA defines a challenge as an effort "to remove or restrict materials from school curricula and library bookshelves."

Collins said "The Hunger Games" was recommended for ages 12 and up but said kids sensitive to the material might want to wait longer.

The author's daughter, meanwhile, may have been ready before age 12. She had already started reading Collins' previous series, "The Underland Chronicles," written for a slightly younger audience.

"I knew she would already have been through one war series with me and, of course, I'd be on hand if there was anything she needed to discuss," Collins said. "Emotional readiness and previous exposure to a similar type of subject matter - those seem like key elements to me in determining whether a young person can handle a book."

Barbara M. Jones, director of the ALA's Office for Intellectual Freedom, says some books on the list reflect current trends and changes in technology, including "Hunger Games," inspired in part by reality television; Aldous Huxley's classic "Brave New World," (No. 3), which anticipates antidepressants and artificial fertilization; and a work of nonfiction: "Nickel and Dimed" (No. 8), Barbara Ehrenreich's despairing account of trying to get by as a waitress, maid and Walmart worker.

"The closer books come to things that are really happening in a lot of lives, the more they become a reminder of what people don't like to think about," Jones said, noting that Ehrenreich's book "really hits hard what it's like to have a low paying job."

"Nickel and Dimed" has been criticized for language, drugs and for its political and religious viewpoints.

Also on the list:

"Crank," Ellen Hopkins (drugs, language, sexual content).

"Lush," Natasha Friend (language, sexual content).

"What My Mother Doesn't Know," Sonya Sones (sexism, sexual content).

"Revolutionary Voices," a collection of gay-themed stories edited by Amy Sonnie (homosexuality, sexual content).

Swastikas painted on church sign in Juneau County

WISCONSIN DELLS, Wis. (AP) ~ The Juneau County sheriff's office is investigating a hate crime against a Native American church.

Juneau County Sheriff Brent Oleson says members of the Native American Church in the Wisconsin Dells found a two swastikas spray-painted on their sign Wednesday morning.

Church member Janice Cloud tells WISC-TV that while the swastika marks the first time the church has filed a police report, there have been prior, unreported acts of vandalism, theft and racial intimidation.

Oleson said Friday that deputies found a liquor bottle at the scene but were unable to lift prints from it. He suspects two people were involved because a swastika was painted on each side of the sign in different colors.

Deputies have not made any arrests yet.

Tribal 'war game' gains fans at Okla. colleges

By Lenzy Krehbiel-Burton
Tulsa World

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) ! Northeastern State senior Kinsey Shade emerged from the dog pile and streaked toward a pole, heaving the ball at a wooden fish near its top.

The ball missed the fish by inches and another melee quickly ensued.

Cries filled the air on a recent Saturday at NSU in Tahlequah as a faded red ball the size of a child's fist flew through the air and landed with a thud, a swarm of sticks and hands trying to grab it.

As traditionally played by the southeastern tribes such as the Cherokee and Choctaw, stickball was once used to settle conflicts.

Now the "little war game" is bringing Native American students together at area colleges.

It's been a staple of area tribes' national holiday celebrations for years, but social stickball is seeing a resurgence at some Oklahoma colleges.

At NSU, six Native American student groups on campus host anywhere from one to three stickball games a semester, said Asa Lewis, the interim student coordinator for the school's Center for Tribal Studies.

Recently, the groups hosted a stickball exhibition for students visiting from Chicago's Northeastern Illinois State University. Another game is planned for April 13 as part of the school's annual Symposium on the American Indian.

"It's fellowship and part of our culture," said Shade, a citizen of the Cherokee Nation. "You just go out there and play."

After getting a crash course on the rules, many of NSU's guests from Chicago joined in. Within the small space, observers were forced to take cover more than once from errant throws.

"It looks like they're having a blast out there," said Veronica Rangel, one of the group's chaperones. "It's like watching lacrosse's more rugged cousin."

In Stillwater, Oklahoma State University's Alpha Pi Omega Sorority, a historically Native American sorority, hosts a monthly stickball game in front of Edmon Low Library.

"We wanted to foster a greater cultural awareness on campus," said political science senior and chapter president Tabatha Harris. "This game originated with the Five Civilized Tribes and this is an interactive way for us to introduce our culture to students who might not have grown up around it.

The chapter's monthly games usually attract about 20 players, including students from Oklahoma City University and the University of Oklahoma. The Stillwater stickball players, in turn, send teams to tournaments, including a recent one at OU.

"I got hit in the head with a stick and broke my thumb at that tournament," Harris said. "I've had (sorority) sisters hurt their knees, ankles and elbows in stickball games. Have to be tough to play."

Student Jake Roberts didn't pick the game up until college.

"It's all-inclusive," he said. "Yes, it's a part of my culture, but it's also got men, women and children all out there at once, playing and having fun."

Oneida Nation funds lawsuit over attorney fees

By Michael Virtanen
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) – The Oneida Indian Nation has backed a lawsuit against Madison County Attorney S. John Campanie and New York Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli, claiming the attorney improperly received more than $800,000 over 13 years from a law firm he helped pick to fight county legal battles with the Oneidas.

The suit in state Supreme Court in Albany said DiNapoli was contacted last October about the allegedly improper payments but failed to do anything about them. It was filed Monday on behalf of two county residents who work for the Oneidas, who own and operate the Turning Stone casino and resort in central New York.

It seeks restitution to taxpayers of money that it says improperly went from the state to the Nixon Peabody law firm to Campanie.

The county attorney is prohibited from getting extra money for doing county work to avoid having conflicts of interest, and the bills were for legal work beyond authorized land claim litigation, according to the lawsuit.

"The payments are in clear violation of state law," said lawyer George Carpinello, who was paid by the Oneidas to file the lawsuit.

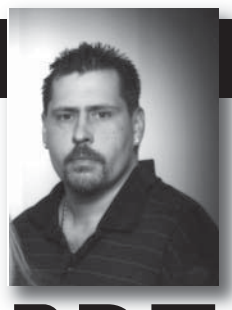
"Of the more than $12 million the state has paid to Nixon Peabody and Mr. Campanie, it appears that most of it has been work for which state law does not authorize payment, such as tax and trust litigation," Carpinello wrote to DiNapoli last fall.

The 19 Madison County supervisors issued a joint statement Tuesday calling the lawsuit "a desperate attempt" by the Oneidas to deny effective legal counsel to the county and state against the Indians' claims to more than 250,000 acres. Campanie's pay arrangements have been disclosed since 1998 in annual filings with the county Ethics Board, they said.

The legislators said their lawyers' shared victories included the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in 2005 rejecting Oneida claims of sovereignty on aboriginal land and a later ruling by a midlevel court against land title and damages claims that will likely be appealed.

The Oneidas have claimed the land was illegally purchased by the state in the 18th and 19th centuries and that the state underpaid them by about $500,000. With compound interest, that would be $500 million or more today.

"Accordingly, the defense effort continues," the county legislators wrote, and noted the tribe was pressing "an unprecedented land in trust application" and refusing the pay property taxes or to collect and remit sales taxes.



Campanie said their collective legal work helped save the state $250 million in the Cayuga land claim case and hundreds of millions of dollars in the Oneida case.

Nixon Peabody declined to comment.

DiNapoli spokesman Dennis Tompkins said Tuesday the comptroller has not yet been served with the court papers.

"We are aware of the issues that have been raised. We've been looking at this closely for several months," Tompkins said. "It's fairly complicated situation."

detoured on the opposite route.

Access for the Oneida Casino and Radisson Hotel will be off of South Point Road. Access for the airport will begin at the South Point Road/WIS 172 intersection and detoured by way of internal airport roads.

During stage 2, beginning in mid-July, the work constructing the WIS 54/172 is being done in two phases. WIS 172 is being closed initially from 1.5 miles west of County GE to WIS 54. County E will be closed from 0.1 miles south of WIS 172 to WIS 172. During this phase, westbound WIS 172 traffic will be routed from the WIS 172/County GE intersection northbound on County GE and westbound on WIS 54 to the intersection of WIS 54/172. Eastbound traffic will again follow the opposite route. This work is expected to last approximately six weeks and upon its completion, the WIS 172 and County E legs of the roundabout will open.

During the second phase or the last approximately two weeks of the project, WIS 54 will be closed from 0.25 miles west of Dexter Road to 0.25 miles east of County U. Eastbound WIS 54 traffic will be detoured from the WIS 54/County U intersection eastbound on County U, northbound on County E, eastbound on WIS 172, and northbound on County GE to the intersection of WIS 54/County GE. The westbound detour also follows the opposite route. The entire roundabout will open by mid-September.

Access will be maintained to all businesses and residences throughout the project.

DANIEL GUZMAN-KING
for VICE-CHAIRMAN

IS A VOTE FOR POSITIVE CHANGE

I see an incredible need for leadership, vision, and change. I want to be an integral part of working with the membership in setting the path for future of this great Nation. With that in mind I have decided to run for the position of Vice-Chairman of this great Nation. Together we can make a difference and I humbly ask for your vote and support.

I believe:

- Everything we do needs to improve our own sustainability
- We need to be both progressive and aggressive
- We need to take our nation to the next level strategically
- We need to effectively utilize all of our resources
- We are ready to create change that will catapult us to reaching our greatest potential.

Change, it is a necessity. The world we live in is changing at a faster rate than ever before. We must be able to adapt to our surroundings in order to not only survive but to thrive. I am constantly thinking of new ways to create positive meaningful change. We have done well for ourselves and we have the potential to accomplish much more.

Personally, I have numerous ideas on ways to increase our revenues; from insurance to retail to electricity. We need to take the monies that have been thrown at our feet for the last twenty years and multiply it. We need to take our largest expenses and turn them into revenues. We have programs, systems and departments that serve us and are mostly supported by us, but we need to serve others and bring in outside revenues.

I see our banks, pharmacies, smokeshops, and gas stations not only throughout the city of Green Bay, but in Milwaukee. This would not only create jobs and revenue, but give our Milwaukee family a place to work and enable them to contribute to the nation. Instead of asking the money to come to us, we need to go to the money.

I see us insuring ourselves and our employees, and then using those funds to build a hospital. Once again, keeping our money in our community, and strengthening our own economy.

I see us doing international business, bringing in foreign monies into our economy.

I see a debt free nation and see us as the ones lending out millions instead of borrowing it.

CHANGE – verb (used with object)
to make the form, nature, content, future course, etc., of (something) different from what it is or from what it would be if left alone: to change one's name; to change one's opinion; to change the course of history.

I see an Oneida high school in which our youth can take ownership of, take pride in, and call their own. I see a school that has provided our youth with the tools and knowledge necessary to succeed not only in the world today but in the world of tomorrow. After all, they are our future. Ten years from now our young people will be the new workforce and leaders of our nation. We need to continue to invest in our future.

I pray that as a nation we can come together, put our differences aside and truly create change for future generations. Our beliefs may differ, whether you are Longhouse, Methodist, Episcopalian, Assemblies of God, Native American Church, or Pentacostal we are still all one nation, we are all ONEIDA. Let us expand our thinking, and our boundaries. Let us plan and act strategically. Let us not only talk about it but be about it. It takes time and sacrifice to accomplish anything worthwhile. We need to do this for ourselves, and I believe we are ready.

Exploring the Three Sisters

Contributed photos
Left: A diagram illustrating ways to plant the Three Sisters. Circles = Corn, Squares = Beans, and Triangles = Squash

What are the Three Sisters?

The three sisters refers to corn, beans, and squash. These three vegetables were planted together and grew very well with one another. We were dependent on our three sisters crops for survival. Women planted and harvested hundreds of acres of our three sisters crops in our original territory, which is now the state of New York. Today we continue to carry on our tradition of planting the three sisters together.

Corn is the oldest sister. She stands tall in the center.

Squash is the next sister. She grows over the mound, protecting her sisters from weeds and shades the soil from the sun with her leaves, keeping it cool and moist.

Beans are the third sister. She climbs through squash and then up corn to bind all together as she reaches for the sun. Beans help keep the soil fertile by converting the sun's energy into nitrogen filled nodules that grow in its roots. As beans grow they use the stored nitrogen as food.

How to Plant the Three Sisters

Plant the corn in late May. It is best if the ground has warmed and is no longer cold and wet.

Soak corn seeds for several hours, but not more than eight hours before planting.

Prepare low hills that are 3-4 feet apart within and between rows. Place 5-7 corn seeds evenly spaced to a depth of 1-1 ½ inches. Cover with soil.

According to Iroquois tradition, corn seeds should be planted with kind thoughts three days before the full moon.

After young corn plants come up, begin removing weeds. As you are weeding, gently mound, or hill, the soil around the young plants.

When the corn plants are about 6 inches high, pole beans and pumpkins can be planted around the corn plants.

Plant 4-5 bean seeds in each hill. Plant 4-5 pumpkin seeds in every seventh hill, placing them around the young corn plants.

Traditional planting method: Corn and beans are planted together. Pumpkin is planted in every seventh hill. The pumpkin seeds can be planted alone, or with the corn and beans in the seventh hill.

Winter goes out like a lion

Northeast Wisconsin received its second snow storm of the spring season. The area was blanketed with a total of 9.5 inches of slushy snow. This storm raised the season's total snowfall to around 91 inches, making this winter the snowiest since 1889-90 and the third snowiest in recorded history. The storm resullted in numerous evening cancellations as well as a two-hour delay for most area schools.

Recycling is Still the Law!

With all the media surrounding the state's pending budget bill there has been confusion surrounding recycling. Do we still recycle in Oneida? Will there still be recycle collection in Oneida?

The answer to both of these questions is YES. Recycling is still the law and Oneida will not be discontinuing service!

Budget Language

The proposed budget would:

- Eliminate the requirement that a municipality or county operate a recycling program
- Eliminate the financial assistance for local governmental recycling programs
- Convert the recycling fund to the economic development fund

This means your local municipality would no longer be mandated to operate a recycling program, be it curbside collection or drop-off. Also, the funding that participating local governments received (responsible unit grant) to assist in the operation of the recycling program, will no longer be available.

Recycling Fund

The recycling fund is a segregated fund created specifically to help fund the responsible unit grants. It is generated by a $7 "recycling fee" assessed on each ton of all solid waste that is disposed of in the State of Wisconsin. When this law passed, the state made a promise to communities that cost sharing would be returned to operate local recycle programs. Under the proposed budget the fee would still be assessed, but the money would not go towards recycling programs as it was intended to.

How is Oneida Affected?

The Oneida Tribe does receive a responsible unit grant from the Department of Natural Resources to run its recycle program. In past years the grant was approximately $38,000 and was used to fund the solid waste and recycle program. Our solid waste and recycle collection is self-funded through the collection fee. This means the recycle collection will continue. What we will be losing is a number of education opportunities for tribal members and employees and a reduced capacity for program expansion.

What Can You Do?

KEEP RECYCLING! Do not stop recycling, Oneida will not suspend recycle collection. Recycle collection will continue to be picked up weekly, even if the State budget does get passed with the proposed elimination of the recycling fund. You can also contact your local and state legislators about the proposed legislation.

If you have questions about this or if you want to know who and how to contact your local and/or state legislators, call or email Amy Spears at (920) 869-4549 or aspears@oneidanation.org

Household Clean Sweep Returns

By Amy Spears

Mark your calendars! Oneida Housing Authority and Environmental, Health and Safety Division are teaming up to bring back the Household Clean Sweep. This event, much like the previous clean sweep last September, will collect:

- Household hazardous waste
- Tires (4 per household, rimless)
- Appliances and scrap metal
- Electronic waste
- Fluorescent lights, batteries, and mercury thermometers

New to the Household Clean Sweep:

- Goodwill Donations
- Overflow or oversize garbage (carpet, furniture, non-recyclable plastics, etc.)
- Recyclables (paper, #1 and #2 plastic, glass, cardboard, cans)

This event will also feature a Green Cleaning Bag giveaway (while supplies last) and a mercury thermometer exchange for a digital.

We will be offering two Household Clean Sweeps in 2011, the first will take place on Saturday May 14th and the second on Saturday August 27th.

Both will be held at:

Housing Authority Warehouse
N6824 Seminary Rd
Hours: 8 am-Noon

This joint venture will take the place of the Oneida Housing Authorities semi-annual clean-up, so please plan accordingly. Please contact Amy Spears 869-4549 or aspears@oneidanation.org with any questions.

Conservation

Now Has Weekend Hours

Conservation department has announced they will now be open on the third Saturday of every month from 8 am to Noon. They will have all office services available including purchasing sportsman (hunting and fishing) licenses, hunting permits, and they will be open for yard waste drop-off and pick-up. Please stop by the Conservation Office during their new weekend hours! Conservation is located at: N8047 County Rd. U, for information call (920) 869-1450.

Candidates advised to finish GED this year

College of Menominee Nation (CMN) and The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) invite the community to the CMN campuses to meet poet Kimberly Blaeser, an enrolled member of the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe. Blaeser will be discussing her book, "Absentee Indians and Other Poems", which the CMN campuses have been reading and discussing throughout this semester.

Blaeser's collection, "Absentee Indians and Other Poems", evokes personal yet universal experiences of the places that Native Americans call home, their family and national histories, and the emotional forces that help forge Native American identities. These are poems of exile, loss, and the celebration of that which remains. Anchored in the physical landscape, Blaeser's poetry finds the sacred in those ordinary actions that bind a community together. As Blaeser turns to the mysterious passage from sleeping to wakefulness, or from nature to spirit, she reveals not merely the movement from one age or place to another, but the movement from experience to vision.

Blaeser will be speaking at CMN's Green Bay campus' commons on Tuesday, April 26th and at CMN's Keshena campus' Culture Building on Wednesday, April 27th. Both events are free, start at 6:30 PM, and are preceded by a light meal. Blaeser's presentation will include readings from the text, a question and answer session, and a book signing.

Blaeser will be visiting as the final speaker in CMN's Literary Discussion Series, which started in the fall of 2010. The Series is funded by an NEH Grant and has the goal of uniting the college and community through American Indian literature and poetry. The central theme of the Discussion Series is to use decorated texts to help initiate discussions about Indigenous people's identity in contemporary American society.

For further information contact Ryan Winn, CMN's Humanities Department Chair at 715-799-6226, extension 3070, or at rwinn@menminee.edu.

College of Menominee Nation is an accredited college serving students from campuses in Keshena and Green Bay. CMN awards associate degrees in a number of academic disciplines and professional areas, and a baccalaureate degree in early childhood/elementary education, as well as select technical and trades diplomas and certificates.

Listening and Learning session scheduled Apr. 26

The U.S. Department of Education will be holding several Listening and Learning sessions in urban Indian communities in Spring 2011. The next urban Indian Listening and Learning session with Indian community and tribal leaders and Native student-serving representatives will be held on Tuesday, April 26, 2011, at the Radisson Hotel & Conference Center in Green Bay, WI, from 9:00 am MST to 4:00 pm MST.

Additional Listening and Learning sessions will be held in Los Angeles, CA, and Stockton, CA. Dates and exact locations are TBD.

These Listening and Learning sessions in urban Indian communities are a follow-up to a series of 2010 tribal leader consultations that were conducted in Anchorage, AK; Espanola, NM; Shawnee, OK; Pine Ridge, SD; Window Rock, AZ; and Puyallup, WA.

The session will provide you with an opportunity to voice your thoughts and engage in dialogue with senior officials from the Department. The Department is committed to moving forward in Indian education and anticipates that interactions among tribal and community leaders, Indian education stakeholders, and the Department will create a more effective education policy.

Lacrosse Practice Begins

By Jason Skenadore
Thunderhawk Times

On Monday, April 11, we started lacrosse practice down by the athletic field. Hopefully we will have enough players down there to make a team.

Our first game is Tuesday, April 26 against Bay Port at Bay Port at 5 p.m.

So far, we have one other match set up: At De Pere at 4:30 p.m. on Tuesday, May 3. Then, on Saturday, May 14, we are playing in the Wausau Prowl Invitational Tournament.

Right now, we are focused on that first game. Then we will worry about the rest.

Coach Sonny Hill returns to coach us "for the tenth year, maybe more."

About this year's team, Sonny said, "We should win every game."

As far as how good this year's team will be, Eddie Powless said, "We're ready for anything—no matter what!"

Key players this year will be Jason Skenadore and the other players of the Oneida Nation team.

ONHS History Team on a Roll

By Laura Studee
ONHS Social Studies Teacher

On Saturday, April 9, ONHS students Kendrick Powless, Kanani Nunies, and Noelle Metoxen entered their ten-minute documentary entitled "A Government of Our Own" in the National History Day Regional Competition at UW - Green Bay.

The documentary describes the impact that the Indian Reorganization Act had and still has on the Oneida Community in Wisconsin.

They have been working diligently on this documentary since January and have made several trips to Cultural Heritage receiving help from Oneida Community members.

I am very excited to announce that out of fifteen documentaries entered by many surrounding community schools - their documentary was chosen to compete at the state competition in Madison. Only three documentaries received this special honor.

The students each received medals and look forward to the competition on May 7 with much enthusiasm.

My Scoop

Rumors Say What?

By Name Withheld
Thunderhawk Times

As you probably know...high school is all about rumors.

It's pretty much the same everywhere you go.

But, sometimes, people have to tone it down a notch.

Yeah I have to admit, I too have rumors going around about me. And I wish people could just stop it.

Rumors can be dangerous. Some rumors are known to even lead people to death.

Still, some people don't know how to stop.

And I think if someone puts them in there place, then they'd know what it feels like. There was something on the news a while ago about some teens who committed suicide because of rumors and because of bullying.

I think someone needs to put a stop to it.

Thank you and goodbye.

LEADERSHIP

Over the years I've been blessed with knowing Indian leaders whom I feel were throwbacks to our history as Indian people. Our past leaders, many now gone, never considered their personal interests and wealth above the well-being of the people. These were leaders the people could trust and depend on. They made decisions that served the elderly, the ill, and the children who came first and above all else.

Today, leadership responsibilities have increased. Oneidas are in need of opportunities for fair employment at fair wages, educational opportunities, affordable housing and quality health care. Our veterans deserve the continued benefits and recognition they earned while in the service of our country.

Ed Delgado

GENERAL TRIBAL COUNCIL

As the Chairman and as the record shows, I will continue to support the GTC. Your work as Tribal members participating in your governmental decision making has allowed the Oneida Tribe to practice a unique form of democracy very few people in the world are able to participate in.

As Chairman, I will keep the GTC meetings orderly and get the work of the people accomplished.

OUR RESOURCES

As Oneidas, we participate in Indian gaming. Aside from Federal and State grants, the Tribe uses gaming profits to fund per capita payments, educational scholarships, GTC stipends and other initiatives. But we must be diligent. As Chairman, I will serve the people.

The record shows that I have voted for the projects that will benefit all of the people. In making decisions about investments, and fully aware that our track record has not provided the results we hoped for, I make sure that I get all the answers needed to protect the resources for all the people. Always for the people.

Ed Delgado

Ron "Tehassi" Hill

Shekoli,

Tehassi Tase niyukyats. My name is Tehassi Tase. I am running for chairman of our Oneida Nation of Wisconsin.

My goal is to research way to increase our Nations revenues. I believe in find solutions to problems, rather waiting in fear for things to collapse.

A budget can only be cut so much before it becomes a detriment to the people of our Nation.

I have sat through many budget meetings this past term and firmly believe in working cooperatively with our departments and divisions to identify our best use of resources for the people of our Nation.

Tehassi Hill

My door is always open to hear what our community has to say, and I enjoy hearing ideas that are brought by our community. If an idea proves feasible and profitable I will do what I can to move it forward, but always in the best interest of the people.

I will work hard to develop strategies to curtail spending and increase revenue.

I am thankful for the success of our current enterprises, and I continually support their progress and enhancement.

With a hard working business committee and staff, I believe we can find solutions to overcome the projected deficit.

Yawáko for your consideration in upcoming primary.

Tehassi Hill

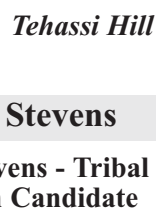
Bernie Stevens - Tribal Chairman Candidate

Experience:

Education & Training:



- Wisconsin Certified Social Worker
- Trained Mediator
- NCO Leadership Training
- Nicolet College – Psychology

Committees:

- Oneida Police Commission – President: 2009 through present
- Wisconsin Inter Tribal Re-entry Committee
- Inter Tribal Residential Treatment Center Committee
- Tribal Justice Committee: 2005 through 2009

As your Tribal Chairman, I will approach a projected deficit in the 2012 budget by demanding we stop all wasteful spending, including the ones that no one wants to talk about.

We also have to ensure that our profit-generating entities have the resources to continue making profit, and the supporting services are in place, but operations need to be streamlined and technology is used to its full extent.

Bernie Stevens

However, I will rally to ensure we continue to provide services for our most vulnerable Tribal members – Elders, youth, single parents, jobless, homeless, those with medical needs and emotional needs.

And finally, I will ask General Tribal Council to adopt rules that govern how we spend the money we have so that we continue to spend our money appropriately,

Bernie Stevens

Facing a Budget Deficit Head On

All across America, budget deficits have become a hot topic of discussion. Nearly every state in the land is grappling with difficult choices of what to cut in an effort to stop the bleeding. As a citizen of this land and a seasoned professional, I believe any government would do well to take a few lessons from business, which is an area I've excelled in.

Should our Great Oneida Nation be faced with a financial crisis, my approach would be to implement best practices that successful organizations use every day. Unlike the government, my plan would not concentrate on cost-cutting and eliminating the services our people need (like quality healthcare), but it would start with a thorough assessment and a thoughtful evaluation to get the Tribe back on track.

Thomas E. Wilbur

What would that look like for Oneida? For starters, we'd assess key revenue generators to ensure we're doing the right things, including having the right decision makers at the table. We would then look at areas where duplication of services may exist to streamline, not cut. I have exciting new business and job creation ideas that would allow us to employ more of our own Oneida people. All new business dealings would be carefully reviewed to ensure they are adding value and make sense for the Tribe. The Hobart situation, which threatens our Oneida way, would be dealt with effectively and swiftly with me as Chairman.

In a recent survey, the top three areas of concern were employment, finances and healthcare. My plan is to improve these areas, but that can only happen with the right leadership, which is why I am running for Tribal Chairman. Ultimately, my goal is build a sound leadership team who will work together to make the Oneida Nation stronger.

Thomas E. Wilbur

Dennis "DJ" Danforth Jr.

Shekoli Swakeku,

My Name is Dennis "DJ" Danforth Jr. I have worked for the OBC as an intern in 2005 and 2009. I work with the Native Youth Sexual Health Network as a community educator working with youth on ending violence against women using our traditional teachings as my curriculum. And with my current position at the Oneida Library, I am able to work with youth, adults, and elderly to encourage reading, education and healthy life style. With the economy in its continuing downfall we are fighting to make sure that our people are able to get the basic human needs to survive. This has lead to the question "What would you do about a projected budget deficit in 2012?" It is my belief is that if we work together as a committee to find areas where we can use resources without affecting our most needed services to our people, we can over come this deficit and continue to move forward to make sure our people today and the next seven generations are provided for. We will have to look at our budget and with carful consideration will be best for the people.

Dennis "DJ" Danforth Jr.

Daniel Guzman-King

What I would do about a projected deficit in 2012

October 1, 2011 just six months from now the 2012 budget starts. Foremost I would advocate that the allocations in the proposed budget align with the Nations vision and priorities. I would aggressively promote an effort to focus our priorities, goals, objectives and funding allocations on our essential needs and revenue generating areas.

My primary focus is the creation of a strategic plan that is based on a true analysis of our organization and government. Once the strategic plan is developed then the budget funds can be allocated specific to the plan. From the plan we can create a strong system of accountability. If we are strategic in our thinking, planning, and allocation of funds we then become a more powerful and effective force.

Daniel Guzman-King

I encourage us to narrow our objectives and priorities, so that frivolous, thoughtless, irresponsible, non-essential, unbudgeted spending can be eliminated. There are a lot of good things that we give ourselves but we need to make a clear separation of what we want and what we truly need. Currently our funds are spread too far and too thin, with what appears to be no common goal. There needs to be a refocusing of our resources.

We need to be creative in our thinking and be willing to make transformational change on how we operate and do our business. We need to look at viable options such as: zero based budgeting; creating more partnerships with others whether they be businesses, municipalities, or governments; furloughs for management and/or elected officials and streamlining our processes. With input from our membership and employees the list of solutions and recommendations will be plentiful. Tough decisions will need to be made in the coming years, and I am ready for that challenge.

Daniel Guzman-King

Greg Matson

We cannot resolve these issues with a 300-word plan, but here's some thoughts:

Request a line item budget from all departments with a separation of operational cost vs. request for funding to upgrade. Gather all information to get true assessment of deficit. What we have now is only a projection.

Discuss the idea of a zero based budget (everyone starts at $0.00 and justifies their request for funding).

As in any state of emergency we need to cut spending that is not pertinent to our immediate needs, such as certain travel, conferences or training without program justification, social gatherings outside our own community. This also allows all staff to attend or be available.

Greg Matson

Explore the idea of self funded unemployment benefits. We have paid in millions of dollars and only used on a few occasions.

Separation of community and corporation allows the community to thrive and the corporation to be profitable.

"Farm to Table" program for our daily foods is critical to reducing health cost the impacts the budget.

An example of diversification to me is to approach established businesses that produce products that we use on a continual basis. With this we can create apprenticeships that will learn the operations of a successful business. We can then increase product output and begin distribution to other consumers. We need to understand that there is no profit in being a consumer but there are huge profits in being suppliers. This also keeps our money here.

In closing I will say this. "All problems, whether financial or social have three requirements to fix. They need to be assessed, they need to be treated with a solution, and they need to be prevented in the future. Accountability." We need to stop trying to out think our common sense.

Greg Matson

The Oneida Tribe provides many services utilizing the revenues generated from gaming and according to IGRA, this is exactly what we are supposed to be doing - maintaining the government and providing services to the Membership.

That will remain my priority as I work with the Committee to present a balanced budget. It will be a tremendous challenge because we no longer have reserves to tap for expenditures and we are fully utilizing all revenues generated through Gaming and Enterprises. Expenses continue to increase for many reasons, but inflation is the one reason that affects the Tribe and each one of us.

Until new revenue is generated to help support the organization, we must look at cutting back in areas that provide the least negative impact on the Membership. A large operation contains volumes in the detail. I will have to take an extremely focused approach to once again becoming thoroughly familiar with Tribal operations details.

Kathy Hughes

Oneida is a labor intensive organization. It's difficult when cutbacks need to occur and the only place left to cut is in personnel. There has been work on lowering the labor costs through the severance package. This is a package that allows an employee to request an early retirement and if considered, the supervisor must also look at eliminating that job or another one of comparable status. The Tribe has managed to marginally lower its total employment through this package. Attrition is another means of accomplishing this same task.

I am extremely sensitive to the desire to not initiate any layoffs. But if we cut everything else that can possibly be cut, this may be the only step left to us. However, I believe there are areas of service that can be eliminated without creating too great a disruption and still maintain our workforce.

What would you do about a projected budget deficit in 2012?

We need to set spending priorities and move forward with "financial reform. " This would include disciplined overall fiscal responsibilities. We will need to review and understand the "how", "why", and the "benefits" of what we approve that is being is requested and forecasting this budget .

Arlene Danforth

We need true representation for "the people" - not politicians who work for special political gamesmanship.

Straight forward, plain language summaries of ALL expenditures that meet our spending priorities and financial reform.

We need to protect ALL our Tribal assets and one of the most important asset of all, the employees

- Spending priorities;
- Financial reform;
- Fiscal Responsibility;
- True and honest representation;
- Protect tribal assets;
- Collectively address the deficit

Tribal Secretary candidate

The key is to focus on producing revenue and rethinking what we spend money on. The status quo has to change. For the past two budget cycles, the Tribe's motto has been cost containment. I think the key is to invest in what we do best: revitalize our gaming enterprise and build places around that enterprise for small business development. For spending, we need to reexamine the services we now provide, determine what services Oneida must provide all by itself, and find partners to work with and collaborate with to provide other services. Our elders, our youth and our most vulnerable must be our priorities as we redefine the kind of social safety net we can provide. There is a 15-year vision that was presented to the Tribe late last year to revitalize our casino and hospitality mainstays, and that's where we need to start. Each year, in 2009, 2010 and now 2011, we worked to cut discretionary spending, wasteful spending, and new spending so that we did not have to cut jobs, per capita payments or our higher education scholarship. The problem is that our total employment spending is a little more than 40 percent of our total spending this year. And our annual per capita payout runs about $19 million each year. We most likely will continue in 2012 with more cost containment. But 2012 must be the year that a new vision for Oneida is produced.

My experience is primarily in the hospitality industry as President of the Oneida Airport Hotel Corporation. I have served on the Oneida Commerce Committee and Joint Marketing Committee. I have a great deal of other experience in businesses, both within the tribe and as an individual entrepreneur. Perhaps most notably, I have been successful as project manager of two major expansions of the Radisson totaling $38.8 million.

Pat Lassila

As we address the Tribal deficit projected for 2012 we must focus on increasing revenues and streamline our government programs with efficiency. I support the steps taken by the BC and management to lower the operational costs and I will focus on continuing those efforts while urging our businesses to become more profitable.

We must take advantage of technology available within our tribal organization to market broader and better. There is an old saying, "You got to spend money to make money". I believe we need to strengthen our marketing efforts and tap into new markets while keeping our solid and loyal customers happy too. I support expansion of our gaming property to keep up with our competition. Becoming a resort destination would allow us to capitalize on our location and our partnership with our local businesses. The top two attractions in this area is the Oneida Casino and the Packers, we need to market that partnership to fill our businesses with customers. Finally, I've heard a lot of ideas from our knowledgeable and experienced members who believe they can make a difference by changing how we do business. I hope to create a better process for communication with our membership to improve the dialogue that might help us become more efficient and effective by listening to solid ideas and common sense. Thank you for this opportunity.

Respectfully,

A significant part of solving any budget deficit is getting to the root of the problem. We are at a critical point in which the dam is breaking and band-aid fixes are not going to carry us through another fiscal year. The changes needed cannot be those of any one person alone so we must all work together. Any viable solutions need to have an immediate impact while providing long-term sustainability. Some initial ideas include:

Cathy Bachhuber

- Considering more employee options such as allowing employees flexibility to voluntarily work part-time or decrease their hours. This would offer immediate savings by lowering wage costs per hour while decreasing associated personnel costs and resource expenses.
- Requesting GTC to review the GTC Stipend Policy for possible alternatives to the $100 payment, even if on a trial basis. Example: an Oneida gift card would stimulate Oneida's economy.
- Consolidating as many departments as possible into central locations to share resources, reduce travel and offsite meetings.
- Reviewing construction and capital expenditure projects to assess if need is absolutely immediate.
- Ensuring Tribal enterprises are placed in prime storefronts that we own.
- Leases should be aggressively pursued for all vacant Tribal commercial properties.
- In all departments, we need to continue to encourage technologies which conserve resources, reduce our carbon footprint, and save money.
- Clearly and regularly communicating the status of cost containment measures.

There are more cost saving measures that can be looked at. Difficult decisions and unpopular choices will undoubtedly have to be made in order to bring the budget into line with projected revenues. As a councilwoman I would do my due diligence to thoroughly review all budgets and actively participate in working towards a solution. Please see my paid ad for my education and experience

The most important and critical aspects of decision making and maintaining financial stability for our tribe is remembering that every decision made impacts every single Oneida Tribal Member that is here today and those to come (our future). The only way to tackle a $47 Million Dollar deficit is through hard work, dedication, and teamwork with all parties, at all levels. I will use my extensive knowledge of our tribal operations (both profit and non-profit entities) and our laws to conduct a thorough analysis of factual historical data to determine how we got to this point and what we need to do to address/eliminate the problems. I will make decisions based upon the facts, NOT subjective criteria (i.e. personalities, family ties, and associations). I will disclose to the membership any action or decision that promotes and/or affords personal gain to any person, group, entity, business, etc. I understand contracts and the laws that governs them, therefore, I will hold the General Manager, Gaming General Manager and those they supervise responsible and accountable for both their actions and/or their inactions.

I recognize and support the need to address the needs of our people first. I will not support siphoning our money to the outside. The GTC is the supreme governing body and I support the GTC being fully informed and afforded the opportunity to make decisions regarding investments in land, buildings, businesses, etc. I support full disclosures and transparency. I will communicate with, inform, and include the GTC in the decision making processes.

While other Tribes and companies have felt the wrath of the recessed economy, Oneida has been able to reasonably balance our labor and service expenses. However, moving forward to Fiscal Year 2012, we must again find creative ways to control expenses and labor costs, while providing the services that our membership relies upon such as access to quality health programs, education and housing.

Melinda Danforth

The Tribe budgets one year at a time and every year the General Tribal Council must adopt the budget, yet, has limited opportunity to ask questions and know exactly how the dollars will be spent by every department. To change that impediment, I am promoting the concept of zero-based budgeting.

The process normally includes budgets starting at zero dollars and then developed based upon its overall departmental goals, and it requires justification of all expenditures. One advantage to using this type of technique should be an increase the efficient allocation of resources based on the needs of its customers, whom in our case are primarily tribal and community members. This process can also serve as a change agent as it can provide a means for departments to be transparent in their spending.

A new concept as this will require a shift in our current paradigm which may not be easy; however, is one approach to continue providing quality services while balancing our limited resources. I expect each of us will ask how this will get done and provide reasonable suggestions through our law-making process. Currently, a proposed a Budget Management Act is being shape and I expect it to include future budgeting processes for the Tribe. I have already asked due diligence begin on zero based budgeting and will look to the organization and community to help bring positive change.

Clearly we need to think about spending, sadly, we are a long way from being financially secure. Economic pressures are all around us and federal spending on reservations is dwindling.

One thing we have to do is decide where spending cuts can occur. There are areas where wasteful spending resides, we all know it. The elimination of waste and the enhancement of needed spending elsewhere must occur. Sometimes a nation must sacrifice to enhance the lives of thousands of their people.

Vince DelaRosa

I also support seeing budget reviews done online, in real time, through secure network connections. The idea is to allow the Oneida people to monitor, comment and make suggestions on spending cuts and enhancements during the entire budget process.

In order to address projected future deficits, zero based budgeting is something we need to consider. Zero based budgeting, when done right, helps tighten up spending.

I also think we need to look at our revenue streams to see if we can maximize revenues.

Lastly, I think we need to go through our organization and chart out short-and-long range plans around what we want to do as a tribe. Goal setting is good, but forecasting and projecting out future projects and spending needs is necessary. We need to craft an economic model that we can live within.

Thanks for reading my article. Join me on my website (Oneida1.com) for more information about my run for office. Voting occurs May 7th and July 16th.

What would I do about a projected budget deficit in 2012?

Elaine Reed-Doxtator

1. Well, to be honest, instead of taking any services or programs from the membership, front-line employees, Elders, etc.,(which has been happening for years), I would start with reform. By that, I would look at comparative manager/director/executive wages, to reasonable wage amounts, according to the REAL world, and NOT according to federal/state guidelines. NOBODY should be making over $100,000 per year, unless they are a physician.

2. Bring forward, ALL huge purchase requests, to the GTC for approval.

3. I am NOT planning for 2012, alone. My long term goal, is to bring the annual budget down to $100 million annually, instead of the current $400 million we spend annually. Our Tribal members need to be taken care of...with more money available to service the people, there will be less to spend on managing the Tribe. Let's get back to basics, for OUR people.

Thank you for your time, General Tribal Council.

Thomas Espinosa

I, Thomas Espinosa, am honored to have remitted petition for candidacy of Councilmember, of the Oneida Nation. I have long aspired to hold office for the "People of the Standing Stone". It has always been my true efficacy to become a public servant, thus my way to pay tribute to the nation and its people!

I have little experience in the political arena, however, I have acquired a wealth of knowledge of our sovereign rights, afforded to us by the federal government. I have kept abreast to issues that face our nation, such as the bio-mass project, as proposed by the Seventh Generations Corporations, as well as the ambiguity that presides between us and several municipalities such as the Village of Hobart. I have always surmised to eradicate some of these encumbrances, would be to negotiate; this can only be sought through prudence, and tact. This is the paramount of any government to government relations.

Thomas Espinosa

As for fiscal year 2012, we can strengthen our economy through job creation, training, diversifying our assets, for creation of these jobs. One enterprise I envision, with prospects for growth, would be our retail enterprise. Perhaps we could hire and train our members through apprenticeships such as contractors/sub-contractors, towards the erection of a shopping center somewhere within the parameters of the reservation. This would allow the revenue to be regenerated directly into our economy, rather than towards other municipalities, also, would end our sole dependence on gaming revenues. What most fail to realize, is that all business ventures come with risk however the benefits usually supersede the losses.

Conclusively, through cohesive efforts as a people of the great nation we can all "ascend to new plateaus"!

Thank you,
Thomas Espinosa

'What will you do about a projected budget deficit for 2012?" Oneida of the best ways to improve our bottom line and reduce the budget deficit is to improve the moral of our front line employees. We depend largely on gaming revenues to support hundreds of families. Our major concern should be to improve our employee's moral, which will carry over into an improvement in the performance of their jobs, resulting in our customer's continuous patronage.

David Jordan

We need to find ways such as eliminating Finders Fees, this should be a position responsibility. Reducing interest on Tribal debt, restrictions on out of state travel utilizing the saving to support raises to deserving employees. Each department should be reviewed and if feasible, reduced to a weekly schedule of four ten hour work days or 32 hour work weeks. Not just the employees at the casino's.

Yes, these are hard choices to make, but the reality is that we have to have the guts to go after the Budget Deficit. However, we nee to eliminate the deficit slowly and steadily and not damage the tribe's economy beyond repair. It has come from both the revenue and expense sides to avoid a financial disaster that will make the great depression look like good times.

We need fresh ideas, people of courage who are not afraid of offending family or friends, but are there for all members. I look for your support to find a solution.

"What would you do about a projected budget deficit in 2012?"

My name is Gary L. Jordan, experience as previous Councilman, Vice Chairman, and Acting Tribal Chairman. In the event of a projected budget deficit the Treasurer, as the "Trustee of Tribal Funds" under the Oneida Constitution, would identify the shortfall and recommend cuts. The OBC would review the recommended cuts in consideration of the mission, vision, and Nation priorities without cutting critical services to the GTC programs. Freezing infrastructure projects that are not critical to GTC programs & services would save us millions. Conversely, taking away coffee, education, training, vacation pay, personal days and other extrinsic rewards doesn't improve productivity or morale. Some Tribes experienced a similar event two years ago and "everyone" was required to pitch. They went to a 32 hour work week for the "summer months" without anyone losing other benefits. Voluntary layoffs are another option. It becomes a personal choice that will save on overhead expenses. My main focus, instead of cutting back, would be to expand enterprise and economic development opportunities that are specialized and easily transferable into other geographical areas. For example there are more strategic locations for additional gambling facilities and One Stops on or near the Reservation. Presently, we have untapped traffic patterns that could bring in additional revenue-in the millions per year. Our experts in the retail division and gaming could easily duplicate their operations in other market areas, "if given the opportunity". We have our own experts; we don't need non-Oneida consultants from far away places telling us how to expand in our historic market. Feasibility studies, business plans, sound financial projections, and PROUD ONEIDA WORKERS will bring in more money. I have trust and faith in our people!

I believe that General Tribal Council (G.T.C.) has a right to know where all our money is being spent. I believe G.T.C. has a right to know where all our money is coming from. I believe that all people should be treated fairly, respectfully and with honesty.

When G.T.C. asks, "Where's the money?" I will do my best to get the answers out in a format that is easy to read and understand.

Cathy Metoxen

When G.T.C. is I session, if I am elected, I will do my best to ensure all those who speak up will be treated fairly.

When General Tribal Council members have come to me to ask those hard questions, and make those hard statements, I spoke for and stood up for them. I have spoken up and stood up for those who couldn't. I have spoken up and stood up for those who were afraid to standup.

When General Tribal Council members want to know about programs, committees, commissions, and boards, I will do my best to get them answers.

If I'm elected for Business Committee Council, I will continue to speak up and stand up for General Tribal Council members with fairness, respectfulness, and honesty.

In order to review the tribal deficit for 2012, one would need to be provided with a detailed report of the deficit, in order to make any recommendation(s) to G.T.C. on what direction to take for resolution of the deficit.

Paul Ninham

Greetings Oneida Nation Tribal Members,

My name is Paul Ninham, I am running for a Council Member position for the Oneida Business Committee during the upcoming Primaries for the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin. I have previously served as Councilman for the Oneida Tribe for (9) years (1999-2008). I would like to start out by thanking the Kalihwisaks for providing a forum for all candidates to provide information to our Members regarding the budget.

Paul Ninham

If elected, I would respectfully request the new Chairperson assemble the new Business Committee Members, upon ratification of the election results and prior to the Oath of Office, to meet and greet each other. At this gathering, I propose the newly elected Oneida Business Committee Members immediately revisit the Oneida Tribe's National Priorities (this will drive the budget). I look at the Tribe's budget in a simplistic manner in that I compare it to a family's personal finances. Most families will have a revenue source and expenditures. If a family is living outside of their means and spending more than what is generated by the revenue source, the family will simply be over budget. This can be compared to the Tribe in many instances. I will propose at this point that the Tribe's businesses, corporations and profit entities be given the tools that are essential to increase revenues.

I would also propose and challenge the new Business Committee Members to come to the table with (1) new economic venture idea. At this time, (9) proposals can be referred to management to perform due diligence on each of the projects. I believe by newly elected Committee Members offering economic development proposals, support can be garnered not only from the Business Committee and management, but from the Tribal Membership as well.

What would you do about a projected budget deficit in 2012?

As the budget deficient grows, we as the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin are going to make hard cuts in areas other than gaming. As in programs. The need to consolidated in all areas to stop the spending outside the tribe. As example the Green Bay Packers, the outside travel. As a councilperson, my stand is pro-Oneida; take care of our own backyard first. While maintaining the important issues. Our children, they are the future. The elderly, the are wisdom. In the end, my stand, is protected Oneida. Be pro-Oneida.

Dear General Tribal Council:

My name is Fern Orie. I have worked for the Oneida Tribe for 15 years and for other native communities for 6 years. I have served as the Chairwoman for the Oneida Personnel Commission for over 3 years. I have worked in Indian Gaming for 10 years and the Native American housing industry for the past 10 years. Throughout my paths all the work that I have done has been for our people. I promise to continue this level of service as your Councilwoman.

With these economic times the entire world faces there are budgetary constraints all around the globe. The squeeze affects everything. Our Oneida Nation needs to be proactive to weather through this economic storm.

As one of the leaders of our Nation, I will work diligently and take a balanced approach to ensure that any budget deficit is avoided. I propose a mix of budget decreases and increased revenue streams, while maintaining our level of programs, services, and investments for the future. This balanced approach would consist of spending cuts within budgets where there may be some leeway. Rather than large decreases in a few areas, it will be less detrimental to make smaller changes in more areas. Diversifying our investments and seeking more revenue streams to fund our programs and services shall help alleviate budget strain.

Fern Orie

I also firmly believe to have a strong Nation we need to have strong individuals. Oneidas need to be educated, prepared, and self-reliant to brace for the future. The key to weathering these economic times is through creating financial self-sufficiency in each tribal member. To achieve this, financial education is of paramount importance. I propose that we make it a priority to provide financial education to our people. This will strengthen individuals and ultimately our Nation as a whole.

"What would you do about a projected budget deficit in 2012?"

The most important element in dealing with a budget, deficit or not, is to be honest and forthright with the people. We probably need a complete financial review and audit of all tribal expenses and receipts. People need to know where the money is coming from and where it is going. We need to hold the line on expenses that are unnecessary. The most important task the tribe has, is to take care of the people the best way they can. We need to make sure that everyone has adequate food and decent housing, good educational opportunities and the best medical care that we can pro vide. In other words, we need to ensure that our budget concentrates on the care of the people first, before we purchase any more properties or make any more investments. Putting the emphasis in the right place will help to balance the budget and make sure we are spending our money on the proper things. If there is a projected deficit budget for 2012, then we need to spend the time and get the right experts to help us trim the expenses while not cutting necessary services to our people.

When we put Oneida's first, great outcomes have followed. Now, more than ever, it is crucial that we address the problems of the tribe, specifically, a deficit, as one community. As Councilman, I will address the deficit by first, working collaboratively with the Oneida communities, seeking input and suggestions. Second, working towards the development and implementation of a Private Business Sector, specifically for Oneida.

John Powless III

COMMUNITY APPROACH

I am excited to collectively work with tribal members in addressing issues that effect us all. By taking a community approach, it is vital that communities have a voice. I believe in Oneida's, we have a very talented and driven membership, who all have good ideas, and will contribute to the issues facing our Nation.

ONEIDA BUSINESS SECTOR

I am eager to work towards the development of a Business sector in Oneida. I believe we have many tribal members who have great ideas, and will contribute greatly to this much needed initiative. By developing Businesses in Oneida, I would then explore the idea of transferring existing Oneida employee's into the new Oneida Businesses. As a result, strengthening Oneida, by keeping Oneida's employed. This would also be an alternative to offering early retirement packages. In the long run, this will contribute to a healthy and prosperous Oneida Economy.

In conclusion, our people are our greatest asset. It is important that they always have a voice, together; we will work towards achieving greatness.

Respectfully,
John E. Powless III

"WHAT I WOULD DO ABOUT THE PROJECTED BUDGET DEFICIT IN 2012?"

- Top Heavy Budgets: Budgeting in our departments across the board vs. transferring smaller department's funds to compensate for bigger departments or upper management budgets that have more clout.
- 2. Less High-End Sponsoring and Donations More PR: Various departments are well noted in the media for donations and sponsors for various events/groups local and nationwide. Less frivolous spending and more Superior Public Relations and Mass Media such as TV & Radio (Commercials), Newspaper and Internet (Advertisement).
- 3. Green Joint-Ventures and Investments: Stop investing in "Green" Joint-Ventures that have not been tested and proven successful.
- 4. Quality Customer Service Proven To Bring In Millions: Quality Customer Service guarantees a successful business which generates income. Everyone inevitably benefits from good Customer Service-its free, it doesn't cost us anything unless we don't have it.

To the Oneida Nation and its People:

I Ben Vieau am considering becoming a candidate for the Business Committee. I feel that with my experience and knowledge of Tribal concerns and the people of the Oneida Nation that I would be a valuable asset as a member to collaborate with the great people as their voice.

I attend the General Tribal Council meetings regularly and find that the set agenda(s) are not necessarily agreed upon or find results in the time allotted. At times I find myself thinking why is there a meeting? Many times the questions and answers are the same but worded differently. I have noticed as a Nation we say one thing and do another – that is my perception and I own my perceptions as well as you own your perceptions. And as a BC member I would like to change the perceptions and make them a reality.

Ben Vieau

I have been in Washington D.C. and have seen how the meeting process is controlled and agenda's are followed leading into gained results. I believe that as a BC member this can also occur with our great Oneida Nation. Run our Nation like a business, have structure, follow through and most importantly what is in the best interest of our great people. Leadership comes in many ways and has many faces. We are all leaders – a leader is someone that has a following of beliefs.

Timing of our meeting would be more appropriate if we have them Saturday mornings at 8 AM and conclude at 11 AM. More tribal members can attend. Have a posted agenda in our Kalihwisaks prior to a meeting for those who cannot attend, so their voice can be heard. I disagree in paying someone to attend. Attending a meeting is more than gaining money, this is our Nation and we should ALL be voting for better processes/life/rules/ideas. This is really a head count – the meeting should be more about what the Nation and the people want to accomplish. Being there to vote or have your voice heard is the reward! Just like big government – our nation needs to cut back too!

I love living within the Oneida Nation – this is my Life!! What great people and what great lands!!

Like Forrest Gump's mother said, "Life is like a box of chocolates, you never know what you are going to get."

I've been in the healthcare industry my entire life. I started as a Licensed Practical Nurse and over the next 40 years, I progressed to the Masters degree in Health Administration. Currently, I'm a nurse educator at Menominee Tribal College.

In regard to "what would I do about a projected budget deficit in 2012" , without access to detailed financial reports, it's difficult to comment on a projected deficit plan.

Although most of my experience is in the healthcare industry, I've still learned a great deal about money management from my managerial and budget-preparation experience. From this experience I know the largest source of financial responsibility lies in personnel and associated fringe benefit costs. However, I view our employment base as our largest investment, rather than an expense. Yes, the employee base can be leaner but perhaps, instead of involuntary cuts, I feel we should re-visit the earlier proposed Plan B organization re-structure which would integrate services thereby making more efficient use of our employees. Another example is the use of consultants. Let us trust our own experienced professionals rather than outsourcing important decisions.

Pearl Webster

Another important consideration is a thorough comparison of all revenue streams against current debt and day-to-day expenses such as travel, vehicles, charge cards, etc. I'm not saying I'm against any of these expenses but rather, I advocate a careful cost/benefit analysis be applied to all of them.

Finally, being born and raised in Oneida the 7 generation philosophy is deeply engrained in me. However, I think that together, we can create and execute innovative and strategic ideas to personify our way of life for much longer than the next 7 generations. Let's begin.

Pearl Webster

Brandon Stevens

As a Councilman in the FY11 budget cycle, I helped lead the Business Committee through virtually every departmental budget and we zeroed out meeting and business expense line items among other expenses. It was a difficult process to look at each department, but necessary to reduce expenditures and to reduce the budget itself. If we continue to follow our cost constraints as recommended by the CFO we will reduce a large portion of the deficit. I do believe we need to look ahead at our GTC mandates to build on our local needs and infrastructure. One suggestion is looking at Per Capita and the Education scholarship to more adequately manage our budget. Per Capita could be on a percentage, if we make more profits we get more, make less we get less, which puts less of a burden on the programs and service provided to our members. The Education scholarship fund I believe could be utilized more by the organization to create and maintain jobs for our tribal members, as of now we have very educated individuals coming back from school and yet they have many barriers to our organization, one being lack of experience. Mentorship and Succession programs would be vital to the retention of an experienced employee's knowledge and wisdom to be passed to a young qualified educated tribal member. I also believe we need to continue with our housing initiatives that put more homes on the reservation to build up our community that will serve as a solid foundation for a sustainable local economy. The creation of the Oneida Chamber of Commerce will be a focal point in creating that economy in keeping Oneida money in Oneida by supporting our Tribal entrepreneurs.

Food Distribution Program

The Oneida Food Distribution Program opened its doors in the old Oneida tribal bldg. on July 1, 1980. It operated under the umbrella of the Great Lakes Indian Tribal Council (GLITC) until Sept. 30, 1983.

It was at that time that the Food Distribution Program on Indian Reservations (FDPIR) was officially activated here in Oneida on Oct 1, 1983 to the present time.

The program is administered at the federal level by the Food & Nutrition Service (FNS), an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, or USDA as we know it. FDPIR is managed locally by either Indian Tribal Organizations (ITO's) or an agency of a state government. Currently there are approximately 257 tribes receiving benefits under FDPIR through 98 ITO's and 5 state agencies.

The agreement to administer the FDPIR is between the state agency, in this case the Oneida Nation, and USDA. Therefore, we are required to operate within the USDA guidelines as well as Oneida policies & procedures.

The USDA agreement or contract requires the ITO's to order, receive, warehouse, and distribute USDA commodities according to the USDA 501 handbook of regulations. Also to offer nutrition education with the help of state, federal, and Oneida nutritionists, as well as outreach to potentially eligible households with information of the services we provide, and finally, referral to other entities that can meet needs that we in the Food Distribution Program cannot satisfy.

Our service area is the rural areas of Brown and Outagamie counties as well as those of Door, Kewaunee, and Manitowoc. Inside the reservation boundaries any eligible household can receive our services. Outside the reservation only eligible Indian households can be serviced. We cannot service any city or town that has a population of over 10,000 with the exception of Green Bay that is based on a waiver agreement reached with USDA in 1992. This allows our program to service Indian households if they meet program eligibility criteria. The prevailing rule of eligibility maintains that low-income American Indians, and non-Indian households residing on a reservation, and those Indian households living in approved areas near a reservation, that contains at least one person, who is a member of a federally recognized tribe, are eligible to participate in the Food Distribution Program.

Those communities that we cannot service directly are Allouez, De Pere, Ashwaubenon, Appleton, Kaukauna, and Grand Chute.

Households are certified based on income and resource standards set up by the federal government, and must be re-certified as often as necessary, or at a minimum of every 12 months. Households may not participate in the Food Distribution Program and the Food Stamp Program (SNAP) in the same month.

Each month, participating households receive a food package to help them maintain a nutritionally balanced diet. We offer a nutritious food package consisting of fresh fruits and vegetables as well as wholesome meat products of frozen ground beef, chicken, turkey hams, and roast beef, and when available, ground buffalo and regular hams during the fall season. We also have a full line of canned fruits and vegetables in addition to an assortment of fruit juices, cereals, and other wholesome products.

Our food package from the USDA is worth approximately $100 per person per month, and is well balanced in all food groups. Over the years our caseload has fluctuated between 400 to 1000 certified participants. The average caseload in 2010 was over 500 clients monthly. In order to be an effective program, the Food Distribution Program continually assesses the needs of its participants through various surveys and questionnaires, to make sure we are addressing all of our requirements.

The Oneida Food Distribution Program is actively involved and an integral part of OCIFS (Oneida Community Integrated Food Systems) originally established in 1994. OCIFS was formed to develop a strong food infrastructure for the Oneida Nation. It includes Tsyunhéhkwʌ, Oneida Nation Farms, Apple Orchard, Oneida Comprehensive Health Division, and Food Distribution Program.

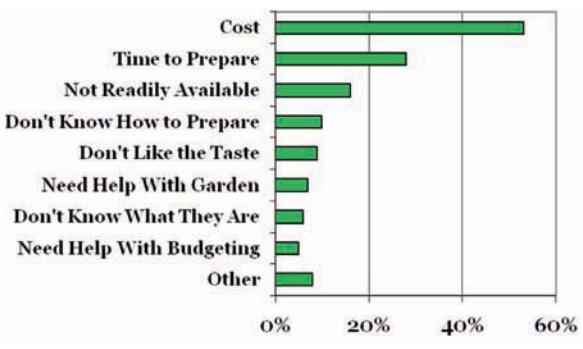
Food Assessment Survey Results
(Issue 6 of 6)

This is the sixth article on the Oneida Community Food Assessment (OCFA). We hope that the previous information and charts provided have helped you to understand some of the projects we worked on and to inspire the question for each of us "where does our food come from". We hope that each of you will recognize what we can do, as individuals and as members of the Oneida Community, to ensure our Food Security and Food Sovereignty.



Food Security:
When all people at all times have access to sufficient, safe, nutritious food to maintain a healthy and active life.

Food Sovereignty:
The right of peoples, communities and countries to define their own agricultural, labor, fishing, food and land policies which are ecologically, socially, economically and culturally appropriate to their unique circumstances.

Percentage of Respondents who use each Specific Type of Food Source

Limitations to Eating Healthy Foods

The Hobart Episcopal church in Oneida

By Thelma Cornelius McLester

Third Series on the Hobart Episcopal Church in Oneida

It is important to mention Reverend Edward A. Goodnough's burial, historically, since he had served the Oneidas longer than any other priest at Oneida. In the Green Bay Press Gazette, dated January 25, 1890, was an article about the memorial service held for him, as follows: "The services yesterday at Hobart Church and at the cemetery on the Oneida Reservation were held in memory of the late beloved paster, the Rev. Edward A. Goodenough who was of an especially impressive and interesting character"

There were four priests who administered the burial services who were the Reverend Solomon S. Burleson, (who succeeded Goodnough at Oneida), his son, the Reverend Allen Burleson, the Reverend Dr. Gardiner of Nashotah House, and an address was given by former resident priest, Reverend F.R. Haff who had become the rector of the Christ Episcopal Church in Green Bay, (after he left Oneida).

At the conclusion of the services, a procession was led by Captain Atisquette, (Archiquette), the Brass Band of Oneida, followed by the congregation and the clergy, all marching from the church to the cemetery. The Indian Choir also present, sang two hymns at the grave site in addition to having participated in the church services

Having arrived at the Monument, one could see these words printed on the front of the monument, "Beneath this Stone awaiting the Resurrection lies the body of Edward Augustus Goodenough for Thirty-Six years, Paster and Friend of the Oneidas." On the back of the monument was inscribed, "This Stone of Remembrance is erected by his grateful children in the Lord, the Indians of Hobart Church, Oneida" Today, the Monument can be seen on the Southern part of the Cemetery enclosed by a rod-iron black fence where he is resting with other members of his family.

Next to arrive to serve at Hobart Church in 1891 was the Reverend Solomon S. Burleson. An experienced priest, he was nearing retirement when he arrived. He had studied medicine, dentistry and understood the law, which was in addition to his priesthood studies. When he realized the need for medical care of the entire Oneida community, he helped the Oneidas pursue the building of an Oneida hospital. He had received a small grant from the government and used these funds to help those in need of medical care. In addition, he became involved in other areas of need for the Oneidas. Even though the building of a boarding school was already in progress, he helped in whatever way he could to make the school become a reality. Burleson was also supportive of the building of a much needed bridge over the Duck Creek. One year after Burleson passed away, the Oneida Hospital opened its doors for the entire Oneida community in 1898.

At this same time, an Oneida, Miss Lavina Conelius who had graduated from Hampton Normal Institute and also the New Haven Training School for Nursing was hired to be in charge of the Hospital and served from 1898 until 1899 after she received an appointment to serve at the Oneida Boarding School. She was replaced by another Oneida, Miss Nancy Cornelius (no relation) who had also graduated from the Hartford Training School for Nursing, but had attended the Carlisle Institute prior to that. She served until 1904 when she married.

When Reverend Burleson arrived in Oneida, his five sons had already entered the priesthood and all were already serving throughout the area, except for one son who was helping him serve at Oneida.

Reverend Burleson spent six years in his service to Oneida, prior to his death on February 22, 1897. He is also buried in the church cemetery which is on the northern part of the cemetery, high on a hill.

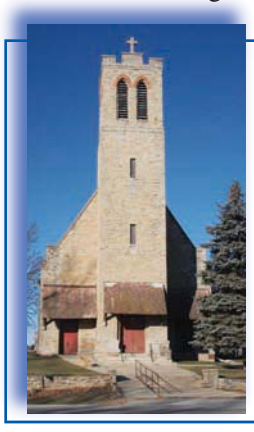
The Reverend Cornelius Hill became a deacon on June 27, 1885 and ordained a priest on June 24, 1903. He spent his entire life in the service of others, beginning early on in life when he attended Nashotah House at the age of ten years of age, returning to Oneida at the age of 13 after being chosen a chief of the Bear Clan, then returning to complete his training at Nashotah. At the age of 18, he began to travel with other Oneida chiefs to council meetings. He undertook all duties assigned to him in this role. He was recognized as a leader of the people at a young age and went on to serve the Oneidas both politically and in their spiritual needs. He worked faithfully at Hobart Church serving as a delegate to the Episcopal Church Councils in Milwaukee and supported the mission work in Oneida throughout his life. It is important to mention that he spoke on behalf of the Oneidas when it came to protecting their lands from outsiders making several trips to Washington, with other Oneida leaders.

There is much to be said about all that has been accomplished throughout the church's early history and those who played a role in these happenings.

In 1903, at the age of 69, Hill was ordained a priest and this was a very special day for him by the congregation as well as by others. He passed away in 1907 and is buried in the church yard at Hobart Church with as much celebration as provided to those who went before him.

In 1897, the Reverend F. R. Merrill was assigned to Oneida. It can be said that it was during this time that the new stone church was finally completed, that is, a full completion of all necessary work. The celebration included one-thousand people in attendance. At this time, there was the re-naming of the church to Holy Apostles, even though it is still referred to as the Stone Church and the Hobart Church in Oneida.

During Reverend Merrill's term, Josiah Powless, M.D. was in charge of the Oneida Hospital for twelve years. He began his career by excelling in his studies and finally completed his medical training at the Milwaukee Medical College (now Marquette University).



It was while he was working at the Oneida Hospital that the First World War was in progress. Dr. Powless was called upon to serve. After enlisting on April, 12, 1918, he was sent to serve in France. He served with the Medical Detachment of the 308th Infantry Division and while performing an act of heroism he was seriously wounded and died as a result. He is buried in the Episcopal Cemetery.

Descriptions from the Federal Administration on Aging Title VI Resource Manual

Information/Referral:

Provision of concrete information to a client about available public and voluntary services and resources including name, address, and telephone number of service or resource and linkage with appropriate community resource(s) to ensure necessary service will be delivered to the client. Must include contact and follow up with the provider and/or client.

Outreach:

Conducting activities to identify elders eligible for services, providing information to eligible elders about available service, and encouraging an elder to use existing services. This is a one-on-one contact, not a group service such as public education.

Homemaker Services/ In Home Chore:

Providing assistance for housecleaning, laundry, shopping, and meal preparation.

Respite:

Respite care is non medical care provided to a frail elder so that the caregiver can have a break.

Personal Care/Home Health Aid Service:

Providing personal assistance with eating, dressing bathing, toileting, transferring in and out of bed/chair or walking.

Do not provide any medical services, which does require trained personnel.

Home Chore Service:

Providing assistance to persons having difficulty with heavy cleaning, yard work, walk maintenance, minor home repair, wood chopping, hauling water and other heavy duty activities which the older person(s) is unable to handle on his/her own and which do not require the services of trained homemaker or other specialist.

Visiting:

Visiting services include going to see an elder in order to comfort or help in reading or writing a letter.

Telephoning:

Telephone services include phoning in order to provide comfort to help or check up on the elder.

Family Support:

Family support services include providing services to family members who care for an elder such as counseling or discussing the elder's situation.

Health Promotion and Wellness:

Activities conducted to improve the mental and physical health of elders, including walking groups, exercise classes, other types of recreation, and health education classes on health care. (Matter of Balance, Chronic Disease Self Management, Powerful Tools for Caregivers, Elder Driver Safety)

Items to Consider When Selecting a Beneficiary

Latʔsʌnaló·loks… They gather the Names

Selecting a beneficiary is a very personal decision. Consider these questions:

- Upon your death, who will bear the responsibility of your expenses?
- Are there people who count on you for their financial support?
- Would you like to assign payment of the funeral expenses to a specified funeral home (Assignment of Proceeds) to not burden family members? If so, remaining proceeds will go to your beneficiary(ies) after EPIC pays the funeral home.
- What are the state regulations – am I able to select anyone I choose as my beneficiary? For example, in Wisconsin, your spouse may be entitled to 50% of the proceeds, unless the spouse waives their right to such proceeds. If you are naming someone other than your spouse as a beneficiary(ies), your spouse must sign the spousal waiver to waive their rights to the proceeds.

EPIC recommends that you research your options before choosing a beneficiary, and discuss your objectives and concerns with your professional advisors before making this important decision. According to the default provisions of the policy, if you do not elect a beneficiary, EPIC will pay the first available individual or individuals using the following naming sequence:

- For deceased members over the age of 18:
  - Widow or widower
  - Child(ren) (natural or legally adopted children)
  - Grandchild or grandchildren
  - Parent(s)
  - Brother(s) and sister(s)
  - Member's estate
- Members who are minors will not designate a beneficiary or have a designation elected for them. All payments will be designated using the following naming sequence:
  - Widow or widower
  - Child(ren) (natural or legally adopted children)
  - Parent(s) or legal guardian(s)
  - Brother(s) and sister(s)
  - Grandparent(s)
  - Member's estate

Keep your beneficiary designation up to date. You may want to modify your designation in the event of important family changes, such as a birth, death, marriage, or divorce.

Step-by-Step Instructions for Completing This Form

A. Please print your full name, date of birth, Oneida enrollment number, and full address in the designated areas.

B. Primary Beneficiary (ies) – Will receive the proceeds as long as they are alive and legally capable of receiving the benefit. The percentage(s) assigned to your primary beneficiary (ies) must total 100%.

C. Contingent Beneficiary(ies) – Will receive the proceeds only if all primary beneficiaries are deceased or not eligible due to disqualification by law. For example, you elect your spouse as the primary beneficiary, and your two children as contingent beneficiaries; you and your spouse are killed in a car accident; your children would receive the proceeds. The percentage(s) assigned to your contingent beneficiary(ies) must total 100%.

D. This document is only valid if it contains your signature and date. EPIC does not require this form to be notarized, but you may have it notarized if you wish.

E. Check the Marital Property law in your state. Based on Wisconsin's Marital Property law, if you are married and you elect a primary beneficiary other than your spouse, your spouse must sign the spousal waiver to waive their rights. Otherwise, your spouse may be entitled to 50% of the proceeds.

USDA Announces Nutrition Education Grants

WASHINGTON, April 8, 2011 -- Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced today that tribal nutrition education projects in 10 states have been selected to receive grants this year through USDA's Food Distribution Program on Indian Reservations (FDPIR). The grants will help develop creative, self-initiated projects designed to enhance the nutrition knowledge and to foster positive lifestyle changes of FDPIR participants in low-income households living on Indian reservations and to American Indian households residing in approved areas near reservations or in Oklahoma. Janie Hipp, Director of USDA's Office of Tribal Relations, joined Governor Bill Anoatubby and Lt. Governor Jefferson Keel of the Chickasaw Nation in Oklahoma to announce the grants on behalf of Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack.

"We are committed to working with Tribal nations to improve the nutrition and health on Indian Reservations and tribal lands," Vilsack said. "These projects will help support and expand nutrition education through self-initiated projects and provide better access to more fruits and vegetables so that we can make great strides in improving the nutrition and health of tribal members."

Each year, Indian Tribal Organizations and state agencies that administer the program can apply for funding to expand nutrition education efforts. USDA chose 15 applicants, located in California, Kansas, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Washington and Wisconsin, to receive FY 2011 funding to develop nutrition education projects that incorporate the Dietary Guidelines within the Native American culture.

Projects chosen this year for the grants, which total $1 million, include a recipe toolkit containing menus, shopping lists, and snack ideas featuring more fruits, vegetables, and whole grains; summer camp programs for youth to teach healthy cooking techniques; nutrition education sessions held during scheduled food deliveries for participants in remote reservation areas; and community gardens to promote fruit and vegetable consumption. The announcement comes as First Lady Michelle Obama's Let's Move! initiative celebrates National Gardening Month (April).

Wisconsin seeks interstate designation for Hwy 41

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker announced Tuesday, May 3 that the Wisconsin Department of Transportation (WisDOT) is planning to turn Highway 41 into an interstate.

"This sort of designation helps to attract growth for existing businesses as well as attract other employers to this region when they can say 'hey, we're right off an interstate'," said Walker at a press conference held in Green Bay near the West Mason interchange.

A section of the Hwy 41 construction scheduled to begin this June will take place within the Oneida reservation borders, and Chairman Rick Hill was on hand for the announcement.

"Certainly, Chairman Hill knows coming up to this area all that it can bring to this region and throughout the state, the powerful effect it has when it comes to tourism," said Walker.

"Oneida could be the gateway for tourism for the rest of the tribes," said Hill in an interview after the announcement.

The Oneida Nation School System (ONSS) is grieving after the death of one of their first teachers, Carol Potack.

Potack, who died on April 28, was an Ojibwe who was hired through a phone interview in the 1980's for a not yet started Oneida Tribal School as a Chapter 1 Reading Teacher. She was the first Native American teacher at the school.

Potack then became the systems Language/Culture Teacher leading classes in self-developed language lessons along with beadwork.

Oneida Business Committee Wrap: April 27, 2011

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

The Oneida Business Committee (OBC) honored the Oneida Nation High School (ONHS) Girls' Basketball Team for their winning season at the Wednesday, April 27 OBC meeting.

Coach Jamie Betters praised the eight student athletes for their 16-6 season.

"These fine young women have worked extremely hard," said Betters. "We ended up having a successful season, it was amazing."

In attendance: Chairman Rick Hill, Vice Chairwoman Kathy Hughes, Council Members Ed Delgado, Trish King, Brandon Stevens and Ron Tehassi Hill.

Excused: Secretary Patti Hoeft, Treasurer Tina Danforth, Councilwoman Melinda Danforth.

Oaths of office

Councilman Ron Tehassi Hill administered the oaths of office for Oneida Police Officer Brandon Van De Hei; for Election Board Alternates Sunshine Skenandore, Brian Bealieu, Jodi Cornelius, Elizabeth Hopewell and Teresa Schuman; for Oneida Environmental Resource Board Members Marlene Garvey and Chris Cornelius; and for the Oneida Police Commission Member Lois Strong.

Minutes

The OBC approved meeting minutes from April 13 and an April 18 special OBC meeting.

Resolutions

A FY2011 Inter-Tribal Buffalo Council Herd Development Grant Proposal was approved by the OBC.

Draft notices prohibiting the use of electronic polling and retro-approval were denied.

"I think these are a little bit too restrictive, and would prohibit the Business Committee from acting in a matter when it's absolutely necessary," said Councilwoman King.

Councilman Delgado argued that OBC members should be on call for emergency meetings.

"We should call a meeting, and when we call a meeting, the Business Committee should be available … There's no reason we can't get five of us here," said Delgado.

Board, Committee and Commission quarterly reports

The OBC accepted reports from the Oneida Personnel Commission, Oneida Nation Veterans Affairs and the Oneida Arts Board. A report on transferring the Oneida Powwow Committee to the Tourism Department was accepted.

Reports from the South Eastern Oneida Tribal Services and Oneida Library Board were deferred.

Standing Committees

The Committee accepted minutes for the Legislative Operating Committee (LOC) meetings held April 6 and April 14. The OBC also approved Anna John Nursing Home Board by-laws and the April 22 Finance Committee minutes.

The Oneida Business Committee honored the Oneida Nation High School Girls' Basketball Team at their April 27th meeting.

General Manager (GM) Debbie Thundercloud gave a report on analysis of services for boards, committees and commissions. There had been requests for administrative staff support from the groups. The OBC requested that the GM's office as well as Chief of Staff (COS) Bill Gollnick's office report at the May 5 OBC meeting with more information.

A discussion about sovereignty was sparked by a request by Oneida citizen Simon De Coteau for Oneida to reimburse him for storm water fees paid to the Village of Hobart on his fee land.

"(De Coteau) did not believe this is a fee that should be charged against him, and we investigated that. We tried to find a way to establish a broad based policy that would address this," said Gollnick.

There are approximately 216 tribal citizens who own fee land in Hobart. The Oneida Law Office recommended reimbursing tribal citizens as a charitable gift which could cost $20,000 total, or could be done based on income.

"It's a point of contention in the community. …For those lands held by the tribe, it pays the fees under protest except on trust lands, and it's the trust land that's currently being adjudicated. As it relates to tribal members, they have their individual responsibilities as they currently exist," said Gollnick.

He explained the Law Office is being conservative about what cases to bring to court.

"The Law Office has been very considering of what cases have the potential to succeed, which ones don't, what we as a tribe would gain from various cases, and the potential losses associated with losing," said Gollnick. "If the tribal members were to come forward and to lose, that would be precedent setting for the tribe."

"Would it be appropriate to consider a class action to recover those fees that were being assessed illegally for the purposes of running the government who are playing us every day, using our members' money, and then they turn around and use that money to fight us on those issues," said Chairman Hill. Chief Council Jo Anne House stated the tribe has jurisdiction in those areas, but does not advise pursuing the issue in court.

"I believe the changing nature of the jurisprudence in this area has not been favorable to tribal governments," said House.

"I think the very absence of sovereignty is when we don't protect it as much as we can," said Councilman Stevens.

A motion by Councilman Delgado to pay the fee for tribal citizens under protest did not get any support.

"We're supposed to be a nation to help the people," said De Coteau. "Why aren't you helping people?"

Councilwoman King made a motion for the COS to direct a team to prepare a plan for reimbursement to tribal members who are being assess fees by other municipal governments based on need and age which passed.

Travel

A travel request for Treasurer Danforth to speak at the Women Leaders Native American Economic Development Symposium June 20-22 in Anaheim, CA was approved. Vice Chairwoman Hughes withdrew her travel request for the symposium.

Chairman Hill and Councilman Stevens were approved to travel to a meeting with the US Department of Interior on May 2 in Washington DC on the condition they ask Interior officials about Oneida's special election to amend its constitution, converting individual fee land to trust land, and discuss the Tribal Gaming Eligibility Act that will impact tribes' ability to put casinos on new acquired land.

Ermenc, Jr., Joseph D.
March 27, 1958 – April 30, 2011

Black River Falls, WI

Joseph D. Ermenc, Jr., age 53, of Black River Falls, died Saturday, April 30, 2011 in Gundersen Lutheran Medical Center. He had been under the care of Black River Memorial Hospice.

Joseph Donald Ermenc, Jr. was born on March 27, 1958 in Milwaukee to Joseph Sr. and Dorothy (John) Ermenc. He was raised in Milwaukee and later served in the U.S. Marine Corps.

Following his discharge from the Marines, he lived and worked in South Dakota. He later returned to Milwaukee and settled in Black River Falls in 1992 where he met Ida Decorah. They were married on September 26, 1994 in Milwaukee. Joe and Ida had lived in the Black River Falls area all of their married lives.

Joe had been employed as an engraver by Rudick Trophies of Milwaukee, and later as a blackjack dealer at Rainbow Casino of Nekoosa. He also had been employed at Whitetail Crossing and Smokeshop of Black River Falls.

Joe was a proud member of the Oneida Nation.

Joe enjoyed spending time with his granddaughters, gambling, fishing, and walking.

Survivors include his wife, Ida; his mother, Dorothy Ermenc of Oneida, WI; his father, Joseph Ermenc, Sr. of Las Vegas, NV; a daughter, Ambrosia Ermenc of South Dakota; a stepson, Garrett (significant other, Stephanie Small) Decorah of Black River Falls; 4 granddaughters, Jaida, Traci, Grace, and Kaylee Decorah; 3 sisters, Pamela Ermenc and Kim (Bruce) Reyes both of Milwaukee, and Debra (Wade) Richmond of Green Bay; 3 brothers, Jeffrey Ermenc and Bryan Ermenc both of Green Bay, and James Ermenc of Oneida; and numerous nieces, nephews, and other relatives and friends.

He was preceded in death by his sister, Mamie Arellano, and step-son, Jordan Decorah.

Funeral services were held at 2 P.M. on Wednesday, May 4, 2011 at the Buswell Funeral Home, Black River Falls. Wilfrid Cleveland officiated and burial, with military honors by the Andrew Blackhawk American Legion Post 129, was in Decorah Cemetery, rural Black River Falls.

Family and friends were invited for visitation from 5 to 7 P.M. on Tuesday, May 3, and from noon to 2 P.M. on Wednesday at the Buswell Funeral Home.

From 2A/OBC Wrap

General Tribal Council

A decision to schedule a General Tribal Council (GTC) meeting for the FY12 Budget was deferred to the next OBC meeting.

A petition concerning Health Care specialists, Initiative One Health Center management findings, land use fees for Oneida Farm, Tsyunhehkwa, and grass-fed beef sold in cuts was recognized, and ordered to be researched for the June 8 OBC meeting.

Follow-ups/BC directives

The Committee approved putting in a request with the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) to place polling sites in Oneida and Milwaukee for the BIA Secretarial election for Tribal Constitution revisions.

New Business/Requests

Tonya Boucher withdrew from her appointment to the Oneida Election Board, and the issue was referred to the Chairman's office for a new recommendation.

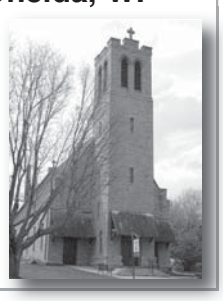
A request to provide sponsorship to the National Congress of American Indians Mid-Year Conference in Milwaukee June 13-16 was referred to the Treasurer's office.

The OBC approved a recommendation of Beverly Skenandore to the Oneida Child Protective Board.

The Committee also recommended a working group continue developing a recommendation for use of hand-held voting devices at GTC meetings and create a draft GTC meeting procedure. The devices will be tested at the May 23 GTC meeting.

The OBC reaffirmed that Oneida citizens 70 and older will not pay a membership fee at the Oneida Family Fitness (OFF) Center. There was debate to allow members 55 to 69 and those with disabilities to pay a reduced $25 per year fee. However Education and Training Area Manager Susan House stated the OFF hadn't kept records on how many members are disabled, and would need parameters for defining disabled. The budget impact for a reduced fee for those 55 to 69 would be $12,050. Chief of Finance Larry Barton stated there would be savings to Oneida if as a result of the reduced membership fees people were more active and healthy.

"The loss is immaterial in the grand scheme of the overall fiscal impacts. Secondarily, it will quantify as a savings as a means of prevention," said Barton.



The reduced fees were approved for 55-69 year olds, and a report was requested in 45 days to study the impact of reducing fees for citizens with disabilities.

The OBC approved an Environmental Protection Agency Underground Storage Tank credential inspection authorization.

Additions

Wayne Metoxen and Wilbur Rentmeister were recommended to the Oneida Total Integrated Enterprises Board.

Profile: McLester teaches lessons learned in Canada

Submitted photo

Ron McLester, Jr. went to school in Canada for his advanced degrees, and learned more about his Oneida heritage as well.

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Ron McLester, Jr. traveled to Canada to obtain his degrees, and now is helping other Aboriginal students do the same as Manager of the Aboriginal Education Department at Mohawk College.

McLester, a citizen of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin, was appointed to the President's Advisory Council at Mohawk College of Applied Arts and Technology in Hamilton, Ontario and to the Board of Directors of Six Nations Polytechnic.

"It's a council made up of a variety of staff members from faculty staff, support staff, student leaders, and we discuss a wide range of … opportunities, strategic goals, and any ideas," said McLester.

Recently, his department received a $300,000 grant to develop a program for kindergarten to 12 grade students to encourage them to seek higher education.

"It's a project called Pathfinder," said McLester. "We're bringing in 80 Aboriginal students, and they will live on campus for up to eight weeks. It's really modeled after the Upward Bound program in the states. They will contribute towards a documentary that will be used as a recruitment film. They will also be given iPad 2's that they can keep at the end of their experience."

McLester was named Chair of Diversity at the college in February.

"It's a two year pilot project, so we will be doing a needs assessment and an environmental scan to check out get a feel for how diverse and how inclusive the college is, where any gaps exist as far as making it a more inclusive and diverse campus," he said.

McLester explained the school looks at diversity within the Aboriginal population.

"We see diversity in … the reserve students, students who are from the urban core, or from students who are from far away – far north or far west. There are … three different levels of diversity from the aboriginal population; and a fourth one would be for language speaking students, because there's a definite, I don't want to say barrier, but there's a definite difference from students who know some language between those who don't," he said.

McLester was also elected to the Board of Governors for Six Nations Polytechnic.

"Six Nations is … basically an academic institution that's a community hub for not only … focus groups and support groups, tutor groups, that kind of stuff, but also post secondary courses," he said.

McLester started his post-secondary education at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, and then transferred to the University of Guelph in Ontario for Criminal Justice. He later earned a Masters in Social Work from McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario.

While attending college in Canada, McLester said he learned more about Oneida's traditional ways.

"I got to meet clan mothers and I got to meet chiefs, and (go to) their longhouse here, and (learn) a different way of understanding of what it means to be Haudenosuanee," said McLester. Haudenosuanee means People of the Longhouse.

Because he went to college in Canada, McLester paid his own tuition. He would like Oneida to change its policy to pay for schooling in Canada.

"One thing Oneida Nation hasn't done is removed the border. The Oneida Nation recognizes the Canadian border; that border is invisible to our people, and there are treaties that say that," he said.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

New business relies on experience for success

Nori's Oneida Trading Post aims to put best foot forward

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Oneida Elder Nori Damrow has been involved with crafts for the majority of her life and loved every minute. Now she has taken that love and turned it into a small business venture with her new store, Nori's Oneida Trading Post.

It has been Nori's dream to one day open a store. After stepping away from a busy career she is now making that dream a reality. "I've been involved with crafts for nearly fifty years, I worked out of my home and did shows and powwows. So it's been a part of my life. Even after I began to work elsewhere I continued (to make crafts) simply because I loved it," said Damrow.

The quaint shop manages to stock a good amount of merchandise into the shop's space. Damrow says, "Everyday we change, everyday we're putting things in or fixing things different. I walk in here and I'm surprised every time I walk in, it seems to get fuller and fuller."

The store features a wide variety of merchandise such as beads, craft supplies, rugs, pottery, and baskets, just to name a few items. The store even displays and sells artworks produced by local artists and hopes to eventually feature an artist each month.

Although Damrow is the owner of the shop she is not without help. Damrow works with the assistance of Mary Hill and Mary Vvalther, respectively. Both of who bring experience and knowledge of crafts and artwork to the business.

"I do my artwork to sell. I paint, I sculpt, I do raised beadwork, and I do silver smithing. I'm a master silver smith, I thought at the university level," says Vvalther of her experience in the arts. Hill also creates artwork in a different medium, "I mostly do sewing. I sew a lot of home decorations, I work with Pendleton, or whatever I feel like doing." Hill also offers experience in business.

Aside from the business' growing inventory of supplies Nori's Trading Post also consigns merchandise as well as entertains trades for merchandise.

"We'd like it to be more of a general merchandise store. We're looking at hats and shirts, but what's biggest on my mind are diapers," Damrow says of the future growth of the store.

"We come from three different perspectives and we all have our strengths and we all have our weaknesses. So we've just been trying to put our best foot forward and get this thing off the ground and have something really special to offer to the public."

Nori's Oneida Trading Post is located at 2615 S. Packerland Dr., Suite F-2. The store is within the Airport Business Center. The store is open Tuesday through Saturday 10:00am to 5:00pm and will host a Grand Opening on Saturday, May 28th with ceremonies starting at 2:00pm.

2011 Submissions to Yukhika-latuhse (She tells us stories)

(Oneida, WI) – Yukhika-latuhse (She tells us stories), the all-Native American literary journal published by Oneida Nation Arts Program, is now accepting poems, stories and essays for its seventh annual issue, which will be published this September. The deadline for submissions is May 27, 2011.

The editors prefer that writers submit electronically, as an attachment, to jstevens@centurytel.net or bbashara@oneida-nation.org. Please mark to the attention of Yukhika. Submissions should be no more than four pages per writer. People should also include a short biography which includes tribal affiliation, and an SASE if submitting by snail mail.

Yukhika-latuhse has been publishing since 2005. In its pages has appeared the work of Maurice Kenny, Joseph Bruchac, Kimberly Blaeser, Ed Two Rivers and Denise Sweet, among many others. The journal conducts writers' workshops on reservations and in Native communities of Wisconsin. We can also be found on Facebook.

Leadership, Courage, Integrity & Fortune 100 Experience

THOMAS E. WILBUR
FOR CHAIRMAN of the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin

A brighter future for our people starts with new leadership today.

I have proven experience in business and with the Oneida Tribe, including the Casino and Oneida Total Integrated Enterprises (OTIE), where we not only made money, we were nationally recognized as the top Indian enterprise in 2010. Our Great Oneida Nation needs the kind of change that only my leadership can bring. Please vote for me as Chairman, and together, let's make the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin stronger!

Please contact me at : (920) 530-7264 (Oneida) or (414) 614-9324 (Milwaukee) or you can e-mail me at: ThomasWilbur@mail.com.

VOTE FOR CHANGE ON MAY 7: THOMAS E. WILBUR FOR A STRONGER ONEIDA NATION!

Thomas E. Wilbur with his Aunt Robin Emmerton, after being nominated for Chairman of the Oneida Nation of Wisconsin.

Thomas E. Wilbur (right) greeted Jack Sheldon, who recently traveled from Florida to the Oneida reservation to discuss business opportunities for the Tribe.

Vice-Chairwoman's Corner...

Last week I attended a meeting in Portland Oregon. Our task at this meeting was to prepare a draft consultation policy for CMS (Center for Medicare/Medicaid Services). This was a small workgroup with Tribal Leaders and CMS staff represented. We accomplished our task and are using this week to refine the document through email exchanges and conference calls. The importance of this policy is emphasized each time CMS puts out new regulations and guidance with the implementation of the Affordable Care Act. The announcements most often impact our Elderly and the children, along with low-income families. While there can be no guarantees, having a Consultation Policy for the CMS will afford the Tribe a better opportunity to have input before these announcements are made, hopefully, minimizing any negative impacts.

We are continuing to look at systems to provide a better voting procedure at General Tribal Council meetings. Use of a hand held device is expected to provide a smoother means of getting an accurate count in a timely manner. If you have been there when a hand count takes place you will know it is time consuming and at times questionable on accuracy. A workgroup is looking at devices and will be preparing procedures for GTC consideration sometime in the near future.

At the last Business Committee meeting a discussion took place regarding the fees for the Fitness Center. The Committee had previously taken action to lower the fees for those 55 and older to $25. At this meeting, we eliminated any fees for those 70 and older.

That reduction is a minimal cost factor at this time. But what I am concerned about is the accumulation of the small costs when we are having such a trying time coming up with a budget that meets all these needs. We received a petition this week asking for the specialty services that were eliminated at the Health Center to be returned. The Committee was reviewing this decision as part of the budgeting process but now the resolution is asking for it to be reinstated prior to any analysis to support the feasibility. We are being told again not to prepare a budget that will cut labor cost by laying people off. In addition, a petition has come forward asking for a $.75 increase for all employees with annual wages of $60,000 or less. These are a few examples that demonstrate when I say we are good at coming up with ideas on how to spend money but getting the same creative thinking into how to make more money is an ongoing struggle.

While there has been a lot of talk, both for and against, the GTC meeting stipend, we have to recognize the influence that action has had on getting participation at these meetings. For more than 20 years I have been a part of the Committee in bringing an agenda to the GTC for decisions. Many of those GTC meetings didn't take place because we weren't able to get a 75 member quorum. I think it is fantastic that everyone is coming. And hopefully we will reach a point of understanding that paying for the responsibility is not a good thing. Primary Elections are on May 7 and I hope there is a really good turn out for this first time event too. Voting in the Primary Election is another process for participation in your government and should not be dealt with lightly. We elect a Business Committee to take care of the daily governmental affairs of the Tribe and to create Laws that recognize the sovereign authority of the government to exercise jurisdiction over the reservation.

This Primary is the start in determining the Committee to do this work on your behalf. It isn't an easy job. It doesn't pay well and it takes long hours.

Petition Support

Dear Editor,

I support Loretta V. Metoxen's petition on the agenda for the GTC meeting, May 23rd. Her petition asks GTC to take the Judiciary Act off the table and vote on the "qualifications of judges" and the "disciplinary panel" as presented in February.

At that GTC meeting, Feb. 5, 2011, GTC supported higher education qualifications of future judges. But, after four hours, just as GTC was ready vote on a reasonable set of qualifications, a motion was made to table the Judiciary Act, again.

In sum, the purpose of the motion was to allow an open forum of community members to discuss the options and come to a more refined and precise recommendation, with the "6 month" time limit being an arbitrary time frame.

In review, the Judiciary Act and Legislative Procedures Act were on the table from a previous GTC meeting held on Nov. of 2010. But, the GTC wanted the BC separate the two proposed acts, and present them again with clarifications, as was done Feb. 5th.

We have worked on the Judiciary Act for years. During the last 2 years, the BC and LOC held 2 public hearings, and many community meetings about the Judiciary Act. Tribal members commented at pubic hearings, attended community meetings, and helped shape the Judiciary Act. This has not been the effort of the BC, but the collective, the Oneida citizenship.

The tribe has outgrown the "Appeals Commission" (AC) hearing body. It's time to empower a true court system, and reach the full potential of our Sovereignty. A review of comments from the Feb. 5th meeting reveals a strong belief that some of the current AC members don't have the skill sets and ethical standards required of true judges.

The majority of GTC, Feb 5th, favored higher education and experience as qualifications for judges. Some people prefer a mediation, peacemaking and "alternative dispute resolution," which are included in the Judiciary Act under the section called "Peacemaking and Mediation Division."

Tribal members want future judges to be competent, fair, and objective in a tribal court. By setting the judges qualification higher, a strong ethical code, and a disciplinary panel of independent judges, we can reach this goal.

This petition seeks to set the qualifications to include a Juris Doctorate degree for the Chief Judges, and a bachelor's degree or 10 years of comparable experience for lower court judges.

GTC supports higher education, and dedicates funds to the Oneida Scholarship program. Many Oneidas are graduating from college, and even law school. In the past there was concern that educational requirements were too limiting, but that is no longer true. There are Oneida people who have the education, experience, and ethical standards we expect from judges.

Hopefully, the GTC will agree it's time to take off the table this Judiciary Act and Legislative Procedures Act and move forward with creating our own court.

Sincerely,
Sherrole Benton

Petition Opposition

I learned Thursday night (04/20/11) at our Judiciary Act Workgroup meeting that the Oneida Business Committee has agreed to place Loretta Metoxen's petition (to take the Judiciary Act off the table EARLY) on the agenda for the GTC meeting scheduled for May 23, 2011. By no means am I surprised, but I am truly disappointed that the Oneida Business Committee would allow the petition to be placed on the GTC meeting agenda because the GTC

OBC Forum...

Trish King
Councilwoman

Shekoli!

One of the most difficult things about nearing the end of my term of office is looking at all of the things that I still want to accomplish. No matter how members of the OBC schedule or plan, we will always end up with things that just won't be finished by the last day of the term. The last six months in office are always a rush to try and finalize as many projects as possible, which leads to a lot of hectic days and long nights.

Although several legislative items are underway, there are two particular projects that I hope will reach finalization: The Judiciary and the Indian Preference in Contracting Law. Both of these laws speak strongly to the Tribe's sovereign foundation, and among all the laws we are working on, I believe these two are extremely important for the Nation. Following is a status update on both:

The Judiciary

The February 5, 2011 GTC meeting was the third time the Judiciary came before the people. After four hours of excellent discussion, the membership was extremely close to adopting the law, but the motion got bogged down with word-smithing problems and the proposal was ultimately tabled for six months. We were directed to formulate a work group, consisting of any and all interested GTC members, to discuss and bring back specific language for two sections of the law where we had presented the GTC with different options – education/experience requirements for judges, and the composition of disciplinary panels.

Every Thursday night throughout the months of March and April, interested GTC members have come together and discussed the language and various options regarding these two areas of the proposal. It has been a wonderful experience to see interested community members, with so many different backgrounds and opinions, come together and work together towards a common goal. I particularly want to commend the members of the workgroup for their willingness to listen to each other, the patience and respect they have demonstrated, and of course for the excellent points that have been made and the ideas that have been brought forth.

The group strives to come to consensus and will soon make their final recommendations for GTC consideration within the six-month time-frame. Of particular note: A petition was also submitted asking that the Judiciary be addressed prior to the six-month time-frame. The OBC has scheduled that petition to be heard at the May 23rd GTC meeting. The work group is being encouraged to be ready to address the issue on that day if the membership so desires to take it up.

Indian Preference in Contracting

The Indian Preference in Contracting law is the second project that I am working particularly hard to finalize. This law has been on the LOC agenda for revisions for over two years, and we are now ready to present it for public comment.

At first glance, I thought that overhauling our current Indian Preference law might be a fairly simple task – but it has turned out to be a very challenging yet fascinating project. As sometimes happens with Tribal legislation, there are competing interests involved, and the Tribe has a stake in both of those interests.

On the one hand, it is crucial that we support Oneida-owned and Indian-owned businesses and workers. As a sovereign nation, we are deeply invested in making sure that our people can take advantage of every possible opportunity to earn a living; that businesses owned by our people become successful, and that our people are involved in every aspect of our Nation's development.

On the other hand, it is just as important that we are fiscally responsible, accountable, and most of all - fair. We have to make sure that we are not overspending on products and services. We have to ensure that every Tribal member and business is treated equally, and fairly. And we also have to make sure that nobody takes advantage of preference in a way that violates the intent of granting preference.

In the new Indian Preference in Contracting law, we are trying to strike a better balance between these competing interests, and to add accountability and transparency. We want to make sure that everyone clearly understands their rights under this law, and how to challenge any perceived unfairness in how it is applied. Through more detailed and specific language, we are trying to close any loopholes in the current law and more rigorously enforce preference in contracting for Oneida and other Indian businesses, and preference by contractors in employment for Oneida and other Indian workers.

A public hearing will be held on the proposal on May 26, 2011, in the OBC Conference Room. This is your opportunity to let the government hear your voice. If you would like a copy of the proposal, stop by the Legislative Reference Office in the Norbert Hill Center, or check online – the www.Oneida-nsn.gov website will have information about public hearings – just click on the "Government" link at the top, and then select "Tribal Laws" from the drop-down menu. If you are unable to attend the Public Hearing, you can submit written comments to Legislative Reference Office, P.O. Box 365, Oneida, WI 54155.

I would like to also note that there are a total of seven proposed legislative items that have been scheduled for public hearings in upcoming weeks. You can find information on these public hearings on the Tribal website as well as in this issue of the Kalihwisaks. Three public hearings will be held on May 23 and the remaining four will be held on May 26, 2011. We hope to see you there!

Frequently Asked Questions
Oneida Tribal General Election Primary

How will the election process be different for the 2011 General Election?

In 2011, a Primary Election will be held. In years past there was no primary election.

What is a primary?

Excerpts from Oneida Tribal Election Law:

2.12-2. There shall be a primary election for Business Committee positions whenever there are three (3) or more candidates for any officer positions or sixteen (16) or more candidates for the at-large council member positions.

(a) The two (2) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for each officer position shall be placed on the ballot.

(b) The fifteen (15) candidates receiving the highest number of votes cast for the at-large council member positions shall be placed on the ballot.

(c) Any position where a tie exists to determine the candidates to be placed on the ballot shall include all candidates where the tie exists.

2.12-3. The Election Board shall cancel the primary election if the Business Committee positions did not draw the requisite number of candidates for a primary by the petitioning deadline set for the primary.

2.12-4. In the event a candidate withdraws or is unable to run for office after being declared a winner in the primary, the Election Board shall declare the next highest primary vote recipient the primary winner. This procedure shall be repeated as necessary until the ballot is full or until there are no available candidates. If the ballot has already been printed, the procedures for notifying the Oneida public in section 2.5-11 and 2.5-12 shall be followed, including the requirement to print a notice in the Tribal newspaper if time lines allow.

Why have a primary?

To give members a chance to select from fewer candidates or the Business Committee positions in the General Election.

Will there be a primary for all vacancies?

No. The primary election is for Business Committee vacancies only.

When will the primary be held?

On Saturday, May 7, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

If there are only two candidates running for an officer position, will a primary still be held for that position?

No. The primary is designed to get the top two candidates for each officer position. If only two applicants run for that position, each applicant will automatically be placed on the General Election ballot as a candidate.

If a candidate didn't advance in the primary, can I write their name on my ballot at the General Election?

No. Write-in candidates are not allowed.

When will the Caucus be held?

On Saturday, March 12, 2011 at the Norbert Hill Center at 1:00 p.m.

Is the Caucus just for vacancies within the Business Committee?

No, the Caucus will be for ALL vacancies of all boards, committees, and commissions with elected positions to be filled at the 2011 General Election.

When can I submit application for candidacy?

Officially this is done at the Caucus by being nominated and submitting the required application by the deadline date to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

If I can't attend the Caucus, can I still submit my application to be a candidate?

Yes. You will need to complete a petition and submit the required application by the deadline date.

How long do I have to submit an application to become a candidate?

All applications are due by 4:30 p.m. on Friday, March 18, 2011 to the Tribal Secretary's Office.

When is the General Election?

On Saturday, July 16, 2011 at the Oneida Health Center and the SEOTS Building in Milwaukee. Polls will be open from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.

When can I begin campaigning?

Whenever you wish.

Excerpt from Oneida Election Law: 2.5-9. Campaign Signs and Campaigning:

(a) Placement of campaign signs:

(1) Campaign signs shall not be posted or erected on any Tribal property except for private property with the owner/tenant's permission.

(2) No campaign sign shall exceed sixteen (16) square feet in area. A maximum of seven (7) such signs may be placed on a building or on a lot.

(3) No campaign sign shall project beyond the property line into the public right of way.

(b) Removal of campaign signs. All campaign signs shall be removed within five (5) business days after an election.

(c) Employees of the Tribe shall not engage in campaigning for Tribal offices during work hours. Tribal employees shall be subject to disciplinary action under the personnel policies and procedures for political campaigning during work hours.

(d) Enforcement. The Zoning Administrator shall cause to be removed any campaign signs that are not in compliance with this law, in accordance with the Zoning and Shoreland Protection Law.

(e) Fines. Violation of the campaign sign restrictions shall result in a fine imposed by the Election Board in an amount specified in a resolution adopted by the Business Committee.

Can I vote by absentee ballot?

No. Article III Section 2 of the Constitution states "All enrolled members of the Oneida Tribe of Indians of Wisconsin who are 21 years of age or over shall be qualified voters provided they present themselves in person at the polls on the day of election."

Will the Milwaukee voting site be open for both the primary and general election?

Yes. Business Committee Resolution 03-13-2002-O states: "NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: that an approved facility; compliance with the Oneida Election Law, 2.8-0, Section B, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is hereby designated as a second polling site for Oneida triennial elections, beginning with the July, 2002, election." The SEOTS Building is located at 6820 West Wedgewood Drive, Milwaukee, WI.

Hill stated Oneida has an intergovernmental agreement with Wisconsin that will create engineering jobs for Oneida Tribal Integrated Enterprises (OTIE) as well as opportunities for Oneida entrepreneurs.

"Whether it's trucking, signage, building products, labor, not only for our own private sector, but there's also an opportunity for OTIE and the engineering area as well," said Hill.

The designation as an interstate would need to be approved by the Federal Highway Authority. Improvements to Highway 41 would have to include widening the corridor as well as meeting overpass height requirements and safety standards.

"As long as we're making upgrades and improvements along the way, we make sure we do them so it fits the interstate standards," said Walker.

Construction will begin in the Green Bay area in at the WIS 29 and County J intersection in June and continue through May of 2012. The interstate designation will run from Green Bay to Milwaukee. The cost to make the improvements is estimated to be between $15 and $20 million.

Public Hearing Notice

9:00AM Norbert Hill Center (BCCR)

May 23, 2011

Purpose:
Amendments to the Child Custody, Placement and Visitation law to Address a Parent Move.
The intent of these Amendments is to require a parent with physical custody of a child to provide notice to the other parent prior to moving outside of the state. The Amendments also provide a mechanism for the non-custodial parent to object and a hearing to be held. The Amendments are based on a request submitted by the Oneida Appeals Commission.

Purpose:
Oneida Tribal Regulation of Domestic Animals Ordinance Amendments.
The purpose of these amendments is to grandfather in those individuals who have more animals than allowed under the Tribe's law, if they had those animals on the land before they became subject to the jurisdiction of the Tribe. The amendments would also allow an individual to operate a kennel on land zoned residential, if he or she obtains a permit from the Land Commission which allows the kennel. Finally, the amendments clarify the type of land the Ordinance applies to and allows individuals to appeal fines and citations to the Environmental Resource Board.

Purpose:
Amendments to Address Guardians Ad Litem Appointments and Conflicts of Interest.
The intent of these amendments is to prevent conflicts of interest in the appointment of guardians ad litem. The provisions for appointing a guardian ad litem are located in the Child Custody, Placement, and Visitation law. Under the amendments, a person would be disqualified for appointment as a guardian ad litem for a particular case if he or she is related to an interested party, an actual party, a Commissioner for the proceeding, or to an appointing Commissioner. Amendments to the Paternity law and Child Support law are also included in order to reference the Child Custody, Placement and Visitation law's standards for guardian ad litem appointments.

Purpose:
Hunting, Fishing and Trapping Law Amendments.
The purpose of these amendments is to update the Hunting, Fishing and Trapping Law for the 2011-2012 season. The Amendments would allow ten and eleven-year olds to obtain a sportsman license to hunt after completing a hunter safety course, if he or she remains within arms grasp of a mentor while hunting; obeys all hunting laws and regulations; and obtains the necessary licenses, permits and/or tags. The Amendments also outline the requirements that a person must meet in order to be a mentor to a ten or eleven-year old hunter.
In addition, the Amendments would allow tree stands to remain up until April 1st, as opposed to two weeks after the end of archery season; require a buck to have at least 4 points in order to be harvested; limit a designated hunter to hunting for one elder or disabled person; legalize colony traps; require individuals to obtain a permit before possessing or releasing birds for dog training purposes; and allow non-Indians to obtain a predator's license to hunt fox, coyote and raccoon on the Reservation.

Purpose:
Purpose: Indian Preference in Contracting Law Adoption.
The Indian Preference in Contracting law would replace the current Oneida Indian Preference Law, which was originally adopted in 1998 and last amended in 2003. The purposes of the law are to 1) expand the application of preference in contracting, thus increasing economic opportunities for tribal businesses, and 2) to prevent increased Tribal costs due to misuse of Indian preference entitlement.

Purpose:
Amendments to the Per Capita Ordinance.
The intent of these Amendments is to:
- Adopt a fine of 1/3 of the balance of the trust account to penalize those individuals who submit fraudulent proof of a diploma when claiming their trust account funds.
- Prohibit someone who is dually enrolled in the Oneida Tribe and another Tribe from being eligible for a per capita payment.
- Outline how a Tribal member may refuse a per capita payment or trust account payment.
- Clarify how prior payments may be claimed and how they are distributed.
- Prohibit a per capita payment to a Tribal member whose date of death occurs before the payment is distributed.
- Authorize the Trust Committee to establish additional payment dates, as needed, with Oneida Business Committee (OBC) approval.

Purpose:
Voluntary Severance Law Adoption.
The purpose of this law is to govern voluntary severance by creating the authorities and responsibilities of various Tribal entities when a voluntary severance is available to employees of the Tribe. The Law allows the Oneida Business Committee to reduce the Tribe's workforce, based on financial conditions, through the enactment of a voluntary severance. Under the Law, the Human Resource Department and the Executive Managers are responsible for informing employees of the voluntary severance and making the final determination as to whether an employee is eligible to receive a severance. The intent of the Law is not to terminate employees based on performance issues and applies only to those employees who voluntarily resign from the Tribe.

Public Hearing Process Testimony:
Oral: There will be a 5 minute limit for all oral presentations. Each participant is encouraged to provide a written transcript of his/her oral testimony, to be submitted while present at the public hearing or within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the below named individuals.
Written: For those who cannot attend the scheduled public hearing or do not plan to speak at the hearing, the Oneida Tribe encourages those to submit written testimony. A maximum of ten (10) pages, doubled spaced, can be submitted within ten (10) business days from the date of public hearing to the Tribal Secretary (Patricia Hoeft) or Tonya Boucher, Legislative Reference Office at the Norbert Hill Center, 2nd floor or mail to PO Box 365, Oneida WI 54155.
If you would like to obtain a copy of the above proposed law or have any questions as to the public hearing process you may contact Tonya Boucher at the Legislative Reference Office, via GroupWise tboucher@oneidanation.org Or call 1-800-236-2214 or 920-869-4376*. Oneida Tribal Judicial System

Quarterly Summaries for Jan. - Mar. 2011

Initial Review

Rule 9(D) – Criteria for Acceptance:
The Initial Review Body shall accept an appeal for appellate review if one or more of the following elements are sufficiently alleged to exist in the original hearing body decision by the Appellant in the Notice of Appeal:

(1) A violation of constitutional provisions;
(2) The decision is outside the scope of the authority or otherwise unlawful;
(3) The decision is clearly erroneous and is against the weight of the evidence presented at the hearing level;
(4) The decision is arbitrary and/or capricious;
(5) There is exhibited a procedural irregularity which would be considered a harmful error that may have contributed to the final decision, which if the error had not occurred, would have altered the final decision;
(6) There is a presentation or introduction of new evidence that was not available at the hearing level which, if available, may have altered the final decision.

To conserve time and space provided, the Oneida Tribal Judicial System will only put into print the Initial Review Decisions which have been denied. The cases that have been accepted at Initial Review will be published when the final adjudication has been entered.

Denied Initial Review Decisions

Matthew E. Ellis v. Division of Land Management. Docket No. 10-AC-033, January 6, 2011. Judicial Officers Winnifred L. Thomas, Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless presiding. Denied according to Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 9(E) Failure of Allegations. Appellant failed to sufficiently allege one of the criteria of Rule 9(D). This case denied.

Mary L. Brocker v. Anna John Nursing Home, Sherri Lansbach. Docket No. 11-AC-001, January 19, 2011. Judicial Officers Winnifred L. Thomas, Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless presiding. Remanded to the Oneida Personnel Commission to hold a hearing on the original merits of the case, in accordance with RAP, Rule 9(B)(2): If not ripe for Appellate review, the Initial Review body will determine what original hearing body has subject matter jurisdiction over the case.

Mary Brocker v. Anna John Nursing Home, Sherri Lannsbach. Docket No. 11-AC-006, March 25, 2011. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless, Winnifred Thomas presiding. Denied according to Rules of Appellate Procedure, Rule 9(E) Failure of Allegations. Appellant failed to sufficiently allege one of the criteria of Rule 9(D). This case denied.

Appellate Court Decisions

Steven Huff v. Oneida Bingo & Casino, Slot Department, Dan Stevens. Docket No. 10-AC-018, February 15, 2011. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless, Winnifred L. Thomas, Jennifer Webster and Stanley R. Webster presiding. This case was an appeal of an Oneida Personnel Commission (OPC) decision which upheld, Appellant, Steven Huff's termination for violation of Oneida Personnel Policies and Procedures, Section V.D.2.II.a "Failure to report promptly and observe work schedules…without the specific approval of the supervisor" and Section V.D.3.c "Accumulated Disciplinary Actions Warranting Termination". Mr. Huff claimed his supervisor's failure to adhere to Section V.D.5.e requiring him to send a copy of the disciplinary action to the area manager and gaming manager, created a procedural irregularity in the disciplinary process. OPC ruled in its decision to uphold the termination and that while there may have been procedural irregularities exhibited during the disciplinary process, "past practice has set a precedent for implementing Section V.D.5.e…" The supervisors failure to adhere to the Blue Book (requiring copies of the termination be sent to the area manager and general manager) was not a procedural irregularity that caused harm to Mr. Huff. This Appellate body found there was no procedural irregularity in the OPC's process of reasoning in itself, however, there was a procedural irregularity when they ruled there had been no previous appeal challenging this violation. This case was an appeal, a challenge and should have been acted upon. All laws and rules of the Oneida Tribe are valid and in full force and effect unless shown otherwise. This irregularity was found to be a harmless error, no evidence in the record that this failure to follow the rule resulted in any tangible harm or error which required reversal of the termination. Mr. Huff was terminated for violations of Section V.D.2.II.a and V.D.3.c of the Blue Book which he did not argue. Termination upheld.

Lee Thomas v. Oneida Tribe Financial Department, Lawrence Barton. Docket No. 10-AC-011, December 22, 2011. Pro Tem Judicial Officers Todd R. Matha, Stephan M. Grochowski, Marianne Higgins, Robert Miller, Jr. and James B. Mohr presiding. This case was an appeal of an Oneida Personnel Commission (OPC) decision which upheld a (3) day suspension due to an "unauthorized release of the Bay Bank Loan Report." On January 27, 2010 the Oneida Business Committee directed the Bay Bank President to provide the small business loan 2000 reports by Friday, January 29, 2010. Subsequently, on January 29, 2010, Tribal Secretary Patti Hoeft independently requested the reports from Jennifer Schabow, Accounting Manager-Programs and Mr. Thomas approved the delivery to Ms. Hoeft. As a result, Mr. Barton, Supervisor issued Mr. Thomas a 3-day suspension for "unauthorized release of the Bay Bank Loan Report." Mr. Thomas objected to the discipline on three (3) principal grounds: 1) no records were released outside the Tribe; 2) the record delivery did not materially differ from similar past instances over a span of five (5) years, without Respondents pre-authorization; and 3) the records did not contain confidential information. OPC found the documents released had personal information and were released without the consent of parties and the parties could be hurt if the report was released to the public. Mr. Thomas alleged the OPC decision to be clearly erroneous and against the weight of the evidence. The Appellate body agreed. They emphasized that Mr. Thomas did not distribute the bank records outside the Tribe, but to the Tribal Secretary. OPC found the apparent absence of consent by the account holders, however neither party, not the Business Committee ever insisted or mentioned this condition. Mr. Barton indicated he should have pre-authorized the record delivery, but offered no testimony or documentation to support. The second OPC finding of "too much information" contained in the records was ambiguous. Inasmuch as no public release of information occurred, this argument fails. The Personnel Commission decision overturned, suspension overturned.

Department of Public Works, Rosa John, Custodial Supervisor v. Aaron Menchski. Docket No. 10-AC-027, March 16, 2011. Judicial Officers Janice L. McLester, Lois Powless, Winnifred L. Thomas, Jennifer Webster and Stanley R. Webster presiding. This case was an appeal by Rosa John, Custodial Supervisor, Department of Public Works, of an Oneida Personnel Commission (OPC) decision which overturned Respondent, Aaron Mencheski's termination. On June 14, 2010 Mr. Mencheski was terminated for violation of Oneida Personnel Policies and Procedures, Section V.D.3.b Accumulated Disciplinary Actions warranting Termination, "The accumulation of two (2) upheld suspensions within any twelve (12) month period. (T)". Ms. John alleged the OPC to be clearly erroneous by failing to consider evidence presented as to why there was a legitimate reason the five day rule in accordance with Section V.D.5 Disciplinary Procedure was not met. OPC found Ms. John's inaction of following up on the status of whether or not Mr. Mencheski appealed his April 5, 2010 discipline to the OPC to be fatal. Ms. John issued the termination more than two (2) months after the discipline had been issued. OPC decision upheld, termination overturned.

Trial Court Decisions

Donald J. Denny v. Oneida HRD-Benefits and Crawford & Company. Docket No. 10-TC-088, January 7, 2011. Judicial Officers Leland Wigg-Ninham, Mary Adams, Stanley Webster presiding. This case arose out of a work place injury suffered by Donald Denny. Mr. Denny sought additional benefits in the form of medical treatment and compensation for a 10% permanent partial disability. The court denied Mr. Denny's claim for his failure to prove his claim for 10% permanent partial disability.

Sharon Cornelius vs. Oneida HRD-Benefits and Crawford Insurance. Docket No. 10-TC-194, March 7, 2011. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Jean M. Webster and Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This case arose out of a work place injury suffered by Sharon Cornelius. This situation was unique; employee, Sharon Cornelius, fainted due to her diabetic health conditions, which cause her injury. Ms. Cornelius was working during a "Code D". The criteria for the "Code D" exposed Ms. Cornelius to those conditions or circumstances beyond those common to occupational life and is predominantly work related. Furthermore, the Court found it persuasive that Ms. Cornelius' supervisor knew she was diabetic and denied her the necessary break, even when Ms. Cornelius notified the supervisor she was beginning to feel dizzy and light headed.

The Court granted Ms. Cornelius's requests of coverage for her medical bills and loss of wages provided they were consistent with the Workers' Compensation Ordinance.

Lisa Marie Summers v. Oneida Business Committee. Docket No. 10-TC-217, March 14, 2011. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Sandra Skenadore and Jean M. Webster pesiding. Petitioner, Ms. Summers was requesting reinstatement of the original accumulation of employee personal time by one (1) day. Mrs. Summers filed a Motion to Voluntarily Dismiss without Prejudice, claiming the parties have come to an agreement. The Court granted the motion.

Lisa M. Behringer vs. Michael T. Behringer. Docket No. 10-DI-004, March 4, 2011. Judicial Officers Mary Adams, Jean M. Webster and Leland Wigg-Ninham presiding. This is a divorce action. Petitioner, Mrs. Behringer, filed a motion to dismiss. The Court granted the motion to dismiss.

Complete copy of the decisions can be obtained at the Oneida Tribal Judicial System office and can be viewed from the Oneida Internet. Submitted by Janice L. McLester.

Oneida Legal Resource Center

By Attorney Charlene Smith
Legal Resource Center

The Legal Resource Center (LRC) is for tribal members who have legal issues and tribal employees who have employment issues. The LRC staff is available for free legal consultations by appointment.

Due to the expansion of the Oneida tribal jurisdiction with the recent adoption of tribal laws relating to family law, more cases will be heard in the Oneida Tribal Judicial System (OTJS) for members who would otherwise have to file and appear in state court. This is an opportunity for members to have their legal disputes addressed/settled in their own court by tribal judicial officers. It is beneficial for the tribe as a whole as it exercises our sovereign right to self govern.

The services are offered to Oneida tribal members for a fee. The legal services include family law litigation at the OTJS, pro-se divorce paperwork, name changes, wills, power of attorney documents, eviction defense (OHA and DOLM only), small claims, and legal procedure information. There may be legal issues that the LRC staff is not proficient in, but the staff will do their best to point the member in the right direction to get their legal questions answered and/or legal issues resolved. The LRC attorney also provides assistance and/or representation for tribal members in criminal matters and family law issues in local state courts.

The LRC continues to assist Oneida employees who work on the program side with their issues of employee dispute. An employee who has an employment dispute may consult with one of the LRC paralegals in regard to their rights and due process. There is no fee for this service.

Please call the LRC for more information or an appointment at (920) 496-5310.

The LRC is located at Ridgeview Plaza, in Suite 7 at 3759 w. Mason St.

Oneida Business Committee Recognizes Lady Thunderhawks' Success

By Lisa Rauschenbach
ONHS Athletic Director

Last week the BC recognized the Lady Thunderhawks on their successful basketball season. This recognition was very much appreciated and needed to show our girls how proud of them we are.

I would like to give some additional recognition to Coach Jamie Betters. Her commitment, hard work and perseverance to the ONHS basketball program has far exceeded any expectations that the Athletic Program has given her. Coach Betters has fueled a fire in not only our basketball program but the Athletic program as well this 2011 season. Her dedication, passion for coaching and lasting influence is one of the main reasons that the community came together to support these girls. Jamie started this season, trying to teach the fundamentals of basketball but ended up teaching so much more. Basic fundamentals quickly become lessons on being a team and helping one another to succeed. She spent countless hours both on and off the court teaching the girls the value of being a team player, commitment, looking out for one another, the importance of academics, being respectful, thankfulness, good sportsmanship, how to represent our community and most importantly to never give up on themselves.

For all of these reasons, Coach Betters deserves to be recognized as she is no "ordinary coach" but rather a mentor and investor into teaching our young ladies how to be student athletes. She has made a tremendous impact on the basketball program in the short time she has been with us and her first season's success is a direct reflection of that.

If and when you see Coach Betters, please thank her for everything she has done within the ONHS Athletic program. My hopes are to continue to mimic Ms. Betters' efforts and passion for helping our Oneida youth to set high expectations for seasons to come.

Community Input Needed

The Oneida Nation Museum is developing an exhibition schedule for the next 3-5 years. We are asking the community for suggestions for our upcoming exhibits. Please contact Sara Summers-Luedtke at (920) 869-6531 or ssumme2@oneidanation.org with any ideas on future exhibit topics or feedback from past exhibits. With your input, we can truly make this a community museum!

A Walk in Wisconsin's Woods

Nature writer Candice Gaukel Andrews weaves together contemporary observations and historical reminisces in "Beyond the Trees: Stories of Wisconsin Forests" ($26.95, ISBN: 978-0-87020-467-8), the latest release from the Wisconsin Historical Society Press. Andrews tells the story of Wisconsin's forests through its inhabitants, landscapes, and myriad changes both natural and man-made. Far from a static guidebook, "Beyond the Trees" characterizes Wisconsin's state and national forests as distinct and vibrant entities, each a unique reservoir of biodiversity and history.

Readers will walk in the footsteps of Ojibwe hunters and early explorers, trek past the remains of bygone logging and CCC camps, and glimpse into the world of Great Lakes shipping. Whether explored on trails named after John Muir and Increase Lapham, or experienced in an urban green space, the orchids and oak savannah, beaver and brook trout, white-tailed deer and timber wolves of Wisconsin's forests are waiting to be discovered. Inviting contemporary color photographs, archival images, informative sidebars, locator maps, and contact information for Wisconsin state and national forests round out this unique book.

The Oneida Nation High School Lacrosse team faced off against the DePere Redbirds on April 3rd at DePere High School. The Redbirds were the first to score in the game but Oneida quickly answered with a score of their own. The Thunderhawks never gave up their lead, battling to a three goal advantage. Oneida managed to hold off DePere's late rally for a 7-6 victory. The Thunderhawks next game is Thursday, May 12 at Bay Port High School.

OSGC Appreciates Support at GTC

Oneida Seven Generations Corporation wants to thank all those who attended the recent GTC meeting to ask questions and voice their support for OSGC's proposed renewable energy project. The facility, to be located on Green Bay's far northwest side will take municipal solid waste (MSW) and, through a Pyrolysis - gasification system, turn it into energy.

"We greatly appreciate the many comments and questions tribal members had about the project," said OSGC Chief Executive Officer, Kevin Cornelius. "It showed the community wanted to learn more, and hear from the experts, about how the system works and the many benefits to the environment as well as the Tribe. We appreciate their support."

Among the environmental benefits:

- The facility will be able to process up to 150 tons of MSW daily, reducing the amount of waste going into area landfills. Currently, approximately 500 to 600 tons of MSW is transferred daily at the Brown County Waste Transfer Station.
- The facility will meet all public health and safety rules and requirements of the DOE, WDNR, EPA and OSHA. The facility will not be allowed to be built, or operate, unless it meets all requirements.

In addition to the technology and environmental benefits, various financial aspects of the project were discussed. It was stressed that:

- No money from Oneida Tribal government is invested in the project.
- The BIA loan guarantee is tied only to the project and NOT the tribe.

"We've done our due diligence in moving forward with this project," stated Cornelius. "Plus, we are now working with a local government that wants us to be there. Our relationship with, and assistance from, the City of Green Bay has been nothing but positive. This is a good project for everyone involved."

For more information about the OSGC renewable energy facility, go to www.osgc.net or feel free to contact the OSGC office at (920) 347-0500. "Our door is always open to those who are interested in our projects or have questions," said Cornelius.

Remembering Maple Tapping

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Three generations gathered to hear my Grandmother Marjorie Broberg remember when her grandparents Lavina and Simon Metoxen would tap maple trees on their property when Marjorie was a young girl. My aunt Susan Lemens, my mother Maxine Thomas and myself, Dawn Walschinski, drank tea and listened to her stories.

"I remember my grandparents had a little woods back of their place, and they would cut down trees, but they would leave all the maples up, and they called them sugar maples. They would tap them in the spring time, and my uncle and grandfather would hang pails on the tapped trees," said Marjorie.

"My grandparents had great big milk cans, and they would pour the sap in there," she explained. "My grandmother had a big black kettle, and they would pour all the sap in there. Then they made a fire, and it had to keep going day and night."

When the syrup was the right thickness, Marjorie's grandmother would put the finished product into pint jars to share with everyone who helped.

"Then they would have a nice pancake breakfast, and they would put maple syrup on it," she said.

Maxine, an Oneida Culture and Language Teacher at the Oneida Nation School System (ONSS), explained the ONSS students bartered maple syrup with schools up north for wild rice for the annual family feast.

"Someone in the family needed to go up there every year to help with their wild rice, so that they could bring some home," said Marjorie who had an aunt that lived in Odanah, Wisc. "I always thought wild rice tasted so good."

From 1A/Farewell to Potack

Potack's importance in helping shape the youth of the Oneida community was not unnoticed by Sharon Mousseau, the school's Superintendent.

"Language and Culture have always been at the center of our school," said Mousseau. "Culture is who we are and we have to teach it."

Parents were notified of Potack's death in a letter sent home with students on Friday, April 29. The letter advises that students were told of her death and provided counseling services.

Potack's death pushed the school's crisis plan into action shortly after the school was notified.

"I am glad we have that in place. I was gone and everyone knew what to do." Mousseau said. The plan details the process of handling crisis situations and each staff member knows their role within the plan.

With the loss of Potack, the school will be even more shorthanded in the culture area due to a retirement last year. Currently under cost containment measures that prohibit new hires the school will turn to a substitute teacher for the rest of the school year. The school also recognizes the challenge of replacing her.

"Carol's position was not tribally funded so we will be able to post her job," Mousseau. "But people don't go to school to teach culture and heritage. You have to know it and have patience with kids like she did."

Potack served in the Oneida Nation School System for 26 years.

"We're going to miss her," said Mousseau. "That's what everyone is saying."

From 6A/Letters & Opinions

overwhelmingly voted to TABLE the Judiciary Act for six (6) months to allow any interested GTC members to work together to clean up the disastrous, confusing and ambiguous Judiciary Act that was presented to the GTC as a final work product of the OBC in January 2011. To allow a petition to UNTABLE before the August 2011 GTC meeting is total disregard for the directive of the Oneida General Tribal Council. To make matters worse, they scheduled it on a Monday night. A reasonable and responsible person would schedule such an important issue for a Saturday to ensure the greatest amount of participation of the membership given the fact the Judiciary Act has the potential to impact every single Oneida Tribal Member. From little bitty babies right up to our elders. It is my understanding Councilman Brandon Yellowbird-Stevens joined in with Loretta Metoxen and Sherole Benton to lead this effort immediately following the Judiciary Act meeting held in January 2011, because "they" did not get what they wanted. The Judiciary Workgroup is trying to work diligently to formulate a Judiciary Act that is reasonable and requires qualifications, competence, responsibility and accountability. But it is difficult to do this when there are so many abusive and inappropriate activities occurring during the meetings. The meetings have actually become a hostile environment. I do not like the inappropriate behaviors that are displayed. We have bulldogs and bull dozers running rampant with no controls. Elders being attacked and put down when they try to express how they feel about a topic. And I do not understand for the life of me why Councilwoman Trish King does not stop the inappropriate and abusive behaviors as they occur. I attend the Judiciary workgroup meeting to work on creating a law that is in the best interest of all our people, not for just a select few and not for certain family members. Our people attend the workgroup meetings to share ideas and give positive input. They do not go to the meetings to get attacked or put down by Sherole Benton. I do not think we should allow a few bullies to disturb a GTC directive. Nor do I think we should allow the Oneida Business Committee to blow our money on a meeting that is not scheduled to convene until August 2011. Again … they keep telling us we don't have any money, but they can call a GTC meeting to promote the self interest of a small group of people and violate the directives of the GTC.

Linda Dallas

Unfortunate NIGA Incident

Dear Editor,

An ugly, violent incident occurred at the National Indian Gaming Association (NIGA) Convention in Phoenix, Arizona against our Tribal Treasurer, Christina Danforth. This incident occurred as a violation of her right to express her freedom of speech. That the attack was condoned and encouraged by other Oneida Tribal members makes it a further violation of human rights. The incident brings dishonor to the group of Oneidas who perpetrated this in their attempt to discredit the Treasurer. It was an Oneida tribal member, the wife of one of our Business Committee members, who purposely followed, and verbally and physically, accosted Ms. Danforth in front of a large number of witnesses at the meeting. There is no justification for this uncouth lack of civility. I believe we all would agree that politics can become ugly and out of control. But, whether it is the larger politics of the United States or our local Oneida people at the NIGA Convention in Phoenix, Arizona, it is completely uncalled for.

The historical and traditional heritage of our Oneida culture, specifically, the Great Law of Peace, put an end to the violence and disrespect of one human being to another. The hatchet of violence was buried long ago. The Great Law of Peace is not some mythical fairytale that our children learn in school, but it is the stronghold system of beliefs that our grandparents, our ancestors, were raised under. The Great Law of Peace is not a story for us to dangle in front of the faces of non-Indians on a world stage, so we can brag about our great government. It is meant to give our families, our children, our neighbors, our community a system of respect (a way of daily life) without violence. The Great Law of Peace begins at home. It is to be practiced in our tribal governmental affairs as the guide of proper, civilized behavior. It is the guide that we, as representatives of Oneida, take with us in the national arena of politics. The Great Law of Peace seems to have been forgotten and left behind when our Oneida tribal members attended the NIGA convention two weeks ago. They acted in a very disrespectful manner to one of our public officials. Differences of opinions will always exist in our tribal politics. However, respect should also be included with those differing opinions.

Respectfully,
Catherine Webster

Nation within a Nation

Dear Rep Steineke,

I want to let you know I oppose your bill you are working on to introduce regarding the Oneida Tribe and their liquor license.

As you may not know the Oneida Tribe like every other tribe is a Nation within a Nation and the Oneidas have officially existed here, in the Wisconsin territory, since 1821-2 but were established in 1838; 10 years before the state of WI became a state in 1848.

Based on the article from the Seymour Times Press (dated April 18, 2011) it is in my opinion that you do not recognize the Oneida Nation of WI as a government. The Oneidas of WI entered into a treaty with the United States in 1822 for the area where they reside and call home today. Their (Oneidas) agreements should be made and formed between the State or Federal Government; Thus they should be treated simular to a local government but more as a sovereign nation within a nation. As a sovereign nation / government they have the right to govern and license themselves; they should not be required to obtain such permission and permits from a local government.

Your current action and statements made in the Times Press leads me to believe again that you voted in favor of the WI State Budget Bill that you did not read or debate. Your previous response to me was that you voted for the WI Budget because otherwise it meant layoffs; it is evident there are many other items in the bill PASSED by YOU that will have far greater consequences to all Wisconsinites. In conclusion, as a voter I strongly oppose your action to create this bill against their rights to govern themselves as a Sovereign Nation.

Respectfully,
Chris Cornelius

Oneida hosts U.S. Department of Education

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

The U.S. Department of Education held an urban Indian Listening and Learning session with the Native community, tribal leaders, and Native student-serving representatives at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center on April 26.

The session was intended to provide an opportunity to voice thoughts and engage in dialogue with senior officials from the Department. The session was one of several Listening and Learning sessions held in urban Native communities and is a follow-up to a series of 2010 Tribal leader consultations that were conducted in Anchorage, AK; Santa Clara Pueblo, NM; Shawnee, OK; Pine Ridge, SD; Window Rock, AZ; and Puyallup, WA.

Representatives from a variety of Tribes were in attendance including Oneida, Menominee, Ho-Chunk, and Potawatomi as well as a handful of Tribes from outside the state of Wisconsin.

During the session representatives had an opportunity to step up to the microphone and voice their concerns, ideas, needs, and opinions in an attempt to improve the state of Native education.

As each representative took their turn on the microphone a few recurring themes began to emerge.

One glaring concern was the need for improved communication between the different education entities. Improved communication would allow not only needs and concerns to be heard in a timely manner, but it would also allow for consistency across the board. Aside from the consistency, areas would also be able to communicate with other areas in order to solve problems they are not used to that other areas may have experience in.

American Indian Education Program Coordinator Diane Tigges voices her ideas and concerns with members of the US Department of Education. The Department visited the Radisson Hotel & Conference Center on Tuesday, April 26th as part of their Urban Indian Listening & Learning Sessions.

Another dominant concern was the notion that teachers do not have the knowledge of the culture in which they are teaching. Some examples were cited by representatives indicating that students were punished or scolded by teachers simply because the teachers did not know that certain mannerisms or actions are part of the area's culture. The Department did state that there are summer workshops that educate teachers in Native culture, but did acknowledge the fact that this knowledge needs to learned and used in the classroom.

At the conclusion of the session the Department thanked those who participated for their honest approach and insightful criticism. The Department is committed to moving forward in Native education and anticipates that interactions among Tribal, State, and Local officials, Indian education stakeholders, and the Department will lead to a more effective education policy.

Casinos sense opening in online poker indictments

By Oskar Garcia
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS - The indictments that led to three major online poker companies shuttering U.S. operations have provided an opening for American casinos to cash in on an industry worth an untold billions of dollars.

Casinos want to fill the void created by the crackdown to create their own online poker sites should the game become legal in the U.S., giving them tens of thousands of potential consumers who have seen their pastimes and livelihoods eliminated by the prosecutions.

Their argument: Americans are playing poker online despite attempts to stop them, so why not allow legitimate casinos to offer the game? They also argue that governments could clearly use tax revenue from poker games.

The push has gained momentum in the last week after billionaire casino mogul Steve Wynn and his counterpart at Caesars Entertainment Corp. spoke out in favor of clarifying federal laws to explicitly allow Internet poker.

Their advantage - if lawmakers ultimately see things the same way - is that it's unlikely PokerStars, Full Tilt Poker and Absolute Poker will be allowed back into the U.S. market while their executives face allegations of bank fraud, money laundering and running illegal gambling businesses.

Caesars CEO Gary Loveman told The Associated Press after penning an op-ed on the subject this week that the timing is right for casinos to publicly make their push.

"Our industry has to modernize itself in a way that allows its services to be provided electronically and not in these massively expensive brick-and-mortar facilities," Loveman said. "To speak to a younger audience, this is increasingly necessary."

Internet gambling was effectively banned in 2006 by a federal law that prohibited banks and credit card companies from processing payments from gambling companies to individuals. But it didn't clearly state what kind of gambling was illegal, and many believe it left the door open for states and companies to consider the issue.

"The policy up to now, which is no surprise to anybody, has been murky and arcane. Arcane is a good word from the SATs that means mysterious and unfathomable," said Wynn, the chief executive of Wynn Resorts Ltd. Wynn Resorts had a deal in place with PokerStars to partner in offering online poker to Americans if federal laws changed, but nixed the arrangement the same day the indictments were announced.

"Most everything in Washington is mysterious and unfathomable," Wynn told investors last week as his company reported its first-quarter earnings. "We're trying to figure out what the hell the public policy is and then we can have a corporate policy."

The Department of Justice has yet to pursue legal actions against anyone for playing poker based on the 2006 law. The recent charges dealt with allegations that the poker sites were creating third-party operations that tricked banks into thinking gambling transactions were legitimate.

"The word 'indictment' is not one that you take lightly. However, what they're indicting was the illegal activity of foreign operators in the United States," said Loveman. "The solution to that problem is not simply to send our law enforcement people out chasing foreign operators. The solution is to take a very simple pastime that's been around this country for hundreds of years, and allow licensed, regulated providers to provide it."

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, a former Nevada state gambling regulator who supported the 2006 law, shares that sentiment. Reid attempted to push a bill to legalize online poker at the end of last year, but it fell short. He said it's important that online poker is legalized in the next couple years.

"I hope we can get something done," Reid told the AP. "It's something that has to be regulated. The commodity is cash and we have to be very, very careful that we do it the right way when it deals with interstate commerce."

Players have heard that before, and while many have followed legislative developments, others didn't care as long as they could access the gambling sites.

John Pappas, executive director of the Poker Players Alliance, said the indictments served as a wakeup call.

Judge approves USDA, Indian farmers settlement

By Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A federal judge has approved a $680 million settlement between the Agriculture Department and American Indian farmers who say they were denied loans because of discrimination.

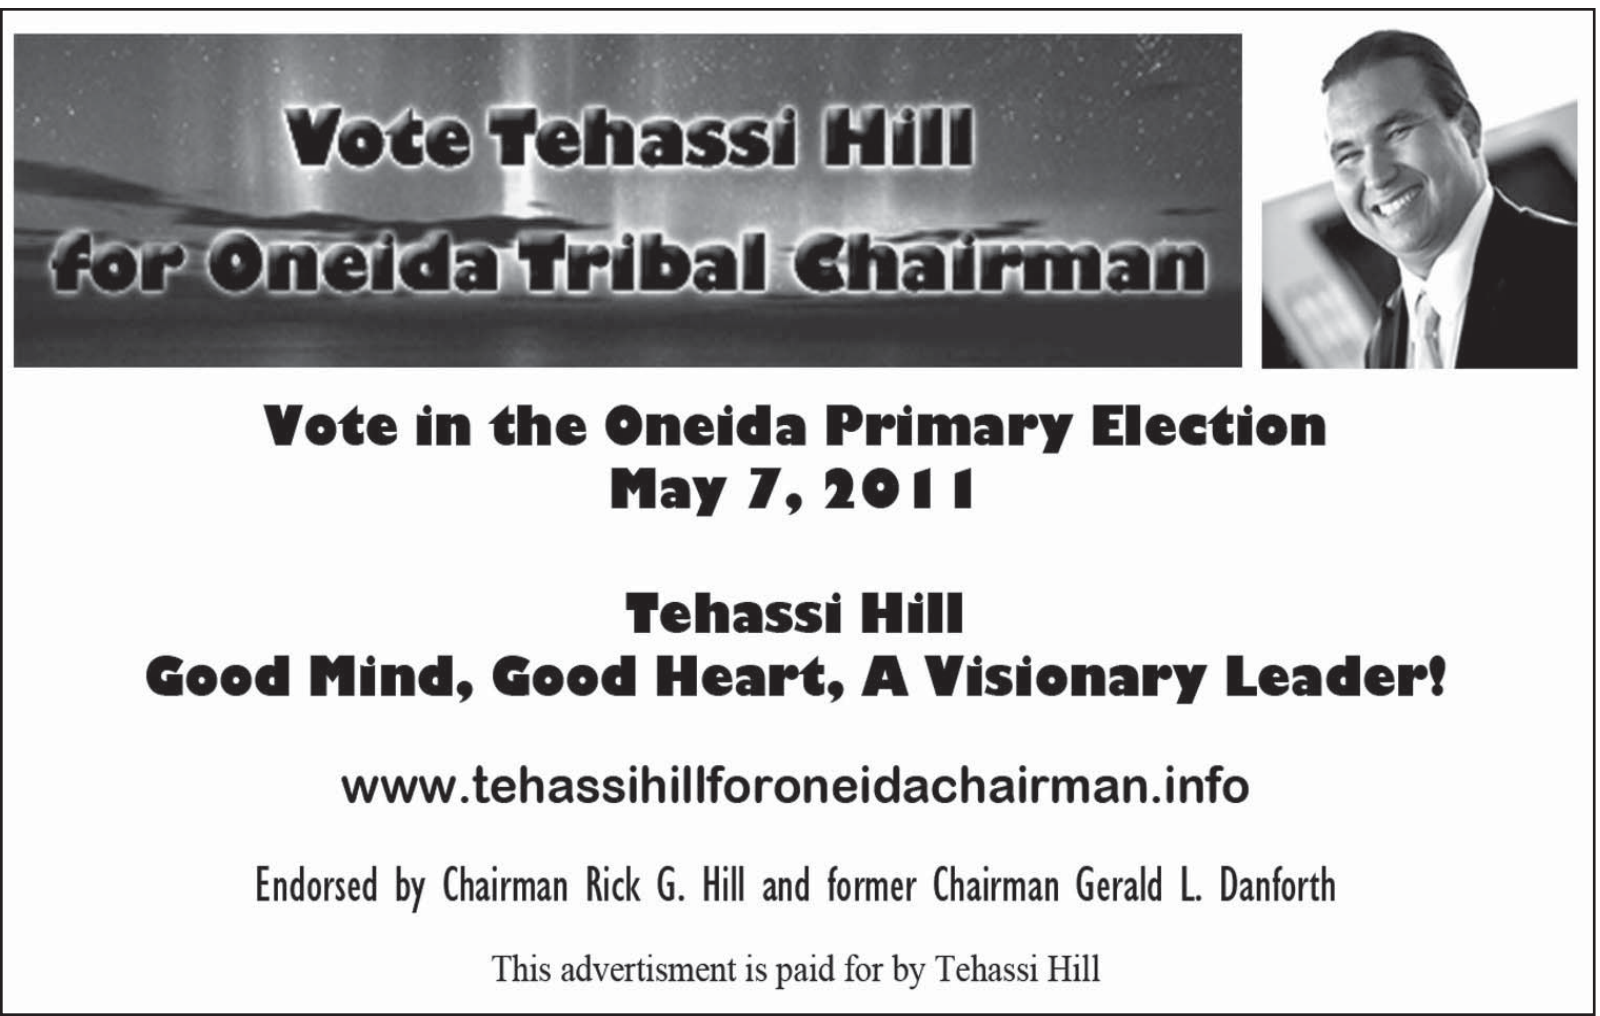
The two sides agreed on the deal last year subject to court approval. U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan approved the terms Thursday.

Individuals who can prove discrimination could receive up to $250,000 from the government. The agreement also includes $80 million in farm debt forgiveness for the Indian plaintiffs and a series of initiatives to try and alleviate racism against American Indians and other minorities in rural farm loan offices.

The lawsuit, named after George and Marilyn Keepseagle of Fort Yates, N.D., was filed in 1999 and contends Indian farmers and ranchers lost hundreds of millions of dollars over several decades because they were denied USDA loans that instead went to their white neighbors. The government settled a similar lawsuit filed by black farmers more than a decade ago and has offered to settle other suits brought against USDA by Hispanic and women farmers.

President Barack Obama said the settlement was "yet another important step forward in addressing an unfortunate chapter in USDA's civil rights history."

Obama praised the roles played by Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack and Attorney General Eric Holder in reaching the settlement.



"Today's approval of the settlement will help strengthen our nation to nation relationship with Indian Country and reinforce the idea that all citizens have a right to be treated fairly by their government," Obama said.

Due to the terms of the settlement, the American Indian money would not need legislative action to be awarded. Farmers will have until December to file their claims.

"This settlement will help thousands of Native Americans who are still farming and ranching," said Porter Holder of Soper, Okla., a named plaintiff in the suit. "The USDA has some terrific programs, but Native Americans must have equal access to them."

Agriculture Secretary Vilsack said his department is working on improving its civil rights record.

"We are committed to changing the culture that made this settlement necessary, and we believe we are well on the way to doing just that," he said.

SEOTS Volunteers Impact Community

By Mark W. Powless

If you are looking for expressions of Oneida's core values in the community, you need look no further than the volunteers of Southeastern Oneida Tribal Services. The individuals that assist SEOTS to provide programs and services display ka?nikuhliyo (the openness of the good spirit and mind) regularly for their community. Listed below are just a few of the individuals who donate their time and talents to making a positive difference in the Oneida community.

Susan Brandstetter: Susan helped design and create the newest expression of Oneida culture at SEOTS. The Circle of Life wall at SEOTS is a visual display that pays tribute to the ceremonies of Oneida culture. It offers images and descriptions that seek to educate the community about these integral events.

Mark R. Powless: For several years Mark has taught the Oneida language classes at SEOTS, while incorporating his own style of humor. Recently, participation in the classes has been amazing. The class is looking forward to doing a welcoming address, in the language, at the upcoming Oneida Community and Culture in Southeastern Wisconsin event being held at Greene Hall on the UWM campus on Saturday, May 21.

Phyllis Popovich: On a weekly basis Phyllis assists with set-up and clean-up for the Tuesday Elder activities. She is typically the first one in and the last one to leave and is very committed to the group she spends her Tuesday afternoons with. The Elder activities serve approximately 20 people and offer educational and/or fun events such as bingo, exercise, cultural education and more. In addition, a lunch time meal is available.

Richard Jones: SEOTS is regularly in need of drivers and Dick is always available to help. On occasion we have had to call Dick at the last minute and he has been more than happy to assist. SEOTS provides transportation to Oneida for appointments, casino gaming, cultural events, GTC meetings, and more.

Jim Kelly: Jim is a professional photography who offers his services, free of charge, for many SEOTS activities. He has also assisted for many activities such as elder activities, craft classes, and driving. Jim is always willing to help in any way that he can. His comfortable demeanor brings a relaxing energy to the events he attends.

These are just a few of the people that commit themselves to helping the Oneida community. Without our volunteers, SEOTS would not be able to have the impact on our community that we do. By opening their good spirits and minds to their friends and neighbors, they truly help to build a stronger and happier Oneida Nation!

Oneida artist finds success in new medium

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

Watercolor painter Dawn Dark Mountain has been creating works of art for some time. But recently her original designs have crossed over to Pendleton blankets, opening doors that will lift her work to new heights.

Dark Mountain has been working in watercolor and printmaking for 22 years, drawing inspiration from Iroquois stories, designs and culture. But having her art applied to Pendleton blankets was something she had not envisioned. Dark Mountain recalls, "As a watercolor painter I do not normally design blankets. My first experience working with blankets was with the Oneida tribal blanket in 2006."

Dark Mountain entered a watercolor sketch into the 2006 competition intended to create an official Pendleton blanket specifically for the Oneida Nation, Pendleton Woolen Mills then produced the design. This experience is what introduced her to blanket design.

Submitted photos

Left: Dawn Dark Mountain works on a watercolor painting. Right: Dark Mountain's "Sky Woman" design that has been worked into a blanket for Pendleton's regular line of blankets.

Recently the Pendleton Company contacted Dark Mountain expressing interest in using an image from Dark Mountain to create a blanket for their regular line. "Robert Christnacht, the Division Manager of "Home at Pendleton Woolen Mills" contacted me. He told me that after working with me on the custom design for Oneida, they had wanted to create a design for their regular line using one of my images," says Dark Mountain.

"This recent blanket, "Sky Woman" was created entirely based on my painting of the same name. They created several color designs using the image. After consulting with me, we chose a design and they sent me a prototype. After comparing it to the original image, I suggested a few changes that had to do with how the image was translated into a blanket design." The Sky Woman blanket can be viewed and purchased on the Pendleton website.

As for the future Dark Mountain will continue to create work and exhibit at art shows, fairs and Native art shows, markets and festivals.

The possibility to continue to create blanket designs remains open. "They (Pendleton) have expressed an interest in doing additional designs. I imagine that it would depend on how well the "Sky Woman" muchacho (baby) blanket sells. I understand that the first run, which came out in March, has sold out. The next run will be available soon."

NWTC Art Gallery features 'Contemporary Portraiture'

Green Bay - Albert Einstein, Marilyn Monroe, and Mother Teresa are just a few of the famous faces depicted in the Northeast Wisconsin Technical College Art Gallery's latest exhibit. "Contemporary Portraiture" by Green Bay artist Sherri Baierl is on view now through Monday, May 30.

To create the 17-piece collection, Baierl used acrylic, mixed media or digital graphics. Bearing titles such as "Honor," "Sincerity," and "Grace," the portraits are all based on words connoting values, according to Baierl.

"What am I learning from my art? That people want something true," Baierl said. "They are drawn in and captivated by people who share things that unveil that truth. No matter your background, point of view or anything else, if you respect one another enough to hear/see/experience those true things, then you will be changed."

Also part of Baierl's exhibit is a series of religious drawings, "The 14 Stations of the Cross."

Located in the Library on the second floor of the Student Center on the Green Bay campus, the gallery is open to the public during regular Library hours: Monday through Thursday, 7:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m.; Friday, 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; and Saturday, 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. For summer hours, go to www.nwtc.edu/library. Admission is free.

About the artist: Sherri Baierl is a certified art teacher, an adjunct instructor for NWTC, and a freelance graphics designer. Baierl often works with mixed media and collage with embedded graphics. She is also well-versed in working with multiple media, such as ceramics, print-making, drawing, painting, textiles, collage, photography, and graphics. Baierl enjoys the aspect of storytelling that can come from artwork or the discussion that it can prompt. For more information, visit the artist's web site at www.sherribaierl.com.

Going with the flow: Restoring Oneida's Waters

Thornberry Creek is a Class I Trout Stream and tributary to Lancaster Brook.

By Jim Snitgen
EH&SD

The Oneida Environmental Health & Safety Division's (EH&SD) water resources program is active in monitoring and restoring the surface waters of the Oneida Reservation. Restoration projects and water quality monitoring go hand-in-hand as projects to restore the aquatic health of streams should gradually show results in the data collected during monitoring. The first stream restoration project was initiated in 2003 on a headwater tributary to Trout Creek. Since then, several projects have been successfully implemented in the Trout Creek and Silver Creek watersheds. Partnerships with other agencies are critical for implementing stream restoration projects. These include cooperative relationships with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Natural Resource Conservation Service, the BIA, and the Fox River NRDA Trustee Council.

Oneida is currently taking advantage of stimulus funding for water quality programs, applying successfully for external grant funding through the BIA from the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative. One project will be Trout Creek stream channel restoration, which will enhance in-stream habitat by meandering the stream, planting a wooded corridor, grassed waterways, and using best management land-use practices to promote cool groundwater recharge. This and other efforts in the Trout Creek system will have major impacts on reestablishing fish passage and improving habitat.

Another project on Lancaster Brook will restore fish passage by removing and replacing failing culverts with bottomless arched box culverts. This initiative builds on previous habitat work and will allow trout to move up and downstream for better breeding and winter habitat. Lancaster Brook is classified as a Class II Trout Stream and has a Class I Trout Stream as a tributary (Thornberry Creek). Other projects in the planning and implementation stages include improvements to the South Branch of the Suamico River system and work in the Duck Creek watershed to improve northern pike habitat and water quality monitoring.

The EH&SD staff will continue the work of identifying funding sources for projects and coordinating with external agencies. Restoring Oneida's natural landscape and providing enhanced opportunities for tribal members to enjoy natural resources are our main goals. The EH&SD will continue cooperative, best management practices to improve the water quality essential to a beneficial quality of life on the Oneida Nation Reservation.

June 4 Graduation includes 'Firsts' for CMN

CEO of American Indian College Fund is Guest Speaker

Keshena, WI – During commencement ceremonies on Saturday, June 4, the College of Menominee Nation will introduce its newest group of alumni and observe a number of "firsts."

Approximately 140 individuals are candidates for graduation this year, making this the largest class in CMN history and bringing the number of CMN alumni to 700. Those receiving academic degrees, technical diplomas and certificates of mastery include students who completed studies in December 2010 and May 2011.

The graduation also finds CMN awarding its first four-year degrees and moving ceremonies to a new site. Six students will be receiving CMN Bachelor of Science degrees in the Early Childhood/Elementary Education. Location is another first. In a departure from previous years when ceremonies were held on CMN's main campus, this year's program will be in the Five Clans Ballroom in the new Menominee Casino Resort conference center in Keshena. Ceremonies begin at 10 A.M.

Richard B. "Rick" Williams

Guest speaker for the 2011 graduation is Richard B. "Rick" Williams. He serves as President and Chief Executive Officer of the American Indian College Fund, a national nonprofit organization based in Denver, Colorado, that secures private support for scholarships, endowments and programs for tribal colleges.

Williams has a long career in programs and organizations targeting Indian youth and education. He has held directorships in student services programs at the University of Colorado and in Upward Bound, and is well known as an educator, speaker, advocate and historian committed to increasing awareness of American Indian issues. A member of the Oglala Lakota Tribe with Northern Cheyenne heritage, he was the first American Indian student to graduate with a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Nebraska – Lincoln. He earned a Master of Arts in Education Administration from the University of Wyoming. He has been recognized by the University of Nebraska as an outstanding alumnus and presented with the honorary Doctor of Humane Letters by Roger Williams University.

This year's graduating class members represent a number of American Indian tribes and come from 28 Wisconsin communities: Antigo, Appleton, Birnamwood, Bowler, Cecil, Clintonville, De Pere, Forestville, Green Bay, Gresham, Hobart, Kaukauna, Keshena, Lac du Flambeau, Marion, Menasha, Neopit, New London, Oconto Falls, Oneida, Oshkosh, Scandinavia, Seymour, Shawano, Sturgeon Bay, Suamico, Suring and Wittenberg.

Pulaski Announces Administrator Appointments

The Pulaski Community School District Board of Education has approved administrator appointments for the 2011-2012 school year.

Kurtis Sufka, currently the principal at Farragut Elementary School in Joliet Illinois, will become the principal at Glenbrook Elementary. Mr. Sufka has also been a third and fifth grade teacher, a parent school coordinator and an assistant junior high school principal. He holds a Masters Degree in Educational Administration from Governors State University and a Bachelors of Science Degree in Elementary Education from Bemidji State University.

Marc Klawiter, currently the Associate Principal at Pulaski Community Middle School, will assume the principalship at Lannoye Elementary School. Klawiter holds a Bachelors Degree from University of Wisconsin – Eau Claire in K-8 education and a Master's Degree in Educational Leadership form Viterbo. He has been the Associate Principal at Pulaski Community Middle School for three years after serving as a teacher in the West De Pere School District.

Replacing Klawiter at Pulaski Community Middle School as Associate Principal will be Bec Kane who currently is a Learning Support Teacher and Reading Teacher at Pulaski High School. She will receive a Mater's Degree in Educational Leadership from National Louis University and has a Bachelor's Degree in Broadfield Social Studies from St. Norbert. Kane is a native of Oconto Falls where she is a member of the Board of Education.

A new principal for Sunnyside Elementary School is still being sought.

According to Pulaski Community School District Superintendent of Schools Dr. Mel Lightner, "We are excited about the qualities that our new principals possess. They are child centered and will be able to develop positive relationships with parents, staff and students."

World War II Re-enactment and U.S.O. Swing Dance July 9 & 10

National Railroad Museum's annual summer event offers education for the entire family, and more this year

Green Bay, WI – Step back in time at the National Railroad Museum's fourth annual World War II Reenactment on July 9 – 10, 2011. Visitors will have the opportunity to explore WWII history through battles, encampments, lectures and other engaging events throughout the weekend. A special U.S.O.-style swing dance will cap the evening of Saturday, July 9, 2011 from 7:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m. inside the Lenfestey Center on Museum grounds.

The daytime reenactment will feature German and American encampments and two daily battles that are only accessible by the Museum's train. Patrons are encouraged to interact with the reenactors as they recreate scenarios from history throughout each day. Special appearances by Eleanor Roosevelt (played by Jessica Michna) will be held on Saturday and Sunday; WIXX's John Maino will speak about his newest book "The European Campaign" on Saturday, July 9th at 2:00 p.m. The Museum's educator, Bob Lettenberger, will speak about the use of trains in American wars on Sunday, July 10th. The Gen. Eisenhower command coaches will be open for guided tours throughout the weekend.

In 1941 the United Service Organization (U.S.O.) was established to meet the request of Franklin D. Roosevelt for private organizations to provide for the needs of on-leave U.S. armed forces on American soil and abroad. Six organizations met the President's call, forming the U.S.O. with other organizations, such as the Red Cross, providing a similar function as well. Over 3,000 U.S.O. clubs were in existence in 1944, often run by volunteers in small towns. Saturday, July 9th's U.S.O.-style Dance will highlight live music from Bay Area Big Band. Come and enjoy what a WWII solider might have experienced -- hometown food, dancing, a cash bar and U.S.O. girls and reenactors in WWII-era uniform. Funds from the special dance tickets will help fund the Museum's Children's Discovery Depot.

"World War II was a significant period in American history," stated Jacqueline Frank, museum executive director. "As more veterans are passing, it is important to keep alive their memory, and how this event influenced American life and culture then - as well as today. This event will allow patrons to immerse themselves in history and learn about the event in a really fun, meaningful way."

The Museum grounds will be open from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. both reenactment days. Reenactment activities will take place throughout both days. Admission, which includes all regular exhibits and all reenactment events, is $9.00 – Adults; $8.00 –Senior Citizens; and $6.50 – Children (ages 4 – 12).

The U.S.O. Dance will take place on Saturday, July 9, 2011. Doors open at 6:45 p.m. Admission is $25.00 in advance; $30.00 at the door; $15.00 for Museum members and veterans. Corporate tables and sponsorships are available. Contact Jacqueline Frank, executive director at (920) 437-7623 x-17 or Deanna Novak, director of sales and marketing at (920) 437-7623 x-12 for more information.

Founded in 1956, the Museum works to foster an understanding of railroading and its significance to American life. Visiting the National Railroad Museum offers you an opportunity to explore our railroad heritage. Sit in the cab of the Union Pacific Big Boy, the world's largest steam locomotive. View Gen. Eisenhower's World War II command train. Examine the future of railroading in the sleek 1955 General Motors Aerotrain.

A Crowning Achievement

By Denis Gullickson
Thunderhawk Times

Ululani Nunies was crowned Queen at the 2011 ONHS Prom on April 16, but, really, it was another in a long line of achievements that have distinguished her senior year and—in fact—all of her years as a student at ONHS.

In the process, Ulu has earned lots of fans, including many of her instructors and other staff members at the high school.

Here are just a few of the things ONHS staff members have to say about Ulu:

"Ululani is a pleasant young woman and an awesome student. She values her education and is respectful to her peers and staff. She also posses es leadership skills like no other student I have seen. She has been an asset to Oneida Nation High School and I know that she will have a successful life."—Social Studies Teacher Carol Johnson.

"Ulu represents the 110% student here at ONHS. She is culturally-active, academically sound, and represents herself, her family, and her community with class. It has been my pleasure to have her as a member of the T-Hawk Science Research team."—Science Teacher Becky Nutt.

Ululani Nunies

"Ulu showed great leadership on the basketball court. I was very impressed how she led by example, hard work, being vocal to encourage her teammates, and being dedicated to the team doing well. I see similar strengths in the classroom. She has set the achievement bar in trigonometry class high to the benefit of the entire class."—Math Teacher Mike Hanke.

"Ulu is one of our students that is most respectful to the staff, usually has a smile or a friendly comment to address you with. She has concerns about the students in our school and their behaviors. Ulu is a role model to the students also. I heard her tell some younger students when they were looking at the GPA list hanging, that she should have worked a lot harder in 9th and 10th grades so her GPA would be a lot higher now as a Senior. She is a great athlete and is in many sports. Ulu has been involved with the BIG APPLE and did an excellent job in her role. What I can also say Ululani is a great asset to our school and we are happy she is here."—High School Office Manager Carol Martin.

"Ulu has been a positive influence in our school since she transferred [here from Seymour High School]. She is well grounded, has a good sense of direction in her life, and sets a good example for others to follow."—Principal Bob Ganka.

Ulu is president of the ONHS student council. She is also an active member of the ONHS sports teams, including this year's very successful girl's basketball team. Her 2011 Science Fair project earned her national recognition. She is consistently on the ONHS Honor Roll.

Ulu is the daughter of Sterling and Monica Nunies and the granddaughter of the late Purcell and Angeline Powless.

Her future plans include attending college to major in Native American studies and becoming a teacher of Native American history.

She has participated in the Unity group and in the National Unity Conferences in Reno and San Diego among many other extra-curricular activities.

Being crowned Queen was a pretty special recognition for a pretty special young lady.

Biodiesel Project is Moving Along

By Jason Skenadore
Thunderhawk Times

This last week was a big one for out biodiesel project. On Wednesday, we ran the biodiesel we made though a generator and it worked. We even used our own biodiesel to make more biodiesel!

We'd like to try it in other diesel equipment in the near future. We are hoping to go far with this.

The workers are all from ONHS. Students and staff are working hard so they can make it to Washington, D.C. as winners of this national competition.

We are still taking samples of the biodiesel to make sure that it's good. We will have our samples analyzed at NWTC and Argonne National Labs in Illinois.

Some people that are supporting us came to see the biodiesel project in action.

This is a big thing for Becky Nutt, our science teacher, because we have been working on this for awhile and Becky has been working very hard herself. Her husband, Kirk, has also been helping a lot.

Becky said, "We'd like to thank Greg Matson from housing for his support, as well. We also need to thank Seven Generations Corp for the use of the Tower Foods building as a work space."

ONHS Track Team Running For It

By Thunderhawk Times staff

With two runners—Junior Anthony Cornelius and Freshman Denver Dean—the ONHS track team is small in numbers, but big in heart.

The two left the school for their first meet in Lena on Monday, May 2.

Denver was set to run in the 100 meters and Anthony in the 400 meters, high and low hurdles, and other events.

At the Lena meet, Denver took third in his event. Anthony said he "didn't want to talk about it." Knowing Anthony, that means that he intends to work hard at improving for the next meet.

Seed Ceremony begins

By Rachel Ninham
Thunderhawk Times

The way the Seed Ceremony starts is the people gather in the Longhouse. The Kanehelatuksla (The Thanksgiving Address) words will be said, and instructions on how to play the Kayʌtowanʌ (Peach Stone Game).

One man will be selected to collect seeds from the women. And one man will be selected to collect seeds from a man. One woman is selected to hold the beans. The same thing is done for the men. Seeds are matched up.

After the game of Kayʌtowanʌ is won (men to women), the speaker will announce the winner and give the introduction for Ohstowa?ko (the Great Feather Dance). Once the Ohstowa?ko is over and done with, the story of the Three Sisters is told. The Old Women's songs are next. And then is followed with The Bean Dance.

The final thing that is done is the closing and is followed with a feast.

MILWAUKEE (AP) ~ The U.S. Supreme Court has declined to hear the case of a Wisconsin judge who wants judicial candidates to be allowed to raise money on their own behalf.

The Monday decision keeps in place a lower court's ruling that forces candidates to raise money through committees to prevent conflicts of interest, real or perceived.

The Wisconsin Code of Judicial Conduct previously prevented Wisconsin judges from joining political parties, endorsing partisan candidates or soliciting campaign donations, either for themselves or for candidates for other offices.

Milwaukee County Circuit Court Judge John Siefert filed a lawsuit challenging those three rules on free-speech grounds. The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago ruled in his favor last year on letting judges join political parties but ruled against him on the other two issues.

The nation's high court said Monday it wouldn't hear arguments on those two issues.

Siefert said Tuesday that he wasn't entirely disappointed because he won on the issue he considers the most important.

"The key political right is the right to be part of a political party," he told The Associated Press. "I realize the other two issues were more minor. I can understand why a busy Supreme Court would decide not to take them up."

The lower court ruled that judges couldn't solicit money on their own because doing so carries "a greater potential for a quid pro quo and a greater appearance of a quid pro quo than a contribution given to the judge's campaign committee."

It also said the state had an obligation to regulate the behavior of judges who were speaking out in their professional capacities as a means to advance a political end.

Siefert's lawsuit named as a defendant James Alexander, the executive director of the Wisconsin Judicial Commission, which enforces the state's code of conduct. Alexander said he was pleased with the decision and glad the case was over.

"If at any time in history the need for impartiality and integrity has been evident in the state of Wisconsin it should be now," he said.

Judicial politics in Wisconsin have been on clear display in recent weeks. State Supreme Court Justice David Prosser survived a bitter challenge last month from assistant Attorney General JoAnne Kloppenburg. Prosser won by a margin of roughly 0.5 percent and Kloppenburg requested a recount, which is ongoing.

A government watchdog group said outside groups combined to spend $4.5 million in the two months leading up to their spring election.

Siefert said the figure showed how important it was for candidates to raise and spend their own money rather than let third parties hijack the races with high spending.

"If candidates are allowed to ask for campaign contributions directly, they'll have more control over their own message," he said.

Mike McCabe, of the Wisconsin Democracy Campaign, disagreed. He said the public is better served when judges are independent of political influences.

McCabe, whose group pushes for campaign-finance reform, said Siefert had correctly identified a significant problem but was suggesting the wrong way to solve it.

"I think ultimately the solution is to give candidates public financing so they don't have to engage in private fundraising to remain relevant," he said. "Otherwise they undermine their own impartiality and subject themselves to claims of conflict of interest every time a major donor appears in their courtroom."

National Railroad Museum marks Wisconsin Museums Week on May 21

The National Railroad Museum celebrates Wisconsin Museums Week as it welcomes the community with behind the scenes tours and free admission.

Ashwaubenon (Green Bay, Wis.) – Wisconsin Museums Week (May 14 – 22, 2011) highlights the importance of museums as they educate, entertain, inspire and acts as community gathering places.

As part of this week, the National Railroad Museum (www.nationalrrmuseum.org) will hold a special day to celebrate Museums and how their contribution to a higher quality of life for everyone in the community on Saturday, May 21, 2011.

Free admission and train rides will be offered throughout the day as well as four behind-the –scenes tours led by the Museum's curator. Tours will feature little seen areas of the Museum, including the restoration shop, archives and collections storage, and a chance to walk inside General Eisenhower's WWII command train.

Tours will take place on May 21, 2011 at:

- 9:00 a.m.
- 11:00 a.m.
- 1:00 p.m.
- 3:00 p.m.

As an organization based in supporting education, the Museum seeks to provide for an audience with a wide variety of needs such as autism spectrum disorder, English as a second language, learning and physical disabilities. "Museums are important to the quality of life in the community," commented Jacqueline Frank, National Railroad Museum executive director. "The National Railroad Museum strives to provide a place that everyone can enjoy."

The National Railroad Museum has extended a special invitation to the special needs facilities and community to discover the Museum's accessible resources and how it can contribute to their quality of life on May 21, 2011.

Founded in 1956, the National Railroad Museum is one of the oldest institutions of its kind in the U.S. View Gen. Eisenhower's World War II command train. Sit in the cab of the Union Pacific's Big Boy #4017 the largest steam locomotive. Examine the future of railroading in the sleek 1955 General Motors Aerotrain.

Supermarket of Veterans Benefits

TO: Oneida Nation Veterans and their families

The purpose of this letter is to invite you to participate in a Supermarket of Veterans Benefits to be held from 12:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. on Friday, June 3, 2011 and from 8:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. on Saturday, June 4, 2011, at the National Guard Armory in Green Bay, Wisconsin located at 800 N. Military Ave, Green Bay, WI 54303.

This event is part of a broader marketing campaign by the Wisconsin Department of Veterans Affairs to increase Wisconsin veterans' awareness of their eligibility for federal and state veteran's benefits programs.

Similar events around the state have attracted thousands of veterans and their family members. At these one-stop shop events, attendees received information and counseling on a variety of benefits and services to include VA health care, VA disability compensation and pension, veterans loans and grants, state veterans' homes, burial benefits, employment and job training, education, and social security among others.

Postal Employees Help Stamp Out Hunger

ONEIDA, WI — Every second Saturday in May letter carriers in more than 10,000 cities and towns across America deliver much more than mail when they walk and drive along their postal routes. They also collect the goodness and compassion of their postal customers who participate in the NALC Stamp Out Hunger National Food Drive – the largest one-day food drive in the nation and probably the world. Oneida carriers will be participating in this event.

Led by letter carriers represented by the National Association of Letter Carriers (AFL-CIO), with the help of rural letter carriers, other postal employees and numerous other volunteers, the drive has resulted in delivery of more than one billion pounds of donations to community food banks and pantries over the past 18 years.

On Saturday, May 14, carriers will collect non-perishable food donations left by mailboxes and in post offices and deliver them to local community food banks, pantries and shelters.

The U.S. Postal Service and Campbell Soup Company are major supporters of the drive. Campbell Soup also earmarked an additional 1 million pound canned food donation to the drive. Other supporters are Cox Target Media and its Valpak Direct Marketing Systems, the nationwide direct mail marketing firm, which promotes the drive on 40 million packets delivered to postal customers.

The drive also relies on the backing of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, the Feeding America food bank network; the United Way of America and its local United Ways, the AFL-CIO Community Services network, and countless local sponsors.

All citizens need do is to place the food next to their mailbox before their letter carrier delivers mail on Saturday, May 14. The carrier will do all the rest. The food is taken back to a postal station, sorted, and then delivered to various Brown County pantries. There it is available for needy families. Oneida Postmaster said, "With many men, women and children living at risk of hunger, please join me and many other residents of the Oneida Area by placing a non-perishable food donation next to your mailbox to help Stamp Out Hunger."

Some 35.5 million people face hunger every day in America, including 13 million children. This drive is one way people can help those right in their own city or town who need help.

The NALC food drive has received a number of accolades over the years, including two Presidential Certificates of Achievement.

Help the U.S. Postal Service Stamp Out Hunger!

A self-supporting government enterprise, the U.S. Postal Service is the only delivery service that reaches every address in the nation, 150 million residences, businesses and Post Office Boxes. The Postal Service receives no tax dollars. With 36,000 retail locations and the most frequently visited website in the federal government, the Postal Service relies on the sale of postage, products and services to pay for operating expenses. Named the Most Trusted Government Agency five consecutive years and the sixth Most Trusted Business in the nation by the Ponemon Institute, the Postal Service has annual revenue of more than $68 billion and delivers nearly half the world's mail.

Workshops Offered to Prepare for a Career in the Meat Industry

MADISON – The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection (DATCP) encourages those interested in entering the meat industry to attend one of three planned workshops. Preparing for a Career in the Meat Industry workshops will be held across Wisconsin in June.

Presenters for all three workshops will be: Livestock and Meat Specialist Jeff Swenson, DATCP; Dr. Jeff Sindelar, UW-Madison; and Dr. Kurt Vogel, UW-River Falls. Topics for the workshops include, but are not limited to: food safety, understanding meat quality, meat cookery, and resume development.

"This workshop is a unique opportunity to learn basic information on meat production and job skills from experts in the field," said Swenson. "By attending this workshop, individuals will be prepared to compete competitively for positions and contribute to our state's meat industry."

Each workshop will be held from 8:45 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Dates and locations are:

- Tuesday, June 7, 2011: UW-Madison: Animal Science Building, 1675 Observatory Drive, Madison
- Thursday, June 9, 2011: UW-Extension: Eau Claire County, 227 First Street West, Altoona
- Friday, June 10, 2011: UW-Green Bay, 2420 Nicolet Drive, Green Bay

"The Wisconsin meat industry has a $12.3 billion economic impact on our state and provides 88,000 jobs," explained Swenson. "There is currently an increased demand for artisan products produced locally creating many job opportunities in the meat industry."

Space is limited. To register, contact Jeff Swenson at 608-224-5082 or jeff.swenson@wisconsin.gov. Cost of registration is being covered by a grant from the Wisconsin Agricultural Education & Workforce Development Council. The mission of the Council is to attract, develop, and retain the premium workforce required to Grow Wisconsin's agricultural industry, food, and natural resource systems.

Skenandore Awarded Environmental Honor

Ted Skenandore holds the 2011 Environmental Hero Award, which he received because of his efforts as Tsyunhehkwa Agricultural Supervisor.

By Travis Cottrell
Kalihwisaks

On Saturday, April 30th the Helfenstein Soup Council presented Ted Skenandore, Tsyunhehkwa Agricultural Supervisor, with the 2011 Environmental Hero Award.

Skenandore was given the award for the work that he does to preserve Oneida culture by helping to provide a sustainable food system for his people and also for his talents and skills as an artist, musician, and storyteller. He and the team of people that work at Tsyunhehkwa farm are growing healthy food while teaching and preserving culture, their seeds, and their heritage for future generations of their community.

Although Skenandore is thrilled and honored that his efforts were recognized and appreciate he reiterates that the work that has been is only possible because of a team effort. "This isn't really about me because it takes teamwork to make all of this happen. Whether it's the agricultural area here at Tsyunhehkwa or with my bands. It all takes a team of people to do," says Skenandore.

The Helfenstein Soup Council is a local non-profit organization committed to promoting sustainable living. Mailbox Vandalism isn't a joke

Help protect your neighborhood from this crime

ONEIDA, WI — Taking a bat to a mailbox, hitting it with a brick, or setting off a firecracker or pipe bomb inside may seem like fun to some rambunctious teens. However, it's not a rite of passage - it's a criminal act that hurts our neighbors and our community.

"Mailbox vandalism increases during the summer months, and we need to encourage everyone to be aware of any misconduct that may occur in their neighborhoods", said Oneida Postmaster Cheryl Koenig. Mailboxes are protected by federal law, and crimes against them and the mail they contain are considered a federal offense. Violators can be fined up to $250,000 or imprisoned for up to three years for each act of vandalism.

Damaged mailboxes have to be replaced, costing the owner time, money and inconvenience. Meanwhile, the mail cannot be delivered. Many people depend on receiving monthly checks and other financial support through the mail, so doing without their mail negatively affects their lives. And some damaged mail cannot be replaced – family photos, letters from sons and daughters serving in the military overseas, and other priceless keepsakes that mean so much to the recipient.

Mailbox vandalism affects all of us. We don't feel as secure in our neighborhoods and communities. Property values can drop as a result of vandalism and other crimes. And prospective new residents may think twice about moving here knowing that our young people have such callous disregard for the property of others.

"If you have teenagers at home, talk with them about the downside of damaging mailboxes, and vandalism in general," added Koenig. "Remind them of the penalties, the impact on the victims, and that they can get hurt or killed in the process. The Postal Service doesn't take these crimes lightly because of the severity of the potential consequences."

If you discover someone tampering with your or your neighbor's mailbox, get a description of the person(s), a description and license plate number of any vehicle, then immediately report this information to the police.

SD school ends contracts with all employees

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) ~ All employees at the Crazy Horse School in Wanblee have been notified they will be out of a job at the end of the school year.

The school board recently decided not to renew contracts with the more than 90 employees, from the superintendent to bus drivers. The entire staff will have to re-apply for their jobs on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota.

School board chairman John Haas tells the Rapid City Journal that the school board's decision does not target any person or group. He says the board is trying to create a school that meets students' needs by teaching reading, writing and math.

The school has struggled for years to meet the requirements of the federal school improvement law known as No Child Left Behind.

Arizona court rules for tribe on annexation issue

PHOENIX (AP) ~ A state appeals court has overturned the city of Glendale's annexation of land that includes part of the site of a casino resort planned in the Phoenix area by a southern Arizona Indian tribe, the Tohono O'odham Nation.

A trial judge had ruled in favor of Glendale, upholding the city's position that the annexation of the property in 2001 automatically took effect 30 days after it was approved.

But a Court of Appeals panel ruled that the annexation never became official because a challenge was filed against it and then the city itself repealed the annexation before the case went to court.

The annexation question matters because tribal casinos are now allowed inside incorporated municipalities.

Native Hawaiian self-government bill passed

HONOLULU (AP) ~ Legislation that starts the process for Native Hawaiians to form their own government is heading to Gov. Neil Abercrombie for his approval.

The Hawaii House and Senate voted Tuesday to approve the bill, which recognizes Native Hawaiians as the indigenous people of the state.

The measure is meant to support a related proposal pending in Congress that would protect Native Hawaiian programs and allow them to create a self-governing entity.

Native Hawaiians are the last remaining indigenous group in the United States who haven't been allowed to establish their own government, a right already extended to many Alaska Natives and Native American tribes.

The bill calls for a five-member commission responsible for creating a roll of qualified Native Hawaiians interested in participating in their government.

Committee sends voter ID bill to Wis. Assembly

MADISON, Wis. (AP) _ Voters will be required to show a photo ID at the polls under a bill approved by an Assembly committee Tuesday despite concerns from Democrats and the nonpartisan board that monitors Wisconsin elections that the measure was moving too quickly.

The proposal, which has the backing of Gov. Scott Walker, is on course to pass the full Legislature next week.

Democrats had successfully blocked the photo ID requirement for years, arguing that it would disenfranchise voters, especially the elderly, poor and students. But it got new life this year with Republicans in control of the Legislature. They say the photo requirement and other changes are reasonable ways to improve voter confidence and reduce the risk of fraud.

"What we're trying to do is make the system better," said Rep. Gary Tauchen, R-Bonduel, chairman of the Assembly's committee on election and campaign reform.

The head of the nonpartisan Government Accountability Board, which oversees Wisconsin elections, sent the committee members a letter urging them to make a number of changes and complaining that there had not been enough time to carefully evaluate the latest version, which was just made public late Friday.

GAB head Kevin Kennedy urged the committee to seek additional input from the public and local election officials before moving ahead.

While Republicans on the committee, including bill sponsor Rep. Jeff Stone, R-Greendale, said they were open to changes, the bill remained on course to be voted on in a week. It passed Tuesday on a partisan 5-3 vote.

GOP proposal would cap interest on payday loans

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Interest rates on payday loans would be capped at 36 percent under a proposal Republicans are circulating in the Wisconsin Legislature.

New regulations on the payday lending industry took effect in December, but the previous Legislature controlled by Democrats rejected a cap on interest. Consumer advocates who supported tighter regulations on the industry had pushed for the interest rate cap, saying it was needed to prevent borrowers from getting socked with interest as high as 500 percent or more.

The new law limits the size of the loans and bars auto title loans.

Rep. Evan Wynn of Whitewater and Sen. Glenn Grothman of West Bend are proposing the interest rate cap. They are seeking co-sponsors of the proposal until May 12.

Senate official objects to bin Laden-Geronimo link

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) ~ The staff director for the Senate Indian Affairs Committee is objecting to the U.S. military's use of the code name "Geronimo" for Osama Bin Laden during the raid that killed the al-Qaida leader.

Geronimo was an Apache Indian leader in the 19th century who spent many years fighting the Mexican and U.S. armies until his capture in 1886.

The staff director and chief counsel for the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, Loretta Tuell, says it is inappropriate to link whom she calls "one of the greatest Native American heroes" with one of the most hated enemies of the United States.

Tuell is a member of the Nez Perce tribe and grew on the tribe's reservation in Idaho. The Indian Affairs panel has scheduled a hearing Thursday on racial stereotypes of native people.

Student project wins national award

By Nate Wisneski

Students at the Oneida Nation High School not only built a bio-diesel project but also a renewable energy dynasty.

For the second straight year the school has won the Indian Education Renewable Energy Challenge with the Argonne National Laboratory.

The project takes used cooking grease and through heating and chemical intervention it is transformed into usable bio-diesel fuel.

The two-phase contest had the school advancing after its initial design plans were awarded one of the five $3500 prizes to fund the construction of their project. They were notified of their win on Wednesday, May 18.

"We submitted our plans and they picked five colleges and five high schools throughout the country," said Dave Santee, the school's co-teacher in science classes. "We were one of the five they picked and we actually came in under budget," he proudly added.

Oneida Nation High School students and staff stand in front of their bio-diesel project that took first place at the 2011 Indian Education Renewable Energy Challenge.

The eight-person group spent about 20 hours over three weeks building and developing the project before it was submitted.

"It did feel good to get out of the classroom and come here to work on it," said senior Brandon White.

"We just found out and I am really excited," added senior Danny McKinney.

Students working on the project included Devan Little, Larissa Lucus, Charles Cook, Alexi Silva, Danny McKinney, Bradley Grandquist, Jade Doxtator, and Brandon White.

The group wins a trip to Chicago at accept their award and $5000 cash.

"The whole purpose of this is to get kids thinking about renewable energy," said Santee. "That's what the tribes are doing. The government is really working on renewable energy on reservations. The kids are going to be the ones implementing a lot of these programs."

The contest is co-sponsored with the Bureau of Indian Education, the Indian Affairs Office of Indian Energy and Economic Development and the U.S. Department of Energy's Argonne National Laboratory. The focus of the contest was to promote renewable energy development for Indian Country among students and teachers at the high school and college level.

Video crew searches for ghosts at Norbert Hill Center

By Nate Wisneski
Kalihwisaks

Almost every person in the Oneida community has or heard of a paranormal experience at the Norbert Hill Center. A television show set out to capture such an experience.

"Ghost Venture Crew" is a ghost hunting show lead by three female investigators. They decided to investigate the halls of the Norbert Hill Center after reading about paranormal encounters online. They are in talks with a national cable channel for a fall premiere and currently air on a local channel in Chicago.

According to Zondra Mae, the shows Executive Producer and Lead Investigator, evidence of paranormal activity was not hard to come by as it mounts with each tape reviewed.

"I haven't seen this kind of evidence before, there is so much going on at the Norbert Hill Center," said Mae. "I can't believe the information we got from here. I am blown away."

The most telling evidence is video captured by a hand held camera in the current Oneida Business Committee conference room. It clearly shows a shadow figure walking in the back of the room.

Static cameras placed throughout the building have hundreds of orbs along with irregular lights and other shadows.

Mae welcomes people who question the authenticity of her findings to review the footage themselves.

"If it was a human the hair and skin would glow on the night vision," she said. "Analyze (the video), if you edit some-

Head of Episcopal Church of the US visiting Oneida

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

Members of Holy Apostles Church are getting ready for a visit from the Most Rev. Dr. Katharine Jefferts Schori, Presiding Bishop of The Episcopal Church on Sunday, June 5. Holy Apostles Vestry member Jenny Webster stated the congregation is excited about the event.

"It's quite an honor to be chosen," said Webster. "We're very excited and we're very humbled that she chose our church."

Bishop Jefferts Schori will preach at the 10:00am service at the Church of the Holy Apostles, 2937 Freedom Road, Oneida. The congregation is the oldest Indian mission of the Episcopal Church with roots dating to 1702 when Anglican missionaries arrived in central New York. The Episcopal Church played a major role in the move of the Oneida Indians from New York to Wisconsin in the 1820's. Its membership remains primarily Oneida.

Presiding Bishop Katharine Jefferts Schori

According to Webster, the congregation is creating raised beadwork purses and rosaries in honor of the visit.

"We're going to give … the Presiding Bishop a gift of … an Oneida cornhusk doll, and then also a beaded picture frame with the raised beadwork," said Webster. The frame will have a picture of Holy Apostles as well as the church beaded on the frame.

Presiding Bishop Jefferts Schori is chief pastor to the Episcopal Church's 2.4 million members in 16 countries and visits all 110 dioceses over the course of a nine year term.

During the visit the Presiding Bishop will experience the breadth of the diocese and gather clergy and lay leaders for conversation about the Church.

"Everyone's invited to come to church that day. And we're also sending out invites to the other churches in Oneida, and also to the Business Committee," said Webster, who stated they expect around 300 people to attend the visit.

Webster said the church plans to plant a white pine in honor of the Presiding Bishop's visit and will ask her to bless it.

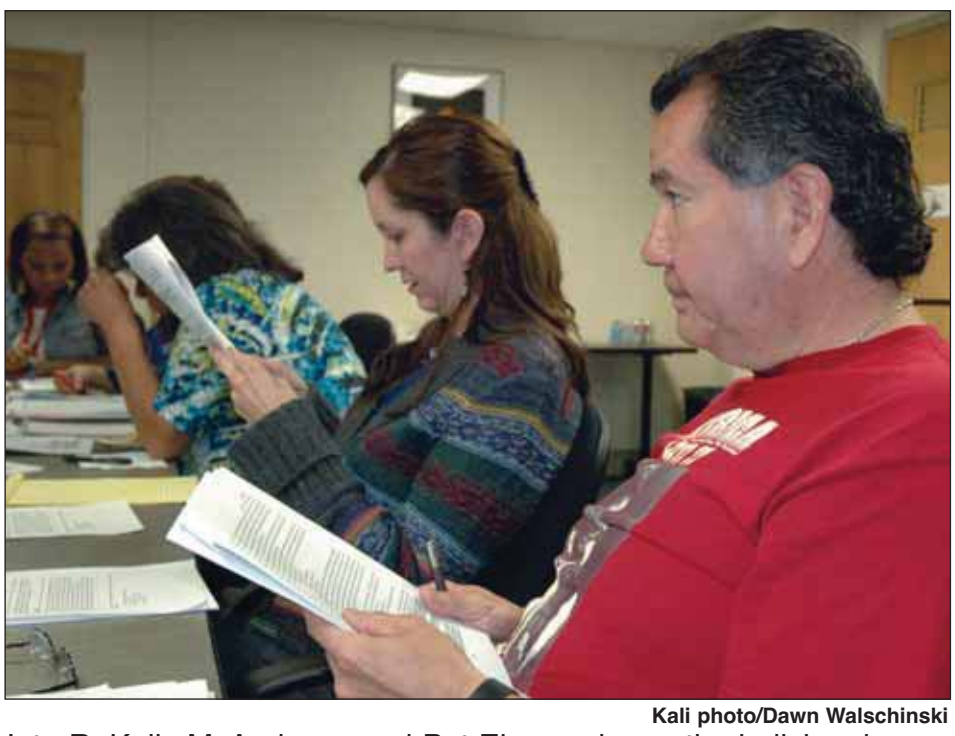
Judiciary Work Group building for future

By Dawn Walschinski
Kalihwisaks

About a dozen Oneida citizens gathered for the Thursday May 12 Judiciary Working Group held in the Norbert Hill Center. Three Oneida Business Committee (OBC) members, members of the Oneida Appeals Commission, and interested community members discussed the potential structure of the proposed Oneida Judicial System and how it will function as directed by a February 5 General Tribal Council (GTC) meeting. On that night the group discussed ethical codes and disciplinary actions. Councilwoman Trish King read from the proposed law.



"Judges shall be subject to the Oneida Removal Law, and be removed from office in accordance with the provisions set out therein," said King.

"I like that," commented Appeals Commissioner Winnifred Thomas.

The meetings have been occurring every Thursday night throughout March, April and May average between 12 to 15 attendees. Patrick Elm said he attends the work group to give back to Oneida.

"I feel that the tribe has done a great deal for me and my family," said Elm. "It will be a historical thing also. My family and the next generations of my family can look back and say 'hey, my grandfather sat on that.'"

Kelly McAndrews credited her love of law for participating in the work groups.

"I'm very passionate about the judiciary and all things legal," said McAndrews. "I'm very enthused about the work the group has done, it's been just an incredible experience meeting people I haven't met before coming together cohesively and coming to … a meeting of the minds in terms of making some recommendations," said McAndrews.

Daniel Guzman-King emphasized sovereignty in creating the new judiciary.

"I think this is a great thing for the Oneida Nation to have our own judicial court system," he said.

Councilwoman King has been facilitating the meetings and stated she is pleased with the effort community members put forth.

"I'm grateful for the commitment that the people put in. I'm just really excited about it, and I … really feel this will take us to the next step," she said.

The work group decided to separate the chief justices from trial judges.

"What we realized when we talked about the judges is that they have to be high end executives. They have to know not just tribal law, they need to know the law in general because of the expanding jurisdiction," said McAndrews.

The group agreed that the chief justices would require law degrees. The three participants noted that qualifications for trial judges engendered the most discussion.

"We spent four meetings on that alone," said Elm.

"What was clear on February 5 in reviewing all of the notes is that the GTC favored education, the question was how much," said McAndrews.

The work group is proposing a requirement of a four-year degree.

The three participants each stated they've gained knowledge from taking part in the judiciary work group.

"I learned a lot from listening to others, from hearing the other points of view," said Guzman-King.

"I'm just incredibly thankful to have this experience. I think this has been wonderful," said McAndrews. "My hope is that there is a judiciary. I hope that people understand the importance of it, that they understand that it impacts what sovereignty is supposed to mean."
